TO TEST POLICE MOTORS

THE BOARD TO MAKE A PRELIMINARY MOVE FOR A CYCLE SQUAD TO-DAY.

E. H. Jones of the Commissioners Will Watch the Pop-Pops Chase a Speedy Motorist and Pick Out the Fastest for Patrolmen's Use.

At the meeting of the police board to be held next Wednesday, Elliott H. Jones, a member, will recommend the purchase of four, possibly five, machines. Meanwhile, beginning to-day, ten different makes of motor cycles are to be given practical tests to determine which make is best suited for the purposes the board has in mind.

WITH A MOTOR CAR AS A PACER.

Each machine will be sent in pursuit of a Corbin motor car, driven by Herman Peltzer, the owner of the car. Mr. Peltzer was talking to Mr. Jones the other day, and when motor cycles were mentioned he boasted that in his car he could lose any motor cycle made. Mr. Jones promptly dared him to try, and thus the police department derives benefit without expense. The tests are to be made under the direct supervision of H. T. McMath, chief engineer of the Scarritt building, who is a motor cyclist. He will report each trial to Mr. Jones, who will choose for police use the machine that makes the best record.

TO CATCH THE FLEET MOTORIST.

The police board began to talk about a motor cycle squad nearly a year ago after there had been a series of accidents resulting from careless motoring. After a great deal of discussion the whole matter was placed in Mr. Jones's hands with the understanding that whatever recommendations he made would be adopted. Mr. Jones is a motorist and members of the Automobile club asked him to sidetrack the scheme because it appeared to be a reflection on the owners of motor cars, this setting of a squad of policemen to watch them.

FOR EMERGENCY CALLS, TOO.

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Jones said last night, "there are many useful purposes to which a motor cycle may be put in the police department besides catching motorists. They are especially handy in making quick runs in emergency cases."

Taking the records of police court as a criterion, it is apparent that comparatively few owners of motor cars ever are arrested for reckless driving. The fault is usually that of irresponsible chauffeurs or mechanics employed in garages.

L. M. JONES TO WASHINGTON.

The President Invited Him to the National Resources Conference.

Lawrence M. Jones, president of the Missouri Valley River Improvement association, will leave to-night for Washington to attend President Roosevelt's conference on the conservation of the national natural resources and the improvement of waterways. Mr. Jones received a personal invitation from the President to attend the conference, which will be held in the White house Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. Governors of many states, members of Congress and men prominently identified with the movement will attend the conference.

The Inland Waterway commission on its trip down the Mississippi river to Memphis suggested the calling of such a conference to the President to obtain a concrete expression of opinion on the movement to protect the natural resources from reckless spoliation and to conserve them for the benefit of coming generations.

Captain E. H. Schulz, engineer in charge of the Missouri river, will also attend the conference. He will leave tomorrow, having been ordered to Washington in connection with his recent report on the project for the improvement of the Missouri river.

BRADY GAVE BOND FOR $2,500.

Marie Moore Had No Friends in the Federal Court and Returned to Jail.

J. E. Brady, the organizer of the defunct Merchants' Refrigerating company, was arraigned in the federal court yesterday afternoon on the charge of using the mail to defraud in issuing fictitious warehouse receipts. He pleaded not guilty and gave bond for $2,500. The bondsmen are H. R. Ennis and E. L. Morse.

"I will make Mr. Brady's bond light," Judge Pollock said, "because he already is under a $19,000 bond in the criminal court."

H. C. Frick, president of the National Railway Training association, indicted for using the mail to defraud, pleaded not guilty. He gave bond for $2,500. Marie Moore, indicted for sending an improper letter to a woman friend, pleaded not guilty. She could not give bond and was taken back to jail. A postoffice inspector arrested her Thursday.

The others indicted yesterday have not been arraigned.

A SALE AT FIFTEENTH AND M'GEE

J. S. Lillis Pays $65,000 for the Northeast Corner.

The property at the northeast corner of Fifteenth and McGee streets was sold yesterday afternoon by Charles H. Kessler, administrator for the Muehlebach estate, to J. S. Lillis, president of the Western Exchange bank. The property has a frontage of 132 feet on Fifteenth street and ninety-nine feet on McGee street. It was purchased as an investment and although occupied by small buildings at present, will be improved if necessary. The price paid for the property was $65,000. J. F. Houlehan represented both parties in the transaction.

A BALL MASK WAS DEFECTIVE.

David Allen, 13 Years Old, Was Injured When a Ball Hit the Protector.

David Allen, 13 years old, of 618 Washington avenue, Kansas City, Kas., was the catcher in an amateur baseball game near his home yesterday afternoon. He wore a mask, the wires of which were loose. A pitched ball struck the mask and one of the wires was driven into Allen's forehead. He was attended by E. R. Tenney, a police surgeon, and taken to his home. His condition is not dangerous.

FOR THE COMMON GOOD.

Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend.—I Cor. 8:13.

This text from St. Paul, the great Apostle to the Gentiles, summarizes the right and wholesome doctrine of personal sacrifice for the common good. In line with this self-same principle is the declaration in the recent statement of Police Commissioner Jones in regard to the question of the sale of beer in Electric park, to the effect that "No manly man will make serious complaint if he does have to give up a certain amount of license or liberty in order to give protection to young women."

The issue involved in the beer controversy in relation to amusement parks affords an illuminating example of the moral responsibility of the individual to society as a whole. It sets forth in a clear and pertinent light the debt which those who are strong and supposedly secure owe to the weak and to those who are in touch with danger. There are in life many privileges and forms of indulgence offering no peril to one class of individuals, which, nevertheless, are rife with harm and ruin to others. It therefore becomes the province and the rightful purpose of the law to demand concessions to popular security which may not be in line with the inclinations or desires of all persons affected by them. The greatest good for the greatest number is, professedly, the genius of our government. Where this tenet is violated there is bound to be disorder and a serious disturbance of social conditions.

In the specific case of the indulgence in beer in amusement parks, it has been definitely demonstrated that that practice is demoralizing particularly to women, and in numerous instances to men, notably to those who are young and without the safeguard of self-discipline. This positive knowledge, acquired through sorrowful experience, would surely seem to make it well worth while for manly men to restrain what to them may be a harmless appetite, for the sake of others to whom such license would mean the gravest evils.

Even in Kansas City, where the conditions, broadly speaking, contribute to the peace and security of the people and to a high average of moral sense and enlightment, there is a considerable number of young women striving for livelihoods who are without the sheltering influences of homes and who are thus subjected to strong temptations to err. To this class of persons the Police Commissioners who withheld from the concessionaire seeking a license to sell beer in Electric park that privilege, felt that they owed the duty of protection, and the help which a strict regulation of any traffic essentially hurtful in its nature affords to those who are not well fortified against agencies and devices that may lead to destruction.

The line of action taken by the commissioners in this case was prompted, as everybody ought to know, by their regard and their solicitude for the common good. That is the motive which should animate all faithful servants of the people. It is the motive by which all womanly women and manly men ought to guide and fashion their lives. It is the doctrine that is causing the public to curtail the power for mischief inherent in the liquor traffic, and it calls for the support and encouragement of all persons of the sort of fiber that is equal to such self-denial as may be required for the benefit and the safety of those whom indulgence overthrows and destroys.

HERE'S A TINY BABY GIRL.

The Weight of a Child Born Wednesday to Mrs. Alonzo Bell Is 1½ Pounds.

A baby girl that weighed one and one-half pounds arrived Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Mary Bell of 2435 Michigan avenue, the wife of Alonzo Bell, a car barn employee of the Metropolitan Street Railway company. The baby now weighs two pounds, and is ten inches long, and is healthy. Dr. Thomas T. Sawyer says the child is the smallest one he has seen, that lived. Mrs. Bell weighs 170 pounds and Mr. Bell weighs 160 pounds.

A BIG INCREASE IN BUILDING.

Kansas City Far Outranks Other Cities of Its Class in New Construction.

Kansas City was fifth among eleven of the larger cities in the country reporting increases in building for April. The increase was 47 per cent, and the value of buildings $1,069,050. Of the whole number of cities reporting there was a decrease of 25 per cent. Kansas City is far ahead of any other city in its class in the number and value of the new buildings.

THE TRADE WINNERS HOME

NOTHING BUT PROSPERITY TO BE SEEN IN KANSAS, THEY REPORT.

It Was the Biggest Trip in the History of the Commercial Club—A Prosperity Association Organized at Abilene—A Reception at Fort Riley.

The biggest and most successful trade extension trip in the history of the Commercial club ended last night at 10:30 o'clock, promptly on scheduled time. The largest previous excursion had eighty trade winners. The trip ending last night had 103 heads of wholesale and retail firms, representing fifty lines of business. The trade makers left Kansas City Sunday night, visited 103 towns and traveled 1,327 miles, going as far west as Colby, fifty miles from the Colorado state line. A car load of souvenirs was distributed.

W. L. Day, assistant secretary and manager of the Parlin & Orendorff Implement company, was the first man off the train. Day was weary and travel stained. He carried a burden of baggage, including a half-bushel or so of souvenirs. His coat was covered with badges and medals. A gayly painted paper butterfly fluttered on one shoulder and there were red and green feathers in his hat. He had a red and white umbrella. The other members of the big trade trip had the same appearance. All were tired, but happy. They had spent six days preaching prosperity and receiving object lessons upon the unparalleled material development of the territory traveled and felt repaid.

FOUND PROSPERITY THERE.

Leon Smith, chairman of the trade extension trip committee, said: "These trade trips have not only advertised us in the territory traversed, but they have given Kansas City and the Commercial club wide publicity throughout the whole land. In addition to our usual purpose to visit our trade, we this year desired to do missionary work in removing any doubt that existed in the minds of our customers as to the fact that we have fully recovered from any effect of the late financial stress. We found the country prosperous and business good."

H. B. Topping, president of the club, said: "There is no indication in the territory through which we have traveled of the existence of any adverse after effect of the financial panic. We have traversed one of the most fertile and prosperous parts of the state. We found great changes in every county and town. The farmers as a whole have now attained a state of comfort, even of affluence and wealth, actually not dreamed of by except the most enthusiastic fifteen years ago. It astonished every member of the trade trip the number of swift and luxurious motor cars in use in the territory over which we traveled this week."

"It was the best trip we ever had," E. M. Clendening, secretary of the Commercial club, said.

SAW A REVIEW AT FORT RILEY.

The last day of the trip was an eventful one. The first town visited was Abilene. J. B. Case, president of the Trans-Mississippi congress, headed the delegation to welcome the trade winners. One mile east of Abilene the special train was stopped and the business men assembled on the ground, where a branch of the National Prosperity league started at St. Louis last week was organized. The officers of the Commercial club were made the officers of the new organization.

The reception given the Kansas City men at Fort Riley was one of the notable events of the trip. Brigadier General John T. Kerr, who took command of the post last week, headed the delegation of welcoming army officers. A squadron of the Seventh cavalry, headed by a mounted band, gave a review. Then the party went to the big riding hall, where a number of officers gave an exhibition of fancy and hurdle riding.

Two official presentations were made, one a handsome clock to C. L. Stone, passenger traffic manager of the Missouri Pacific, and a gold thermometer to Dr. H. F. Kuhn. Both presentations were made by the Commercial club. E. M. Clendening, secretary, made the presentations.

A. L. DAVIS NOT INDICTED.

Through an error in The Star yesterday afternoon the name of A. L. Davis was included in the list of officers of the Interstate Fiscal Agency company who were indicted by the federal grand jury. Mr. Davis sold to the Interstate Fiscal Agency company his contract with the Kansas City Life Insurance company for Oklahoma, but he was not an officer in the agency company and was not implicated in any of the charges of fraud against the members of the company.

SUICIDE NOT INTENDED, HE SAYS

A CRAWDAD VENDER INJURED.

After a Collision With Another Man Lee Jackson Was "Busted" Over the Eye.

"Wasn't doin' a thing—ceptin' sell crawdads," Lee Jackson, a negro, 22 years old, said at the emergency hospital last night. He had a long cut over his right eye. "I was walkin' down the street when I bumped into a man. Then he busted me. That's all."

Dr. J. Park Neal did some sewing and Jackson left.

An Accident Prevented the Establishment of a New Record, It Is Said.

New York, May 9.—A broken propeller blade, probably snapped off by some floating spar, brought the giant Cunard line steamship Mauretania twenty-four hours late to the port to-day, and, according to her officers, prevented the turbiner from hanging up a new record for trans-Atlantic voyages.

The Mauretania was out to make a record, and when the accident hapened she was making twenty-six knots. Captain Pritchard said to-day that, had it not been for the mishap, she would have reached a speed of twenty-seven knots an hour by daylight on the morning of the second day out from Queenstown.

Notwithstanding the accident, she arrived to-day, having made an average of 22.89 knots from where the mishap took place to this port.

Pasadena, Cal., May 9.—Montgomery Ward, the Chicago merchant, is suffering from neuritis in the left arm, and this malady is affecting his general health to a greater or less degree, although he is able to get out every day. He took dinner to-night in the dining room at the Hotel Maryland with the other guests. Since alarming reports of Mr. Ward's condition have been current in Chicago, Mr. Ward's home city, a call was made upon the millionaire.

"I have some lameness in one of my arms, due to a touch of neuritis," said Mr. Ward, "but I am able to get out all day, and was down to dinner to-night. So, although, of course, I don't feel very well, I guess there isn't much the matter with me."

J. B. SHANNON FOR CONGRESS?

Speeches by the Citizen in the Country Excite the Politicians.

"Citizen" J. B. Shannon is making a campaign in rural Jackson county. He spoke last night at a meeting in Lee's Summit. It was the second of a series of speeches he has begun in the smaller towns of Jackson county.

With no campaign on, Shannon's holding of political meetings has caused some speculation. There is a suspicion among his friends that he is ambitious to run for Congress. It was only two years ago that Shannon found that he was something of a spellbinder himself and could "say a speech," as he calls it, and hold an audience as well as any of the orators. Since then he has not overlooked any good opportunities to make speeches even when he had to neglect his former practice of looking after political details.

OPPOSE AN ANNEXATION PLAN.

Residents West of Kansas City, Kas., Organize Against It.

One hundred residents of the additions west of Kansas City, Kas., which the council purposes to annex to the city, held a meeting in the schoolhouse in District No. 7, north of Quindaro boulevard, last night to protest against the annexation plan. About $100 was subscribed to pay an attorney to secure an injunction, should the council make an effort to annex the territory. William Morrow, councilman from the Third ward of Kansas City, Kas., addressed the meeting and told of the benefits that would result from annexation. Residents of the district made speeches opposing the proposition. Several property owners said they did not wish to bear the extra burden of taxes that would result from becoming a part of the city.

NEW BUILDING LAW IN EFFECT.

Better Sanitation and Greater Fire Protection Provided by the New Code.

The new code of building ordinances went into effect yesterday. John T. Neil, the new superintendent of buildings, has ordered 5,000 copies printed in pamphlet form. The code was prepared by a special commission, created by the last council, and was passed by the council two months ago. The general effect is to provide for buildings on more substantial lines, with better sanitation and greater safeguards against fire. One feature is the provision for a board of appeals to hear protests that may be made against any rulings by the superintendent of buildings. This board has not been appointed. One man mentioned for the place is Henry F. Hoit, who was a member of the special commission that revised the building laws.

NEWSPAPER MAN A SUICIDE.

Hot Springs, Ark., May 9.—Charles Matthias, a journalist of note, for a number of years editorial writer on the Chicago Chronicle and recently on the staff of the Chicago American, committed suicide at a local hotel to-day. Standing before a mirror he shot himself through the head. His wife, who had temporarily left the room, found him upon her return.

Cleveland Continues to Improve.

Lakewood, N. J., May 9.—Continued improvement is reported in the condition of ex-President Cleveland, and his progress toward recovery is entirely satisfactory, according to a statement issued to-night from the patient's suite. As compared to his condition a week ago, Mrs. Cleveland said that Mr. Cleveland is gaining steadily from day to day and is apparently better than he was last week.

To Transfer Insane Patients.

Norman, Ok., May 9.—The transfer of the state patients from the asylum for insane persons at this place to the Fort Supply asylum will be made May 19. There are now 678 patients in the institution and of this number about 300 will be taken to Fort Supply.

Kansan Injured by a Train.

Kinsley, Kas., May 9.—John Barnett of Hyattsville, Kas., fell under a moving freight train here to-day and suffered injuries to both feet. One will be amputated at the ankle and the toes will come off of the other. He will be sent to a hospital at Great Bend.

TO QUIT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

A CONCERTED MOVEMENT PLANNED BY HALF A HUNDRED RECTORS.

The Deserters Will Allign Themselves With the Catholic Church—The "Open Pulpit" Is the Explanation for the Change in Faith.

Philadelphia, May 9.—Fifty Episcopalian clergymen in different cities have agreed upon a certain day upon which they will renounce Episcopacy as a preparatory step towards embracing the faith of Rome ,according to the Rev. Alvah H. Doran, formerly an Episcopalian minister of this city. Ten of these ministers have charges in Philadelphia, seven in New York, eight in Chicago and six in Fon du Lac, Wis. The others are scattered throughout the United States.

the wholesale defection to the Catholic church, according to Dr. Doran, is due primarily to the "open pulpit' which is repudiated by high churchman.

Father Doran is connected with the Church of the Epiphany, Eleventh and Jackson streets. Previous to his conversion to the Catholic faith, about eight years ago, he was a minister of the Episcopal church. He was one time connected with St. Clement's church.

WORKING TO DISAFFECT OTHERS.

It is also declared that a strong propaganda in favor of Catholicism is being conducted by the Companions of the Holy Savior, an Episcopal order, to which all the local Episcopalians who have renounced their faith belong. It is said that there is a perfect understanding among the clergy allied in this order and that they have been working in conjunction with Catholic authorities for several years. Dr. Doran is the authority for the statement that on a definite date, within a month, the desertion of a half a hundred Episcopalians will occur.

Dr. Doran refuses to make any names public, on the grounds of being premature. As a result of the adoption of the "open pulpit" canon by the general conference, the Rev. Dr. William McGarvey, rector of St. Elizabeth's church, resigned his pulpit last Sunday, carrying with him three assistant priests, the Rev. N. L. Cowl, the Rev. W. L. Hayward and the Rev. William H. McClellan. The senior warden also resigned.

Announcement has also been made of the resignation of two more clergymen widely known in this city, where they have served in important parishes. They are the Rev. Albert S. Cooper, for some years a missionary in China, and the Rev. Edgar A. Cowan, ex-curate of St. Mark's in this city. The Rev. Mr. Cooper has severed all connections with the board of missions. He has started for America to join Dr. McGarvey in his present movement.

A TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT.

"I have the greatest sympathy for Dr. McGarvey. He is a fine man. So are his associates all fine men. But the whole thing is a tempest in a teapot.

"The only criticism I have to make is that these gentlemen talk as if they were the whole church, when, in point of fact, they are an insignificant part.

"The great fact about the Episcopal church is that it is in no sense a sect. Its great virtue is its magnificent comprehensiveness. Every once in awhile either one extreme or the other gets tired of trying to transfer into a sect and determines to leave.

"The low church did this thirty or forty years ago. This started a new sect, the so-called Reformed Episcopalians. I believe a few of these still exist.

"They say that they were driven out by the ritualists, who formed the other extreme. Now, it appears as though the ritualists' time has come and they must take their own bitter medicine. Between these two extremes the vast majority will still go on contented and quite satisfied."

SPIRITUALISTS LOSE A LEGACY.

A Jury Holds Illinois Banker Was Insane When He Made His Will.

Bloomington, Ill., May 9.—The jury trying the will contest instituted by the heirs of J. T. Crumbaugh, who left ½ million to spiritualistic mediums, decided to-day that Crumbaugh was insane at the time he executed the testament.

The Crumbaugh case was one of the most sensational ever tried in Illinois. It was the claim of the heirs that the aged banker had been induced to will his money to spiritualists through fake manifestations. A number of spirit letters, which the mediums attributed to Crumbaugh's son, who died in infancy, were introduced as evidence.

The jury, after several days of taking testimony, agreed to-day that Crumbaugh's mind was unhinged by the spiritualistic seances and ordered the estate turned over to the probate court for division among the legal heirs.

AN ARTICLE ON THOMAS BENTON.

Washington, May 9.—Representative Champ Clark has just written an article on Thomas Hart Benton for the "Library of Southern Literature," a very pretentious work soon to be issued in octavo volumes of about 500 pages each. The editors-in-chief of the work are President Alderman of the University of Virginia and Joel Chandler Harris of "Uncle Remus" fame. Mr. Clark, besides writing the article on the great Missourian, selected the passages from Benton's works which are to form a part of the collection. To Mr. Clark the labor is one of love and justice for a man who has never got his proper place in history.

AUGUSTUS THOMAS IS REJECTED.

Springfield, Mo., Democrats Wouldn't Name Noted New York Playwright.

Springfield, Mo., May 9.—The Greene county Democratic convention to name delegates to the state convention was held here to-day.

The resolutions, adopted after a heated argument, indorsed the official acts of Governor Folk, Senator Stone, Representative Hamlin and State Senator McDavid.

While the delegates were instructed to work for national delegates who would favor Bryan, the request of the Nebraskan that Augustus Thomas, the New York dramatist, be sent as an alternate from Missouri was rejected.

A KANSAS ORATOR WAS SECOND.

The Interstate Normal Contest Was Won by a Filipino.

Macomb, Ill., May 9.—The interstate normal school oratorical contest was held here to-night and was won by Camilo Osias, a Filipino, of the normal school at this place. His subject was "The Aspiration of the Filipinos." Vernon Horner of the Emporia, Kas., school was second. Miss Jennie Hogan of Superior, Wis., third, and John Fitzgerald of Cedar Falls, Ia., fourth. Missouri's representative, Miss Alma Hotchkiss of Maryville, Mo., missed a train and did not attend.

INVITE GERMANS TO LEAVE.

A Demand for Law Enforcement Made by Atchison Ministers.

Atchison, Kas., May 9.—The Atchison Ministers' alliance and the city officials have clashed. In this afternoon's issue of the Church Visitor, a publication edited by the alliance, the city administration is severely criticised because, so the ministers allege, prohibition is not being enforced in Atchison.

The same issue of the paper invites the Germans of the city who don't favor prohibition to return to their Fatherland. The article directed toward the administration follows, in part:

> If there is lawlessness in Atchison, and there seems to be plenty of it, we are forced to the conclusion that the administrative forces are either incompetent or are in complicity with the violators. If there is incompetency anywhere resignations are in order, to make way for officials who are able to do their sworn duty. If there is complicity the sooner exposures are made the better. A lawless condition is detrimental to our city and homes and every legitimate business interest.

> It is reported that an organization has been affected in Atchison, principally among the Germans, to oppose prohibition. We are sorry if such an organization has been formed. We have great respect for the sturdy qualities of the Germans. We have not hesitated to speak in highest terms of their contribution to our nation.
>
> They will continue to hold the respect of our nation as long as they are law abiding, and are in harmony with the best interests of our nation. If the Germans desire to honor and respect themselves and to be true and patriotic citizens they will take a stand against the liquor traffic.
>
> If any do not wish to be law abiding Americans the door is open for their return.
>
> The sooner all foreign peoples learn to be loyal Americans when they come here, the better it will be for them and our nation.

RICH MAN UNDER A TRAIN.

Marshall, Mo., May 9.—W. S. Goff, a wealthy mine owner, who lived in the Ransberg district near Los Angeles, Cal., was run over and killed by the Red Flyer, of the Chicago & Alton railroad, near the Chicago & Alton depot here to-day, while he was trying to board the train to go to St. Louis and Southwestern Missouri, where he owned several hundred acres of land. Goff also owned 1,800 acres of land in Kentucky. Money to the amount of $234 and a large number of valuable papers were found in his pockets by Dr. G. E. Scrutchfield.

Before the coroner had time to reach the city from the scene of this accident, he was called to the home of William Piper, in North street, in answer to a message that a suicide had been committed. Two inquests are now in progress in this city, one being adjourned until Monday. Goff, at the time of the accident, was in company with his brother-in-law, C. P. Hinton, of this city.

SUICIDE RUNS IN THE FAMILY.

Marshall, Mo., May 9.—William Piper, aged 75 years, committed suicide in his bedroom at his home to-day by shooting himself in the head with a double-barreled shotgun.

William Piper was the father of James Piper, who attempted to commit suicide last week by cutting his throat with a knife, while on his way home from Kansas City, on the Chicago & Alton Slater accommodation. The son recovered from the attempt at suicide a few days ago, and was adjudged insane by the probate court of Saline county and sent to the Nevada asylum yesterday.

The home of another son, Mort Piper, three miles south of this city, was destroyed by fire about 3 o'clock this morning, together with the entire contents.

Mr. Piper, the father, had been in poor health for many months, and had been confined to his bed every since his son's attempted suicide.

A "DEAD MAN" CAME BACK.

The Wife of a Missing Nebraskan Had Married Three Times.

Omaha, May 9.—James Adams, at one time a resident of Peru, Neb., was reported to have been drowned in the Missouri river eleven years ago, a dead body positively identified as his being found in the river in the summer of 1897, created a sensation by appearing at Kearney last night and making inquiry for his wife, who formerly lived there.

When Adams learned that his wife had been married three times since he disappeared from his home and is now living with her fourth husband in Omaha, he announced that he would not disturb her and proceeded on his way to Los Angeles, whence he said he might go up into Oregon and settle. He was not disposed to discuss the mystery surrounding his disappearance eleven years ago and did not tell any of his friends where he had been. A few days after his disappearance from his home his clothing was found on the bank of the Missouri river.

A MISSOURI TOWN KILLING.

The Thrust of a Pocket Knife Caused Death.

Joplin, Mo., May 9.—Blue Mayfield, a married man and the father of two children, was stabbed by Andy Copeland in Carterville to-night and died from the wound a few hours later. Copeland was walking along the sidewalk when he stumbled over a little boy who was walking with his mother.

"Excuse me," said Copeland to the mother. "I thought your little boy was a sign. I didn't mean to knock him down."

Mayfield was standing near and reprimanded Copeland for awkwardness. A quarrel followed and Mayfield struck Copeland several times with his fist. Copeland then drew a pocket knife and plunged it into Mayfield's breast. Mayfield staggered into the office of a physician, where he died. The knife blade had penetrated the heart cavity.

HOW VICTIMS WERE LURED

THE HOUSE OF MYSTERY DESCRIBED BY A ONE-TIME INMATE.

Emil Greening, Now a Resident of Oklahoma City, Says There Was a Procession of Strangers Supposed to Be Cousins.

Oklahoma City, Ok., May 9.—Some interesting facts about the mysterious woman slayer of Laporte, Ind., were told here to-day by Emil Greening, a carpenter, and his brother, Fred Greening, a painter, who worked on Mrs. Gunness's farm last summer. The brothers now live in Oklahoma City. The story told by Emil Greening was a painful one to him, as he and Jennie Olson, the adopted daughter of Mrs. Gunness and one of her victims, had been sweethearts.

"Jennie and I were good friends, and she told me a good deal about herself when we were alone," said Emil Greening to-day. "When her mother decided to send her away to California with a professor who was reported to have come after her but whom I never saw, Jennie came to me and declared that she would never go.

"In the morning I didn't see Jennie, and her mother told me that she had been awake almost all night and that she was still asleep and didn't wish to be disturbed. I was sent on an errand late in the afternoon, and when I got back I was told that Jennie was gone."

NO ANSWER TO HIS LETTERS.

"I wrote to her, but I gave the two letters to Mrs. Gunness. I never received any answer, and finally I got so tired working around the place without seeing Jennie that I left. I don't believe there ever was a professor, for I slept in the room next to Jennie's and I didn't hear any man's voice.

"Mrs. Gunness later told me that Jennie had left at 4 o'clock that same morning, but no one saw her leave and no one about the place ever saw the professor. All the day following the disappearance Mrs. Gunness was very nervous.

"Mrs. Gunness received men visitors all the time. A different man came nearly every week, and they always stayed at the house. She introduced them as her cousins, and they came from Kansas, South Dakota, Wisconsin and many from Chicago. Several were never seen to leave the place.

NEVER TOOK THEIR TRUNKS AWAY.

"Most of the men that came brought their trunks with them, but they rarely took the trunks away. We never knew when to expect these fellows, but they almost always had money.

"Mrs. Gunness kept them with her all the time in the parlors and her bedroom. She was always careful to make the children stay away from her cousins, who rarely tried to show them any affection.

"After Jennie left, the visitors were supposed to occupy her room, which was next to mine, but I was never able to hear them at night.

"I never knew of Mrs. Gunness's bestowing her affections upon any of her hired hands, except Ray Lamphere.

"So many men came, and I saw so little of them, that I can't remember many of them, but I distinctly remember Mr. Moo, who came from Chicago the day before Christmas, 1906. He was with Mrs. Gunness almost constantly.

MR. MOO'S TRUNK REMAINED.

"When he left, his trunks stayed behind, and no one saw him go. It was several days before Mrs. Gunness admitted that he was gone.

"Shortly afterwards, Mrs. Gunness sent me to Michigan City to get a horse that she said Moo had promised to give her. I took a day to make the trip. When I got to Michigan City, something was wrong, and I was told to come back for the horse later.

"But when I returned to the farm another cousin who was there when I left was gone.

"In about two weeks I was again sent to Michigan City and still there was no horse, but when I got back another cousin was missing, and no one around the place had seen him leave.

"Moo's trunk was in the Gunness home July 11, 1907, when I left the place. His wasn't the only one. There were about fifteen other trunks and one room was packed full of all kinds of men's clothing. Mrs. Gunness said that the cousins had left their clothes and that she was not certain that they would be back for them.

"In the light of what has happened recently I can see that many bloody and mysterious things were going on right under my nose.

MRS. GUNNESS'S PRIVATE GARDEN.

"Mrs. Gunness had a little place fenced off just south of the kitchen. She never allowed any of the hands to go near it, an d she would fly into a rage if a man looked that way when he was passing. Two sides of it were barricaded with barrels and boxes, shutting off the view, but from the other two sides you could see that it looked like a garden in spots."

That Ray Lamphere, under arrest charged with being an accomplice to the wholesale murders, was the only man that ever enjoyed her continued affections and that he was the only one she lavished her money on, is the belief of Fred Greening, th painter brother of Emil Greening, who was employed on the place.

"As many as twelve men came and went mysteriously while I was painting the Gunness home," said Greening in conclusion.

TO PROVE MRS. GUNNESS DEAD

Search for Gold Fillings Will Be Made in the Ruins.

Laporte, Ind., May 9.—Laporte settled down again to-day, after the excitement following the Syracuse arrest, to digging in the garden graveyard of Mrs. Belle Gunness's home.

Sheriff Smutser is preparing for a test Monday such as has never before been made in the investigation of any murder case. It will be in the effort to account for the missing head of the body in the morgue, generally believed to be the body of Mrs. Gunness. The sheriff has employed an expert miner, who, he says, is now in Laporte with his pan, his cradle, his rocker and all the other paraphernalia of the primitive California gold hunter.

This miner—the sheriff declines to give his name—will go down to the cellar of the "house of death" Monday morning and begin to sift the debris in search for gold. Never before has gold been so eagerly sought. A grain of it recovered from those ashes will be valued at more than a pound of gold by the authorities of Laporte county. They will maintain that if gold is found at the point where the headless body was recovered it will prove that Mrs. Gunness's head was consumed by fire and that the $300 worth of precious metal in her false teeth was melted by the heat.

Lamphere's trunk is still in the office of the state's attorney, its contents carefully guarded from prying eyes. What the letters from Mrs. Gunness to Lamphere may say is known only to Sheriff Smutser, the state's attorney, the sheriff's deputy, William Anstiss, and Ray Lamphere himself.

These questions were put to Deputy Anstiss to-day:

"Is there anything in any of these letters which leads you to believe that Ray Lamphere was an accomplice of Mrs. Gunness in the murders which people her private graveyard?

"I can't say that there is," replied the deputy.

"Is there anything in them to make you believe that Lamphere assisted in the murder of Andrew Helgelein?"

"I don't know that there is," was the deputy's answer. "But I believe he has some knowledge of it. Helgelein was last seen January 14, when he and Mrs. Gunness came to the First National bank in La Porte to collect the draft of $2,893.20 on the First National bank of Aberdeen, S. D., his home town.

"Lamphere has said that he was in Michigan City during the day of January 14 and the night following; that he returned to the farm in the morning and that Helgelein was gone. He asked Mrs. Gunness what had become of him, and was told that he had departed for Michigan City.

"I have evidence to prove, not beyond a reasonable doubt, but beyond the shadow of a doubt, that Lamphere returned to the farm before 11 o'clock on the night of January 14, and the probabilities are that Helgelein was murdered, dismembered and buried on that night. Lamphere, at least, got some inkling of what was going on."

From time to time, Coroner Mack is taking depositions in connection with the murders of Andrew Helgelein, Jennie Olson, adopted daughter of the woman of Gunness hill, and Oleo Burdburg of Iola, Wis., who are the only three out of the total of fourteen bodies thus recovered from the barnyard burial grounds to be positively identified.

Frank J. Pitner, cashier of the First National bank in LaPorte, made his deposition to-day. He says that Mrs. Gunness and Andrew Helgelein made their first call at the bank January 6 and that Mrs. Gunness was anxious to have the draft cashed immediately. She explained that she needed $1,500 at once to complete a real estate deal and offered to indorse the draft if the cashier would give her the money then.

"I told her," says the deposition, "that it would take five or six days to get word from Aberdeen and that she would have to wait. After a little more argument on the part of Mrs. Gunness, they went out together.

"She was with Helgelein when he came back for the money January 14. I remarked to him that he did not seem to be in such a hurry as he was on the occasion of his last visit, and then, currency being very scarce, I suggested that he take the money in the form of a cashier's certificate. Helgelein was willing, saying he would not need it all at that time, but Mrs. Gunness insisted upon cash.

"I explained to her that the cashier's certificate would answer the same purpose as currency in any real estate deal she might have under way and that it would be accepted by any bank in town.

"'No,' she said. 'I want cash.'

"So the money was paid over to Helgelein, and they went away. I never saw him after that. When they came in January 14 and I remarked about the delay, Helgelein said he had been ill and Mrs. Gunness said she had nursed him.

"When I first heard from Asle Helgelein I wrote to Mrs. Gunness, asking her to call at the bank, which she did. She told me that Helgelein had left the farm two days after their last visit to the bank and had gone to Michigan City with the intention of taking a boat there for Chicago.

"'I think,' she went on, 'he is on his way to Norway. He told me that he hadn't been there for many years and was homesick to see the old country.'

"She even showed me a scrap of a letter written in Norwegian, which she said was from Helgelein. I asked her why the letter had been torn and she replied that someone had been tampering with her mail of late. She believed it was Ray Lamphere and had requested the postmaster not to deliver any more mail to her farm by rural carriers. She said she had found the scrap of letter in the barn."

Little progress was made to-day with the digging, Sheriff Smutser now being chiefly interested in his gold mining experiments. His assistant, Hutson, did a little prowling about the ruins of the house in the cellar this afternoon and picked up a Colt revolver, the size generally carried by army officers or cowboys. It contained five shells, three of which had been discharged. The sheriff considers it peculiar that if the three cartridges were exploded by the heat of the fire the other two remained intact. The revolver, together with an ax which someone picked up near the barn, under the impression that it contained blood stains, is now in the sheriff's office in La Porte.

THE PROFESSION OF MURDER.

Julian Hawthorne Writes of Slayers, Ancient and Modern.

(By Julian Hawthorne.)

NEW YORK, May 9.—From time to time, in the history of crime, instances happen of persons making a business or trade of murder. The tale comes down from the great poisoners of mediaeval Italy to later cases in Europe, and from these to our own Holmes and Bender dramas.

The gigantic wickedness involved and the seemingly superhuman hardihood required in order steadily and constantly to perpetrate them have always rendered them peculiarly interesting to the public; and this is due not to any morbid feeling, but simply to the natural curiosity which we all feel in anything which, while of human agency, nevertheless appears to transcend normal human power.

Latest and not least appalling of these instances is that which is now being developed in Indiana. Mrs. Gunness is a woman more than 50 years of age, an immigrant from Norway, not devoid of personal attractiveness and probably endowed with a certain fascinating quality approaching the hypnotic, and due to strength of character and of physical organization, such as we would expect to find in one capable of such deeds.

This would give her an ascendancy over the average man or woman which would be of value to her in her terrible occupation. She had been married at least twice and had three children, of whom she seemed fond, but this fondness must be regarded with some suspicion, not only because she deliberately doomed them to death by fire when she found herself in peril, but because there is ground for believing that children may have formed part of the trade material, so to say, in which she habitually dealt.

But it was one of her transactions with higher game that first brought attention to the woman; she had been putting advertisements in certain newspapers expressing a wish to meet or correspond with men for purposes of matrimony and among those who had personally responded was one Andrew Helegelein, a Norwegian. He was known to have entered Mrs. Gunness's house, and after that nothing further was heard or seen of him. It so chanced that he had a brother who, at length, was prompted to make inquiries and, when other means were unproductive, announced his intention to make a visit to the Gunness farm and get information at the first hand.

Mrs. Gunness must, of course, have recognized from the beginning the possibility of discovery and have provided means to meet it. We have yet to learn the details of her financial transactions, how much money she had laid by, if any, or whether she was one of those who spend as they go. She, at all events, had enough property to warrant her in making a will, the contents of which are known. It devises property to a charitable institution. It seems to have been part of a plan to make it appear that Mrs. Gunness, if any catastrophe to her plans should occur, was dead. The rest of the scheme will appear in the sequel.

Obviously, a vital element in any plan of escape would be that she should appear to be no longer alive, and the will, together with a dead body which will be assumed to be hers, would constitute as strong a case as could be devised.

The coming of Helgelein's brother was Mrs. Gunness's cue to put her plan into operation. Two things were necessary—first, to burn down her house, with her three children, for it was impossible that these should accompany her in her flight; second, to provide a woman's body to be found in the ruins after the fire which should be regarded as her own.

We may hope that the children were killed before being abandoned to the fire, and whence Mrs. Gunness procured the woman victim has still to be determined. She lured her in some way to the house and, after killing her, cut off and concealed her head—an indispensable step, in order to carry out the impersonation, and she also seems to have slipped one of her own rings upon the fingers of the corpse, by way of confirming the identification.

All this must have been done at least twenty-four hours before the fire was set, because the three children, on reaching school the day before, complained that their mother had whipped them for having attempted to visit the cellar. This can easily be explained if we suppose that the dead and headless woman's body was lying in the cellar at the time.

Everything having thus been made ready, we must imagine the mother murdering the children, placing the headless woman in the bedroom with them, setting fire to her house and stealing away under cover of night. No sensational drama has ever portrayed anything more hideous and dramatic than this scene.

It should be said that at the present writing the local authorities incline to the belief that Mrs. Gunness was actually burned in the fire, after having been killed, with her children, by her farm hand, Ray Lamphere. But the other theory seems to have more weight and is adopted in the present narrative. We at all events are sure that Mrs. Gunness is either dead or escaped, and we may approach the facts of the story in regular order.

Mrs. Gunness came here from Norway some twenty years ago and was afterward married to one Mads Sorensen. This man died suddenly soon after insuring his life in her favor for about $8,000. There was some suspicion of poison at the time, and a brother of the dead man, Oscar Sorensen, made investigations, but the police do not seem to have shared his suspicions and the matter was dropped.

In due time Mrs. Sorenson married again, the ill-fated man being he whose name she still bears—Gunness. He also presently insured himself for $3,500 in her favor and soon after died. It was after these events that the widow purchased the farm near Laporte, Ind., in which her subsequent operations were carried on. She restored and refurnished the buildings and put some cultivation on the farm, which is of sixty or more acres.

Men and women occasionally visited the house without attracting special remark. They were not seen again, but the widow always had some easy explanation of their disappearance. After a time she began to advertise for a husband, explaining in a personal letter, of which a copy is extant, that she had means, and expected money with the man whom she should marry.

Several men are known to have answered the advertisement and to have visited the farm, but whether they were robbed or swindled and then murdered and interred in the cellar or the backyard, or whether, as Mrs. Gunness averred, they failed to meet her favor and went on about their business, we can only know when the bodies now being exhumed on the farm shall have been identified—if they ever are. All likelihood points, however, to the conclusion that all those who were able to produce money suffered death, and that one after another of them joined the assemblage of corpses that crowded the subsoil of Mrs. Gunness's farm.

Meanwhile, it had been necessary for the woman to have masculine help on her place, and a succession of farmhands served her during several years. After being with her for a time they disappeared. She explained that they had gone West or had journeyed to Norway to see the king crowned, or otherwise disposed of themselves.

But when we consider that it is hardly possible that these men were unaware of Mrs. Gunness's practices and that sooner or later a quarrel would be sure to arise between them, we are led to suspect that they, too, finally ended in the cemetery. Olaf Limbo was the name of one of these men, and it is believed that his body is among those disinterred, and Ray Lamphere has admitted that he was infatuated with the woman and that he knew enough about her to hang her. There probably were many others in his plight, and that he escaped death himself he may thank the incorrigible curiosity of the brother of Helgelein.

But in addition to murdering her farm hands for safety's sake, and her intended husbands for cash, it is suggested that Mrs. Gunness may have been also carrying on a sort of clearing house business in murdered bodies, which were shipped to her farm by unknown persons in Chicago or elsewhere, to be put out of sight in her graveyard.

If this suggestion be warranted, then we would have to enlarge the scope of our suspicions, and to assume that Mrs. Gunness was but one member of an association of an appalling proportions and designs. All we know at present is that many unexplained trunks were delivered from time to time at the farm and the fact that some of the disinterred bodies had been dismembered indicates that they had been previously packed in narrow quarters.

The explanation of the presence of women's bodies is most easily made on the theory that they were sent from other places, as it is not obvious how Mrs. Gunness could have otherwise made a profit out of her own sex. One of these women's bodies, however, is identified as that of Jennie Olsen, a foster daughter of the woman, who is believed to have been murdered because she knew "too much."

Until the work of digging up the farm has been finished we can only guess what the final showing may be, but enough has already been done to establish Mrs. Gunness's fame as one of the great criminals of the world. If she be captured—and it seems unlikely that she can elude our famous detective agencies—and brought to trail, we may expect revelations of horror and depravity unsurpassed and perhaps unequaled in criminal history.

NOW SHE IS IN PHILADELPHIA.

The Police Continue to Get "Clews" of Mrs. Gunness.

CHICAGO, May 9.—The latest and most authentic clew in the police hunt for Mrs. Belle Gunness is that she left Chicago on a Pennsylvania railroad train Thursday night and alighted at Philadelphia. This "tip" reached the assistant chief of police late this afternoon, and he declared that it was the most valuable clew the local police had as yet received. He announced that he would wire the Philadelphia police at once and that he looked for results from the quest that would ensue in the Quaker city.

It was a letter from a man in Atlantic City that supplied this promising clew. The writer told of having seen on the Pennsylvania flyer a woman who "acted queerly." She was disgutsed, he believed, and she seemed decidedly suspicious of everybody, watching all the passengers but speaking to none. Her furtive glances and her general resemblance to the alleged arch-murderess attracted the attention of the informant.

"What gives me great faith in the clew is the fact that the description given by the writer," said Mr. Schuettler, "tallies perfectly with that of Mrs. Gunness, even to the gold in her front teeth. I have asked the Philadelphia police to make a thorough search for this woman."

Another theory the Chicago police are working on is that Mrs. Gunness is in hiding in this city, having received no less than four reports to-day from people who said they had seen her within the past week at various points about town.

Friends of John August Lofgren are positive he was one of the victims of the Laporte murderess and say his description tallies with that of one of the bodies dug up. He disappeared from Chicago May 11, 1907.

A RELATIVE OF THE BENDERS!

LOUISVILLE, May 9.—The editor of a Louisville afternoon paper received to-day the following unsigned communication in the mails:

> I do not like my name to be known, hence I will not give it, but will tell you that the notorious Mrs. Gunness is descended from the same man as was Kate Bender of Kansas notoriety. Kate's father was also a brother to Mrs. Gunness's grandfather. I know this through my own marriage ties.
>

ARMY MEN SEE PAUL GILMORE.

Two Boxes at the Grand Were Occupied by Officers Last Night.

Mr. Gilmore was called before the curtain at the end of the second act. After he had made a little speech the orchestra played a national air. The officers and their women guests and some of the audience remained standing until the piece was finished.

SOCIETY FAIR MADE MONEY

A PROFIT OF $1,200 TO $1,500, THE Y. W. C. A. MANAGERS BELIEVE.

The Finish of the Old World's Markets Was Rousing Last Night—Italy Won Over Egypt in the Voting Contest.

When the Y. W. C. A.'s Old World Markets show closed last night, the managers knew that at least $1,200 had been taken in at the door and in the various booths. Some of the more hopeful of the women said that the total would be more than $1,500. Approximately $700 had been received in admissions paid at the door. Beside these tickets, the women had sold many tickets among their friends—the amount of which sales has not been computed. A voting contest—ten cents a vote—to decide which was the most popular exhibit, brought more than $300. The amount of the sales in the various bazaars is only cursorily computed. All of them had some goods left over. The Paris cafe is expected to contribute a larger sum than any of the other exhibits because it charged an admittance to the vaudeville show.

THE STRENUOUS VOTING CONTEST.

One of the bagpipers, who stood in front of a blackboard at the north end of the Casino marking the scores for the most popular booth last night, was taking in dimes as fast as he could count, and had to ask for time out.

"W-h-ee-w!" he whistled. "Maybe this don't look like prosperity when people'll pay out $300 without even getting street car transfers in return!"

The voting contest had an exciting finish. All day the race had been between Italy and Egypt. At 10:20 o'clock, with only ten minutes until closing time, the vote stood 850 for Egypt to 834 for Italy. Roy Sanborn, shouting through a megaphone, announced that there were only a few minutes left, and the voters in a background made up of excited girls in Oriental and Italian costumes crowded around the board.

Some of the women stood on chairs and waved. Others danced up and down and "rooted" as if at a football game. The scores on the board were hurriedly scribbled, then erased, and new figures replaced. When the contest closed Italy won, 1,237 to 1,186. Germany was third with 375.

SHOW WAS RUN AT LITTLE EXPENSE.

The shrewd business management of the women made it possible to conduct the show with very little expense. Some of them even arranged with wholesalers to return all unsold goods.

Thursday night the attendance was 615; Friday afternoon, 250; Friday night, 750; yesterday afternoon, 475; last night, 650. The money earned is to be used in the Y. W. C. A.'s educational work for girls.

As soon as the show closed at midnight carpenters and laborers hurriedly set to work to clear the exhibits from the floor and the balcony of the hall and remove the material to the room south of the Casino, which was used for the French cafe. This was necessary because the room is to be used this morning for the services of the First Baptist church.

A CELEBRATING DINNER AFTERWARDS.

About fifty men and women who represented foreign characters in the show held a dinner last night at the Hotel Baltimore to celebrate. Incidental to the dinner there were numerous stunts by the "foreigners." Just to show that he was versatile one young man who was dressed as a chorus girl in the "Moonlight Maids" performed a more or less artistic ballet dance in the main dining room of the hotel. Similar attempts followed, and an energetic dance of all nations was soon in progress.

CHURCHILL WON THIS TIME.

Mrs. Cornwallis West Didn't "Aid" Her Son in the Election.

LONDON, May 9.—Winston Churchill, cabinet minister, for a brief period without a parliminary seat, was to-night returned for Dundee City, after being rejected at Manchester.

The unique circumstances gave the contest special interest, and noisy crowds waited in the London streets until after midnight to see the result placarded. Dundee was considered a safe liberal constituency and Churchill won by a majority of nearly 3,000 over the conservative candidate.

Mr. Churchill's mother, Mrs. George Cornwallis West, refrained from taking an active part in the campaign after her Manchester experience, when her advocacy of "dear Winston" undoubtedly damaged his chances.

Churchill's most formidable opponent at Dundee was a pretty suffragette, Miss Moloney, who upset his speeches by ringing a loud bell and defied him to his face.

MEN FOR ALL THE OFFICES

REPUBLICAN STATE MANAGERS TO FILL LOCAL TICKETS.

Blank Spaces on the Ballots Cost the Party Many Votes, Because National Candidates Don't Draw Well in Some Districts.

The Republican state committee, at a meeting in Jefferson City which lasted until after 2 o'clock yesterday morning, decided to insist that Republicans have candidates for every office, large or small, in every county in the state.

No attempt is to be made to hold a convention to suggest a ticket. The committee was so afraid that it might be suspected of trying to dictate nominations that when some one mentioned the name of N. T. Gentry, a motion was quickly made and carried that where there are candidates no names should be discussed. The committee held that it had no interest or right to interfere in the row that has been caused by Gentry's candidacy for attorney general.

TO PERSUADE MEN TO RUN.

But as to offices for which there are no candidates the committee concluded that it was a party duty to try to induce some one to make the race. Attempts will be made in the next few days to induce men to file for places on the Republican ticket not already filed for by candidates. That there will be a contest for attorney general was practically settled by the action of the St. Louis people who have placed John S. Leahy in the race and are booming him as strongly as they can. There is no contest in prospect for any of the other state offices and for three of them, lieutenant governor, auditor and railroad and warehouse commissioner, no petitions have been filed.

Some of the committee members suggested that John H. Bothwell of Sedalia ought to make the race for lieutenant governor. Mr. Bothwell had been favorably discussed for some months, but he told the committee that he is now engaged in an enterprise that takes all his time, and he could not make the race. A suggestion that Jacob F. Gmelich, the retiring state treasurer, would make a suitable candidate met with general favor and it was finally agreed that Walter S. Dickey be commissioned to see Mr. Gmelich and tell him, if he would make the race. The members of the committee will help in circulating the necessary petitions.

Later in the discussion it was agreed that W. W. Wilder, the present state auditor, should be asked to run for railroad and warehouse commissioner. Mr. Wilder refuses to run for auditor on account of his business, but railroad commissioners only work for the state part of the time. Jesse A. Tollerton was suggested for state auditor. Tollerton is a banker in Taney county and an expert accountant. Mr. Dickey was asked to communicate with all three men and suggest that they make the race. A message from Jefferson City last night said Gmelich and Wilder had given favorable answers and Tollerton had not answered a message sent to him in the morning.

ONLY LOCAL CANDIDATES DRAW VOTES.

The work that kept the committee busy all the afternoon and most of the night was a canvass to find out where there is a shortage of candidates. Even when conventions were held and securing nominations required no effort, there were many counties that did not have local county tickets. In counties that are usually safely Democratic the Republicans for years did not attempt to nominate local tickets. It has often been said that the candidates for constable in all the districts of the county together bring to the polls more voters than the candidates for President. With no county or legislative ticket to vote for half the Republicans in these counties stayed at home on election day. They did not know the state and national candidates and cared nothing about them.

The committee is working on the theory that the Republicans should not have a blank space on their ticket in any township in the state.

Even in Democratic counties there may be times when a Republican candidate can win a county office or be elected justice of the peace or member of the legislature. Even where they fail they will bring to the polls more Republican voters than usual and that will help the candidates for Cangress and state offices.

STATE SENATE CANDIDATES FEW.

There are Republican candidates for Congress in all the districts, but there are several senatorial districts in which there are no candidates for state senator. Many counties have done nothing toward making up a county ticket or starting candidates for the legislature. The next ten days will be devoted to trying to secure candidates so that there will be somebody to make the race for every office.

COLLECTED FEES NOT DUE HIM.

A Stop Put to a Scale Inspection Plum by Oklahoma Authorities.

GUTHRIE, OK., May 9.—Ever since Governor Haskell's appointment of James A. Smith of Kingfisher to be state grain inspector, deputies of Smith have been traveling in covered wagons from place to place in the state, exacing a fee of $2 for the inspection of each public scales and giving a receipt that the scales had been examined and its weights were now accurate.

Authority for this examination was claimed under a territorial law, but, when Inspector Smith was asked by an attorney to cite the law, Smith made no reply. Complaints grew so numerous that the fee was being taken without warrant of law that the matter was laid before the state attorney general and Smith was notified to abandon this inspection.

There probably are more than 3,000 public scales in Oklahoma for which a fee of $2, if paid only annually, would amount to $6,000. The emoluments of the grain inspector's office are his fees, divided between himself and his deputies. It is not known how much has been collected for the inspection of public scales nor whether the fees were returned when the state attorney general notified Smith that he should not inspect public scales.

ARE YOU AN HEIR?

It is estimated that there are something like 20,000 persons scattered throughout the United States and Canada who are entitled to moneys and lands now tied up in the English High Court of Chancery and elsewhere owing to the inability of lawyers to locate them. The great trouble is that foreign lawyers, when searching for lost heirs, almost invariably advertise for them in London or Edinburgh newspapers; as these papers are seldom seen in this country, of course the missing heir never knows of the good fortune that is awaiting him or her, and thus the case drags along in the courts for an indefinite time. As an aid to those interested in Chancery cases, and who believe that they are entitled to an inheritance, an enterprising publisher has prepared an authentic list of persons who have been advertised for during the past 150 years, including the famous Anneka Jantzes and Haarlem estates, and unsettled estates in England, Germany, France, Ireland, Scotland and other countries. The list is a very long one, and not only gives the full name of the heir that is being searched for, but also the name and address of the attorney having charge of the estate in Chancery. Any person can secure details of this list by sending self addressed envelope to The Royal Register, 181 Madison Square, New York City.—Adv.

SHRUBS ARE IN FULL BLOOM.

Parks and Private Yards in the City Are Showing Beautiful Blossoms.

Some of the prettiest of the flowering shrubs are at the height of their beauty now. The wiegelias, with their red, pink and white festoons; the spireas, with pure white and bright pink blossoms; the fragrant syringias, sometimes called "mock orange" blossoms; the round white blooms of the bridal wreath; the deupzias, with thick clusters of small white blossoms; the fringes, with purple and white blossoms, and the handsome snowballs—all these are making a brave show in the parks, private grounds and dooryards just now.

JEROME EVIDENCE ALL IN.

Arguments Against the District Attorney to Be Heard May 26.

NEW YORK, May 9.—The hearing of testimony on the charges preferred against District Attorney Jerome was completed to-day. Closing arguments will be made May 26.

The examination of an assistant district attorney, Mr. Smyth, was continued to-day. Mr. Smyth said that he personally handled the cases of William H. Tillinghast and the American Ice company, both of which figured in the charges against the district attorney. Mr. Smyth said that it was upon recommendation of Mr. Jerome that the first indictment against Julian, the ex-investigator for the Metropolitan Street railway, who has been the principal witness for the complainants in the present proceedings, was dismissed.

In reply to a question as to how it was possible for Tillinghast to have served on twenty-five juries in the city court without his name being on the panel, Smyth said Tillinghast told him the court clerks were always glad to have him serve, as they could pocket his fees. He did not need the fees, Tillinghast said, because he was well paid for his services by Stanley Begg.

Taking up the investigation of the American Ice company, Mr. Smyth said he was instructed by Mr. Jerome to see President Oler of the company, and thoroughly familiarize himself with the business from what Mr. Oler told him. He had the talk with Mr. Oler, but did not go over the company's books or the company's letter files. He found no contracts which tended to prove that the company had established a monopoly for the purpose of limiting the sale of ice, he said.

A ST. LOUIS PLAN FOR THE BOYS.

How a Public School Is an Aid in Juvenile Work.

Judge H. L. McCune visited St. Louis last week and made a speech at a meeting of persons interested in the work in behalf of the boys. While there he picked up a suggestion that he believes ought to be adopted in Kansas City.

The board of education of St. Louis granted to the social service conference the privilege of using the basement of the Patrick Henry school for a club room for boys Tuesday nights. For the present only five evenings will be taken up with club work, but it is a start in a direction that the promoters believe will be extended next winter.

The announcement, in the form of a handbill which Judge McCune brought home with him, says:

> The north room will be open to boys between 12 and 18 years of age; for music, games, athletics, storytelling, etc., from 7 to 8:30.
>
> The south room will be open to every one from 8:30 to 9:30; for lectures, concerts and entertainments.
>
> Tuesday evening, May 12, an interesting lecture will be given by Prof. H. M. Meyer on "The Founders of the Nation." Over 100 lantern slides will be presented.

"I wish our board of education would open one or two of the school buildings to help the work in the interest of the boys." Judge McCune said: "I have understood that the board questioned the legality of using a school room for other than school purposes, but I see no reason why it should. If it can be done in St. Louis I should think it could be done here, although I haven't looked up the law. I do know it would be helpful in the work we are doing and would save the cost of hiring a room for the meetings."

HIS GAVEL TO BE A RELIC.

A gavel made of wood from an Independence building, erected in 1835, will be presented to the moderator of the coming general assembly of the Presbyterian church in this city. The material was obtained a few days ago by Mrs. James Welch and Mrs. H. J. Ott of this city and Miss Kate Buchanan of Independence.

The building is one of the oldest now remaining in Independence. It is occupied by A. M. Woodson as a feed store, but was formerly a woodworking establishment, run in connection with the Weston blacksmith shop, which stands immediately adjoining, and did a big business in the days of the Santa Fe trail. The gavel will be made from a walnut window sill which was found to be as solid as on the day it was first placed in the building.

A Greek Commits Suicide.

Fearing that he was a victim of tuberculosis, Christ Sukonlis, a Greek laborer, committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself in the right temple in a bunk car on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad tracks in Armourdale. Sukonlis's countrymen say he came here from Corinth, Greece, seven months ago. His parents live there. Sukonlis was 34 years old, and had been out of work about three months.

CLIMATE CHANGE A FALLACY

THE WINTERS ONLY SEEM WARMER, THE WEATHER OBSERVER SAYS.

A Human Mind Remembers Only Extremes and Exaggerates Them, P. Connor Declares—Figures for 30 Years Show Only Slight Variations.

The belief that there have been appreciably permanent changes in climate, especially in this part of the country in ten, twenty or thirty years is a popular fallacy. There's nothing to it, Patrick Connor, the local weather observer, declares. And he's fortified with all kinds of facts and figures to prove it—a bookcase full of them.

A visitor to the weather bureau office in the Scarritt building yesterday ventured the opinion that there had been climatic changes.

"Nothing to it," the observer declared.

"Why," persisted the visitor, "when I was a kid——"

"Sure," said the observer. "You remember when you were a kid. That's the whole trouble. You remember only a little now and it is the natural exaggeration of past events and the disposition to forget ordinary facts that makes you believe that now. The records are against you."

"But," the visitor declared, "everybody says the same thing. The winters of our boyhood always were colder than they are now. The snows were deeper and there were more of them."

LOOK IN THE BOOK AND SEE.

"That's it," the observer said. "They seem so. As a matter of record the winters are no milder than they used to be, the springs are no colder, the summers are no warmer. They seem so. True, there are great variations from year to year, but the average is always about the same for periods of years."

The visitor wasn't yet quite convinced.

"Here then," the observer said. "Here's Loomis's standard work on meteorology. It says: 'The mean temperature of a given place is sensibly constant from one century to another and there is no sufficient reason for believing that the mean temperature for any place on the earth's surface has changed appreciably in 2,000 years.'"

"Now," continued the observer, "in more remote ages, in the formative period of the earth, there undoubtedly were vast changes due to geological movements. But the averages for decades in the early part of the last century are essentially equal to those now obtained in the same places. If slight changes appear they may be due to artificial conditions, such as afforestation, cultivation and irrigation, rather than to any changes in terrestial climate. We associate cold weather with the winter season, and cold, with its bleakness, hardships and pleasures, always makes a more vivid impression upon our minds than summer, because summer weather is more natural to us. For that reason the winters of the past seem colder to you than the winters now.

GOING BACK TO BOYHOOD DAYS.

"Now here are some figures for thirty years. They go back to your boyhood. Take December in the decade 1878 to 1887 and the mean temperature was 41.2 degrees. The next decade, 1888-1897, it had fallen to 35.7 and in the last decade, 1898-1907, it was only 32.1. The month of January in the same decades showed mean temperatures of 22.8, 28.8 and 31. Now there's one month that has steadily grown colder and the next month steadily warmer. Now here it goes down again. The mean emperature for February in the three decades was 31.1, 30.9 and 27.5. In March of the three decades it was 41.2, 41.1 and 43.4. For April and May there are the same ups and downs. For April the three decades show temperatures of 54.7, 56.5 and 54.3. In May the temperature was exactly opposite with 65, 63.8 and 65. Now where are your theories?"

"But here's some consolation," the observer said. "The most eminent meteorologists say that there is a periodic variation in climatic conditions, though it is very slight. Some fix the period as brief as eleven years while Bruckner, a German, fixes it at thirty-five years. Others place the length of the periods at a various number of years between these two extremes."

CANNOT SERVE TWO MASTERS.

Oklahoma Attorney General Anxious About Assistant Possibly Serving Trust.

GUTHRIE, OK., May 9.—Charles West, state attorney general, refuses to permit even rumor to connect his department in any other than a hostile way with the Standard Oil company and its associates. Having heard that A. Ledbetter of Ardmore, member of the constitutional convention and special assistant state attorney general, had been employed by the Waters-Pierce Oil company, West wrote Ledbetter to-day, asking if there was any foundation for the report and intimating that if there was, Ledbetter doubtless would feel that he could not serve both the state and the oil company. West said that a reply from Ledbetter would protect the department against criticism.

The new $27,000 high school in Argentine is finished. The structure is built of native stone and contains ten rooms, besides an auditorium with a seating capacity of 600.

MORE FRAUD CASES NOW.

Federal Grand Jury Accused Twenty-Six Persons of Misusing the Mail.

The investigations of the federal grand jury that finished a two weeks' session yesterday afternoon indicate that a larger number of persons are using the mail to defraud. Twenty indictments charging twenty-six persons with using the mail for unlawful purposes, were returned.

"This is the largest number of fraud cases returned here at any one term of the grand jury," Leslie J. Lyons, assistant United States district attorney, said yesterday afternoon. "The indications are that an increasing number of persons are using the mail to further their illegal schemes. Our office has been kept unusually busy for several weeks preparing information against these persons."

The Car Started Too Soon.

Alleging that she was injured by the starting of a car at Sheffield April 6, Mamie Hudler yesterday brought suit for $2,500 damages against the Metropolitan Street Railway company in Independence.

This means that within the next fifty days a $100,000 stock of the finest millinery ever shown in Kansas City must be unloaded on the public, piece by piece, at practically whatever prices we can get. All our patterns and novelties must go. All the products of our workroom and all the thousands of frames and new trimmings will be laid out and sold, many of them at a great loss.

In this emergency our reputation for value giving will stand us in good stead. People have learned that a bargain at Adler's is a bargain indeed, and if they have been astounded at the prices we have made heretofore, they will scarcely believe their eyes when they see what discounts we are making NOW. The prices have been shoved to the bottom at the very first in order to make sure that there will be no delay in moving the stock. Read these items and prices picked up at random from the stock. TO SAVE NATION'S WEALTH

THE CONSERVATION CONGRESS LIKE FRAMING OF THE CONSTITUTION.

For the First Time in American History a President Will Meet the Governors of the States in Conference—Momentous Tasks to Be Considered.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—History will be made at next week's White house conference on natural resources. Never before has a President of the United States conferred with all the governors of the states. Never before has the White house, with its long record of social and state functions, sheltered a large convention called for the consideration of a great public issue. And never before has the whole broad question of the conservation of this country's natural resources been brought before a great deliberative body as the sole subject of its consideration.

THE PEOPLE DEMAND ACTION.

The reception accorded this project indicates that the people of the country expect definite results of a far-reaching character. But no cut-and-dried programme will be presented for the consideration of the governors and delegates. After hearing from experts the conditions which the country is facing, the members of the conference will themselves decide whether anything ought to be done, and what.

Some have suggested the advisability of forming a great national organization to carry forward the plans originated in the conference. The probability is that, at the least, some basis will be laid for future co-operation between the federal and state governments in a vigorous policy of conservation, for one of the things which will be shown most forcibly at the conference is that neither the states nor the federal government can make satisfactory headway independently.

LIKE THE CONSTITUTION'S MAKING.

The present situation is much the same as was faced just before the adoption of the federal constitution, and the more enthusiastic believe that the coming conference will have just as far reaching results, and become quite as historic as those meetings which led up to the formation of the constitution.

They recall that the whole question of a constitution had its direct origin in a meeting, promoted by George Washington, for the consideration of the control and development of the Potomac. That conference met at Alexandria in 1785, and consisted of representatives from Virginia and Maryland. But it was decided that the questions involved were too extensive for two states to handle, and so another conference was called to meet at Annapolis in 1786.

More of the states were represented here, but still not enough. And so the third conference was called to meet the following year in Philadelphia. This conference, at which all of the states were represented, developed into the constitutional convention and became the most important meeting in American history.

THE EAST ROOM ITS SCENE.

The detailed arrangements for the conference accord with the importance of the discussion and with the prominence of the men in attendance. For the meeting the famous East room of the White House will be quite transformed. Along the east wall will be placed a combined framework and platform fifty-two feet in length and nineteen feet high. This will be artistically covered with green velvet, trimmed with gold rope. The purpose of such a large framework is to afford a proper setting for two giant maps of the United States, made by the forest service, to which constant reference will be made.

At the center of the framework, and between the maps, there will be a unique arrangement for the display of illustrations. In the framework at a convenient height will be a rectangular opening measuring three by four feet. To fit into this opening a large number of hand colored transparencies have been made. The pictures closely accord with points which will be made in various addresses, and the appropriate transparency will be revealed at the proper point in the talks. The light for the transparency will come from a window just in the rear of the framework. Arrangements have been made for changing the pictures with quite as great ease and celerity as is possible in the use of the stereopticon.

THE ARRANGEMENTS ARE UNIQUE.

This method of illustration is believed to be entirely new in public meetings, and it is not likely to be duplicated very often because of the labor and skill involved in making the transparencies. Originally the transparencies are photographic prints of large size made upon glass. Then the prints are colored by hand, and are mounted in front of ground glass, to secure the proper lighting.

The two maps are the largest, so far as is known, ever made by mechanical process. Each measures twelve by sixteen feet, and each is colored to graphically show the various resources of the country. One of them is devoted to mineral resources and the second to all other resources. Both the maps and the transparencies are so elevated that the view will not be obstructed by the speakers or by the presiding officer, who will occupy the raised platform running along the front of the framework.

THE GOVERNORS GUESTS OF HONOR.

The governors will occupy the seats of honor just in front of the platform. These seats will be reserved for them, but all the other conferees and delegates will be seated in the order of their arrival at each meeting. The latter will be accommodated with the chairs which are used at White house musicales, but, for the governors, will be provided larger chairs. The seats will be arranged in semi-circular form, with an aisle running east and west through the center of the room. Provision will be made at the front of the room for a limited number of newspaper and magazine writers.

VISITORS WILL BE BARRED.

Attendance at the sessions will be carefully restricted to those connected with the conference. It has come to the knowledge of the White house that tourists and others are planning to visit Washington at the time of the conference in order that they may visit the sessions. But all these will be disappointed. The White house, except for the executive offices, will be entirely closed to visitors during the three days of the meeting. And so tourists will not have even the usual opportunity to see the building. This strict arrangement has been necessitated by the limited capacity of the East room, and by the great number of requests which have been made. The outlook is that the governors and delegates, together with cabinet members, justices of the Supreme court and members of Congress will entirely fill the East room. All entrances except the east gate will be closed, and admission there will be upon the presentation of engraved cards, with which governors and delegates have been provided.

A REMARKABLE SOCIAL EVENT.

Three social functions will mark conference week. The first will be a dinner given Tuesday evening by President Roosevelt. At this dinner a President of the United States will for the first time meet socially the governors of practically all the states and territories. At the dinner President Roosevelt will also entertain the justices of the Supreme court, Secretaries Wilson and Garfield of the cabinet, whose departments are peculiarly concerned in the conference, the members of the inland waterways commission and the special guests—William Jennings Bryan, James J. Hill, Andrew Carnegie and John Mitchell. Former President Cleveland, who was invited, will probably be unable to attend because of his recent illness.

PINCHOT ALSO TO ENTERTAIN.

Gifford Pinchot will give a reception Thursday evening at his residence, 1615 Rhode Island avenue. There the delegates, conferees, cabinet members, chiefs of government bureaus and members of the press will have an opportunity to meet the governors and the members of the inland waterways commission.

Mrs. Roosevelt will give a garden party Friday afternoon in the south grounds of the White house, in honor of the visiting governors. All of the guests will be presented to Mrs. Roosevelt. Music will be furnished by the Marine band.

Two remarkable publications have direct connection with the conference. The textbook for much of the discussion will be the appendix to the preliminary report of the Inland Waterways commission. The word appendix, as applied to that monumental publication, is misleading. From the standpoint of bulk, at least, it is like saying that a dog is appended to his tail.

A SYMPOSIUM ON WATERWAYS.

The report itself contains in condensed forms the important conclusions of the commission. But the appendix gives, at length, facts upon which those conclusions are based. It gives accurate figures upon the decline of steam navigation upon Western rivers, and even goes into such detail as to present the names of practically all steamers plying on the Mississippi. It shows in detail how the tonnage on the inland waterways has declined, and gives other information little short of startling on rail and water transportation. It presents a list of all the canals in the country, and tells which of them is owned or controlled by railroads. It presents, too, a list of the abandoned canals, and shows why they were abandoned.

These are only a few things shown in this work, which is really a great encyclopedia of the waterways of this country.

The second publication will be devoted to a history of the conference. The proceedings will be reported stenographically, and will be edited and published in book form with illustrations.

THE CONFERENCE OPENS WEDNESDAY.

The conference will open Wednesday morning, May 13. As the governors arrive at the White house, they will be received by the President. Thereafter the President and the governors will join the delegates in the East room, and the President will open the conference with an address. He will probably be followed by Andrew Carnegie, who will speak on "Ores and Related Minerals." James J. Hill, who will speak later, will present his estimate of the railroad extensions which will be demanded by the future needs of the country, and their cost. He will discuss the important questions of terminals—a question which is giving river men no little anxiety. And he will consider the possibilities of co-operation between rail and water transportation, particularly showing the necessity for waterway development to meet transportation requirements.

OTHERS WHO WILL SPEAK.

The subject of navigation will be presented by Prof. Emory R. Johnson, professor of transportation and commerce in the University of Pennsylvania. He will give figures on the cost of water transportation, will show its possibilities and will describe its decline in this country in recent years.

"Power" will be considered by Mr. H. S. Putnam, electrical engineer, New York. He will present estimates of the power now developed in this country, and the probable rate of increase. The most important phase of his discussion, however, will be that in which he will deal with the electrification of railroads.

Dr. T. C. Chamberlain, professor of geology in the University of Chicago, will tell in detail about the 500 million dollar waste which this country suffers every year through soil wash. He will develop the fact that normally soil ought to grow richer with cultivation, and will outline the way in which erosion can be prevented.

A KANSAS CITY MAN'S ADDRESS.

R. A. Long of Kansas City will make estimates on the timber supply of the country, and will tell the necessity, as viewed by a practical lumberman, of forest conservation. He will show that the forests have a direct influence on richness of soil, on stream flow and on the clarity and purity of water, and that they can be made to play an important part in waterway improvement, as is the case, for instance, in the proposed national forests in the White and Appalachian mountains.

Dr. George M. Kober of Washington, D. C., in presenting the subject of sanitation, will devote himself particularly to the practical benefits of a pure water supply for cities. He has prepared figures to show that the expense of securing pure water is more than met by decreased sickness.

George C. Pardee of Oakland, Cal., will describe the benefits of reclamation. He will show that irrigation and the drainage of swamp lands can be co-ordinated with the checking of floods and the development of power.

MANY OTHER DETAILED SUBJECTS.

Judge Joseph M. Carey of Cheyenne, Wyo., will discuss the necessity of good land laws, and will show that the country's resources will be better conserved by a system of small freeholds than by the tenantry system.

H. A. Jastro of Bakersfield, Cal., president of the American National Live Stock association, will discuss grazing and stock raising in relation to the natural resources. He will show that overgrazing has greatly reduced the capacity of grazing lands in the United States.

Dr. I. C. White, state geologist of West Virginia and professor of geology in the University of West Virginia, will make estimates on the duration of mineral fuels. He will tell about the improvident system of mining by which only about 50 per cent of the coal is removed, and will explain how coal is wasted in heating, smelting and gas production. He will explain how the coal supply can be conserved, and will consider possible substitutes for fuel. The discussion on coal mining will be led by John Mitchell, ex-president of the United Mine Workers.

As the conference proceeds, the governors and delegates will have opportunities to ask questions and make suggestions. After the experts have been heard they will consider what ought to be done in encouragement of a policy of conservation.

BIG SCHOOL MEET FRIDAY

MORE THAN 750 CHILDREN WILL COMPETE IN CONVENTION HALL.

A Parade of Contestants and Officials Will Open the Programme—Preliminaries in All of the Races Have Been Run Already.

Only five days until the ward school athletic meeting in Convention hall, Friday night, May 15. More than 750 boys and girls are to take part in the events and every one of the number has been working hard for weeks to learn the things that had to be learned before a boy or girl could go into the big contest. Every dollar these children earn by their entertainment is to go to the fund now amounting to $2,000, to buy equipment for playgrounds.

Approximately thirty-five schools will be entered in the meeting Friday night. If present arrangements do not miscarry the contestants, led by a brass band and the officials in evening dress will enter the arena at the Thirteenth street side of the hall and parade past the judges' box in review. After this feature the girls, 260 in number, will be seated in the south end of the west second balcony in charge of teachers, principals or athletic instructors. The boys, nearly 600 of them, will have seats in the north end of the same balcony.

TO PREVENT CONFUSION.

Tickets for all these seats will be sent to the schools so that no confusion should be necessary. When the children are desired for the contests in which they have been entered Martin A. Delaney, clerk of the course, will send an assistant to the proper section to conduct them to the arena. No teachers, principals or parents will be allowed in the arena and contestants, who have finished their work, will be expected to return to their seats—or go home. This rule is absolutely necessary to preserve order in the arena and prevent interference in the contests.

Martin Delaney, the athletic instructor, believes the chief events Friday night will be the 50-yard dash for girls and the bean bag relay for girls. In the first event there are first, second and third prizes—gold, silver and bronze. Twenty-five schools will have girls entered in the bean bag relay, about 240 girls. None of these girls will be allowed to run in the 50-yard dash, in which thirty-four girls have been entered to date. A man will be assigned to watch every one of the contesting teams in the bean bag relay to see that the bag is fairly passed.

IN THE REGULAR RELAYS 200 BOYS.

More than 200 boys have entered for the regular relay races and twenty-four for the special relay. Two hundred and forty boys are to participate in the special events. The preliminaries in all the races were run yesterday morning, under Martin Delaney's direction. This means that only the finals will remain to be run Friday night. The entertainment, therefore, will be concluded before 11 o'clock.

Louis W. Shouse, president of the Kansas City Playground association and manager of Convention hall, will send out tickets to-morrow to the several schools for the contestants. No passes will be issued except to the contestants, their chaperons and instructors and the officials of the meeting. The price of general admission will be twenty-five cents.

All the medals, seven sets and nine cups, to be awarded to the winning contestants are now to be seen in the window of A. G. Spaulding & Co., on Walnut street.

A MONTANA "BAD MAN" SHOT.

"Pigeon-Toed Kid" Was the Title of This Particular Cattle Thief.

WILLISTON, N. D., May 9.—"Pigeon-toed Kid," one of the "bad men" of Eastern Montana, was killed by a deputy sheriff named Calderwood, at the Bonnable ranch in Valley county, Montana, Thursday night, and his body was brought to Culbertson in a spring wagon. The "kid's" real name was J. C. Brown. He was "wanted" for cattle rustling in both Montana and Canada.

Sheriff Small ascertained that his man was at the Bonnable ranch and organized a posse which made its way through the Popular Creek country.

The "kid" was completely surprised. When ordered to throw up his hands he reached for his gun and Calderwood shot him through the breast.

The bullet passed completely through his body and struck John Mabelle, a herder, in the shoulder. The "kid" asked for writing material, but before he could use it, he became unconscious and died in less than an hour. The "kid" and Calderwood had met in conflict before, and it was the rustler's announced determination to "get" the officer in some way.

A BOYCOTT ON SCHOOL MA'AMS.

Chester, Pa., Teachers Rode on a Car With a Non-Union Crew.

CHESTER, PA., May 9.—Miss Annie Anderson and Miss Annie J. McFarland, teachers in the Moton avenue school, who, during a heavy rain storm on Thursday rode home in a street car of the company, against which a strike was inaugurated a month ago, have formally apologized to their pupils.

When the children learned the teachers had ridden on a car manned by non-union men they refused to attend school. The teachers say they did not suppose that their action in riding home in the worst storm in two years would be criticised in so severe a manner. They say they are in sympathy with the strikers and promise not to ride again during the boycott. Both teachers, it is probable, will be transferred to another school for the remainder of the term.

HANG ON

Coffee Topers as Bad as Others

"A friend of our family who lived with us a short time was a great coffee drinker and a continual sufferer with dyspepsia. He admitted that coffee disagreed with him, but you know how the coffee drinker will hold on to his coffee, even if he knows it causes dyspepsia.

"One day he said to me that Postum Food Coffee had been recommended and suggested that he would like very much to try it. I secured a package and made it strictly according to directions. He was delighted with the new beverage, as was every one of our family. He became very fond of it and in a short time his dyspepsia disappeared. He continued using the Postum and in about three months gained twelve pounds.

"My husband is a practicing physician and regards Postum as most healthful of all beverages. He never drinks coffee, but is very fond of Postum. In fact, all of our family are, and we never think of drinking coffee any more." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

FIVE FLOORS FOR MILLINERY

B. ADLER TO INTRODUCE A DEPARTMENT STORE OF HATS HERE.

A Lease on the Bayard Building and on the Lower Floor of a Structure Adjoining Obtained—The Rapid Growth of the Company.

To the West for ideas and progress!

Kansas City is to have the first millinery department store in the United States, perhaps in the world, beginning January 1.

The B. Adler Millinery Company at 1212 and 1214 Main street promises this innovation. When ready for business, the new store will occupy five floors and basement, of seventy-nine feet frontage, and nothing except millinery will be sold. The departments will number between twenty and twenty-five and will be conducted and advertised on the same plan as the big stores selling general merchandise.

THE BAYARD BUILDING LEASED.

As a preliminary to the opening of the new and larger store, Mr. Adler obtained a lease on the Bayard building, at 1212 and 1214 Main street, for a period of twenty-two years. The consideration named in the lease is $222,000. Mr. Adler bound himself to spend not less than $25,000 in remodeling the building and must also pay all taxes, insurance, repairs, etc.

Then Mr. Adler took a five-year lease on the lower floor of the building on the north, thereby adding twenty feet of frontage on Main street to the fifty-nine feet within the Bayard building. So soon as the tenants of the Bayard building and the store on the north vacate, the work of remodeling, as planned by Mr. Adler, will begin.

WAS BUILT IN 1886.

The Bayard building is owned by Nathaniel Thayer of Boston. It was built in 1886 and was named for a brother of Mr. Thayer. The cost of the building approximately was $100,000. Mr. Thayer was represented by L. E. Baird & Co. in the deal.

The growth of the B. Adler Millinery company has been rapid. Fifteen years ago Mr. Adler began business in a room 12x20 feet square on the second floor of an old building on Main street, between Fifth street and Missouri avenue. By easy stages Mr. Adler increased his business and outgrew larger quarters until he finally moved to the Bayard building, taking the lower floor and the basement.

A BIG GAIN IN BUSINESS.

"Our wholesale business last month was 70 per cent greater than our wholesale business in April of last year," Mr. Adler said yesterday. "Now I employ 135 people. When the new store is opened I expect to employ from 250 to 300. The departments will be so classified that a customer may purchase exactly what she or he may want. For instance, there will be a general division for untrimmed hats, with separate departments for baby hats, high school hats, hats for misses, hats for young women, for elderly women, and the same classification will apply to trimmed hats, also hats hand-made, hats in various other kinds and styles."

"To what do you attribute your success and the astonishing growth of your firm?" Mr. Adler was asked.

THE STAR, ENERGY AND HONESTY.

"Energy, honesty and The Star. I am a firm believer in a square deal for everybody—one price, a fair profit, and no deviation. Let the people know what you have, which means publicity, and publicity means The Star.

"Kansas City to-day is the hub of American prosperity. There is no other city in the United States quite so fortunately situated—no other city with the same splendid future. Prosperity is for Kansas City, and you simply can't hold it down.

"There used to be talk about the Twelfth street dead line. There is no dead line for the man who has something the people want at fair prices. I'm going to join others in proving to the people that the Twelfth street dead line doesn't exist."

MUST CONSULT THE GOVERNOR.

Oklahoma's Attorney General Was Too Strenuous on the Trusts.

GUTHRIE, OK., May 9.—Corporations suspected of being members of trusts and combinations in restraint of trade, etc., in Oklahoma have been leading an unhappy and uncertain existence ever since Charles West became state attorney general. Proceeding of his own volition, he has begun suits as unexpectedly as a clap of thunder from a clear sky, seeking to throw corporations into the hands of receivers and drive them from the state. Only a few weeks ago he asked for a receiver for the Rock Island railroad company in an attempt to demolish the alleged Rock Island-Frisco merger.

West frequently brought his suits without consulting Governor Haskell. Under the territorial government suits were not brought by the attorney general unless authorized by the governor. His office having been created in the state constitution, West has insisted that officially he was independent of all other state officials. A change has come and hereafter suits will not be brought by the attorney general until Governor Haskell has been consulted and his consent obtained.

That an understanding of this kind has been reached is certain. Governor Haskell, at least, has made this demand. Its effect would be to make the attorney general subordinate to the governor. Governor Haskell says he is something of a "trust buster" himself, but the activity of Attorney General West is said to have been too strenuous for him.

THIS IS ST. JOSEPH'S DAY.

The Italians Announced Its Approach Last Night With Fireworks.

When the inhabitants of Little Italy fired a number of giant firecrackers about 8:30 o'clock last night persons in other parts of the city who heard the noise became alarmed. Several called police headquarters over the telephone to learn the cause of the disturbance. It was merely a small demonstration to announce the approach of St. Joseph's day. The fireworks were touched off near the Holy Rosary church, 911 Missouri avenue.

"St. Joseph's day is to the Italians what St. Patrick's day is to the Irish," the Rev. Charles Delbecchi, pastor of the church, said last night.

"It always is the third Sunday after Easter. It is a religious feast day for the Italians. There will be a big parade to-morrow morning. It will start from the church at 9 o'clock and march around the Italian quarter. The Italian Boys' band will lead the procession. They will return to the church at 10:30 o'clock. High mass will be solemnized and we will have a special musical programme. To-morrow night there will be more fireworks."

DEMOCRATS TO MEET MAY 18.

Delegates Will Be Named for the State Convention.

The Democrats of Jackson county will hold six little conventions Monday, May 18, to name seventy delegates to the state convention to be held in Jefferson City, May 20. This convention will name a delegation to Denver to vote for Bryan for President.

William J. Stone has announced that he doesn't desire to be a delegate-at-large and Governor Folk has said he is not a candidate for delegate, but will serve if elected. There doesn't appear to be much chance of a contest in the convention over who shall constitute the "Big Four," unless somebody who is not considered now should get into the race. There is the same apathy about candidates for district delegates.

The Fifth district has two delegates to elect, but neither Pendergast nor Shannon or even Judge Ross knows of a single candidate for the honor. They know plenty of candidates for small jobs in the city hall—that's all.

Although there is not much of consequence to be done by the state convention, the county committee, which met yesterday, decided on an elaborate system for electing the delegates. There will be ballot primaries in all the wards in Kansas City and mass meetings in all the townships of the county Saturday afternoon. For the ballot primaries in the city, delegations must be filed with the election commissioners Thursday. Monday the delegates elected Saturday will meet in district conventions, one convention in each of the six legislative districts of the county. There will be about 500 delegates in the six conventions. The conventions and the number of delegates each will elect will be: First district, courthouse in Independence, twelve delegates; Second district, Justice Richardson's courtroom, eighteen delegates; Third district, Wirthman's hall, twelve delegates; Fourth district, Justice Shepard's courtroom, eight delegates; Fifth district, Justice Ross's courtroom, ten delegates; Sixth district, corner Sixth street and Prospect avenue, ten delegates.

OVERDUE PAY FOR EMPLOYEES.

Governor Haskell Signs the Appropriation Bill After Many Delays.

GUTHRIE, OK., May 9.—The general appropriation bill, after much delay, was signed to-day by Governor Haskell and state employees now will be able to draw their salaries, which have been held in abeyance for months. A number of the employees, having exhausted their funds, were reduced to a rather harsh extremity.

The bill carries a total appropriation of $352,282.61 for the nineteen and one-half months following statehood. Governor Haskell vetoed the bill to the amount of $76,282.61, cutting out almost the entire appropriation for the corporation commission for the reason that, in his opinion, some of the salaries were too small to secure the services of competent employees. As a separate appropriation will be made for this department, a position of bookkeeper, held by the wife of the state auditor, M. E. Trapp, at $100 a month, was struck from the bill.

ROUGH TALK IN THE HOUSE

CHARGES OF DISHONESTY MADE BY THE PARTY LEADERS.

Mr. Payne Accused the Democrats of Stealing Elections and Mr. Williams, the Minority Leader, Replied in Kind.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Sectional lines were sharply drawn in the House to-day and for a time charges and counter charges of dishonesty in elections by both political parties were heard. Interest in the proceedings was all the more keen because the two floor leaders, Mr. Payne of New York and Mr. Williams of Mississippi, were the principals in the stage setting.

Mr. Payne got the floor and criticised the minority leader for having had the hardihood to say "he was in favor of honest elections."

"Since when was the Democratic party in favor of honest elections?" he inquired in stentorian tones. "Was it," he asked, "when it was depriving a certain class of citizens of suffrage by every means, by perjury, fraud, intimidation, murder, riot and everything else under the sun?"

He wished to know if the Democrats favored honesty in elections in the state of New York, "when time after time they carried the election, not by the honest ballot but by fraudulent votes deposited in the ballot boxes and fraudulent counts."

MR. WILLIAMS'S BITING REPLY.

Mr. Williams replied that he had listened to the lecture upon honesty in elections from the leader of the Republican party, 'the party of fresh, new, crisp $2 bills; the party of blocks of five; the party of the city of Philadelphia; the party that carried the election in 1896 by wholesale bribery; the party that even as late as 1904 denied that it had been receiving money from fiduciary corporations for political purposes and whose officials were convicted of falsehood in the denial; the party of Herods.

"If there was anything that was a stench in the nostrils of all humanity," he said, "it was the city of Philadelphia.

"Ih has such a bad smell," he declared, "that even the Republicans themselves could not stand it all the time."

Mr. Williams admitted that there was a time when there was intimidation and fraud in his section of the country, but there was some extenuation for it "when a great race was engaged in saving its civilization."

"There never was, however," he exclaimed, "any excuse or extenuation for the Republican party in its programme of wholesale bribery in 1896, 1900 and 1904 when that party took the money belonging to widows and orphans and never had the manhood or justice to return it."

QUOTED THE PRESIDENT.

"At one time," he said, "President Roosevelt had the manhood to say that the Republican campaign committee ought to return the money that had been filched from the widows and orphans and beneficiaries and policyholders of the New York Life and New York Mutual Insurance companies."

Crossing the aisle, and pointing his finger at Mr. Payne, Mr. Williams fairly shrieked:

"Yes," said he, "there was a time in the history of the South, when revolution stood in the saddle," but, he added, "since then those states have adopted new constitutions.

"The disfranchisement laws," he declared, "were passed for the purpose of preventing fraud, and the Supreme court of the United States has upheld them."

TO KEEP GORE IN OFFICE.

The Blind Senator's Friends Trying to Discourage Possible Opponents.

GUTHRIE, OK., May 9.—At a caucus of Democratic members of the house to-day, resolutions were adopted unanimously indorsing Senator Thomas Pryor Gore for renomination and election next fall. No reference was made to Senator Owen.

Friends of Senator Gore wish to keep him in national politics that he may aid in the campaign for the election of William J. Bryan. These friends feel that the resolutions adopted to-day may prevent other candidates coming out against Gore for the nomination, which would leave him free to spend much of his time outside the state next fall. They fear, however, that M. L. Turner of Oklahoma City may be a candidate.

SALINA, KAS., May 9.—The culmination of a love affair which began during the childhood of the two principals, came about when George B. Immediately after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Smith began their journey to Nome. Mr. Smith was formerly a Bennington Boy.

TILLIE BULLENE TO LANSING.

Judge Pollock in the federal court to-day ordered Tillie Bullene, who pleaded guilty to counterfeiting, to be confined in the Kansas state penitentiary at Lansing for one year and six months. She was sentenced to the federal prison at Leavenworth for that term, but was not received there because of lack of accommodations for women. The woman and George Elliot, sentenced to the federal prison for two and one-half years, were arrested one week ago at 511 Locust street.

EVANS IS ON HIS WAY EAST

THE ADMIRAL WAS TOO ILL TO BID HIS COMMAND FAREWELL.

An Address, However, Was Read on Board Each of the Vessels—Admiral Thomas Makes Speedy Bow as Commander to Join Revels.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 9.—Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans's flag was hauled down from the main truck of the Connecticut in San Francisco harbor to-day and the first commander-in-chief of America's first battle ship fleet is now on his way to his home in Washington to remain on waiting orders until the date of his retirement, August 18.

Accompanied by members of his family and his staff, Admiral Evans left at 6:20 o'clock this evening. No advance announcement of the hour of departure had been made, in order that crowds at the ferry terminal and Oakland railway station might be avoided.

As the blue ensign of the retiring commander fluttered down to the after bridge of the Connecticut to-day a new flag of similar design was broken out in token of the presence of a new chief, Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas, who brought the ships from Magdalena bay to Santa Cruz and acted for Admiral Evans at all the South American and Southern California social functions of the cruise, taking over control of the big fleet in his own right. The bunting of the new commander was saluted by thirteen guns fired from every ship in the fleet.

Admiral Evans was not permitted by his physician to go aboard the Connecticut during the ceremonies attending his relinquishment of active naval service. The address expressed the great regret the admiral felt in leaving the ships and his thanks for the loyal support of the men and officers during his long tour of command.

The salutes prescribed by the naval regulations were the only manifestations of pomp or ceremony attending Admiral Thomas's assumption of command. It was his desire that the requirements of the occasion should be as simple as possible. Not long after his flag was flying he had returned to the shore to participate in the welcome which Oakland—across the bay—desired to extend to the fleet.

CARNIVAL TO OPEN TO-DAY

MIKE LENGE'S BANDA BIANCA WILL BE THE FEATURE ATTRACTION.

Several Italian Soloists of Note Are Among the Members—Several Interesting Vaudeville Acts for the Wigwam.

The Banda Bianca di Milano, or the White Band of Milan, will begin its engagement at Carnival park this afternoon with the opening of that park. Michelino Angelo Lenge will be its conductor. The band contains several Italian soloists of note and it has a library of both popular and classical music which is very large. The sounding shell at Carnival park was rewired especially for the novelty numbers which the Banda Bianca will offer. They will be amusing as well as entertaining. Each night's programme will end with moving pictures which will be accompanied by specially arranged music. Those who are familiar with Signor Lenge's skill in selecting appropriate music for the Orpheum's moving pictures can appreciate what he will do with a full band and music selected in advance. At the conclusion of its engagement at Carnival park the Banda Bianca will make its first American tour, playing the cities of the East.

MICHELINO ANGELO LENGE.

THE VAUDEVILLE ACTS.

Vaudeville is to be made a feature at Carnival park this year. Five acts will be given each week in the Wigwam. They will be of a better class than is usually given in a park. The same association that books for the Orpheum will select them. For the opening week the bill is strong. The Del Costa quartet, two men and two women, sing operatic and popular selections. The Pedersen brothers are comedians and ring artists. Frank Tinney is a black face monologist. Charles Ledegar, "the Flying Dutchman," presents a comedy act upon the bounding rope. Estelle Hirsh is a dainty young singing comedienne. In addition to the vaudeville numbers there will be selections by a good orchestra. A small admission fee will be charged this year.

Al of the concessions have been overhauled and new features have been added. The picnic grounds have been enlarged and already several lodges have selected dates for their outings. The Bankers' association will entertain its members and visitors at a banquet and outing at the park on May 14.

THE BAND PROGRAMME.

The programme for to-night will include the Patrick Gilmore arrangement of the sextet from "Lucia." To-day's programmes follow:

THE FAIRMOUNT PARK OPENING.

"Billy," the old boatman at Fairmount park, held a lantern high above his head late last night and looked at the brightly painted boats tied against the mooring of the boathouse.

"Everything's ready," he said slowly. Then he lowered the flame of the lantern. "Won't need you any more—after to-night," he murmured. "To-morrow night th' arc lights'll be shinin', th' boats'll be chasin' around th' lake, th' moon'll be beamin' an' th' girls danglin' their hands in th' water an' talkin' kinda soft like—but what's th' use of talkin'?"

And 'Billy' turned quickly to catch the last car for home.

But the boats won't be the only attraction at Fairmonut park to-day. There will also be the dancing pavilion, the Angora goat farm, the new roller rink and various other concessions.

H. O. Wheeler, who, with his American band, is to furnish the music at the park this summer, has provided an attractive programme for to-day. Here are the numbers for the afternoon and night:

AFTERNOON.

War March of the Priests	Mendelssohn
Grand Selection from "The Bohemian Girl"	Balfe
Valse de Concert, Jolly Fellows	Vollstedt
Polish National Dance	Scharwenka

"La Paloma"	Tradier

The soloists for Mr. Wheeler this season are: Benjamin Kendricks, cornet; Charles Pinney, trumpet; Gustave Berndt, clarinet; William Schellhaus, euphonium, and O. B. Edington, trombone.

There will be a two minute car service to the park to-day on the Twelfth street and Grand View car lines.

A NEW PAVILION AT ELECTRIC.

An Effort Will Be Made to Finish the Work Before Next Sunday.

Electric park is to have a band pavilion, after all, and in time for its opening next Sunday, too. After the big pavilion was destroyed by fire, a few nights ago, it was planned to construct a sounding shell for the band, and have seats for the audience in the open air. Even after this plan was decided upon, M. G. Heim, one of the owners of the park, consulted with several firms of architects, and at last engaged one to undertake the building of a pavilion that will seat 8,000 persons. It must be finished in seven days. The pavilion will, of course, not be as handsome as the one which was burned, but it will serve its purpose well.

Work on the new pavilion is going forward rapidly, the men working in alternate shifts from 6 o'clock in the morning to midnight. The covered promenade in front of the pavilion space has been almost entirely rebuilt, and is nearly ready for the painters.

Sorrentino and his Banda Rossa will be the big opening attraction at the park's first day, next Sunday. The Banda Rossa is well known to Kansas City. Sorrentino has spent the winter adding strength to his organization.

There will be many new amusements at Electric park this summer, the most pretentious of which is probably the Tickler, which faces the main entrance and attracts attention at once by its size, and its promise of an entirely different ride. The German Village has been converted into a roller skating rink, with a maple floor.

The concessions and amusements, which are standard features of the park, are preparing for the opening next Sunday.

THE ATTRACTIONS AT FOREST.

A Balloon Ascension Will Be a Feature To-Night if the Wind Is Not Too Strong.

If the wind is not too strong a balloon ascension will be an attraction at Forest park to-night, accompanied by a display of aerial fireworks. Dempsy, the aeronaut, will make a parachute leap enveloped in flame. The Senegambians have been busy all week rehearsing a new potpourri of catchy songs and preparing several big ensemble numbers. They will no longer appear in the bandstand on the lawn, but will to-day make their first appearance on the new stage that has been erected for them in the pavilion adjoining the dancing hall. The new roller skating rink is doing a big business. Last night the big floor was filled to its capacity. Some fancy skaters will appear to-day in exhibitions.

Kennedy's Wild West show is another feature. Chief Dove Feather, war chief of the Cheyennes, arrived yesterday and will personally conduct the green corn dance, which the Indians will introduce to-day for the first time since the arrival of the outfit.

BAPTISTS BUY A HOSPITAL.

The Blue River Association Takes Over the Sheffield Institution.

The building at 720 Bennington avenue, formerly the Sheffield hospital, has been sold to a newly organized incorporation which is to be called the Baptist Hospital of Kansas City. The chief stockholders are Baptists of the Blue River association. The hospital is to be opened Tuesday morning under the new management.

Dr. S. S. Landon, who owned the Sheffeld hospital, was recently forced to retire from active business on account of his health and the Baptists, who since the meeting of the Blue River association last fall had been contemplating the erection of a building, immediately began negotiations with him for the property. The building is a three-story structure of vitrified brick. It was built in 1906 and has modern equipment. There is room for forty patients.

"The Baptists have three hospitals in St. Louis, and had been contemplating the opening of one in Kansas City for some time," John B. Pew, the secretary of the board of directors of the new hospital, said yesterday. While all of the directors and those who subscribed for stock in the corporation are Baptists, the idea of the institution is not to promote Baptist doctrines, but to make it a place where Baptists in this part of the country may send their charity patients."

The following are the other officers of the board of directors: W. S. Crouch, president; J. M. Davidson, vice-president, and the Rev. H. W. Virgin, secretary. Miss Mary L. Binger, who formerly was associated with a sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich., is to be superintendent of the new hospital.

RED CROSS OPEN TO ALL NOW

AN EFFORT TO INCREASE THE MEMBERSHIP IN THE COUNTRY.

The Application, Accompanied by One Dollar, All That Is Necessary—Japan Far Ahead of the United States—An International Meeting Soon.

Are you a member of the Red Cross? If not, it is easy for you to join, now. The government has thrown open the American National Red Cross to general membership and applications for enrollment are being received in large numbers. Under the new plan every good American citizen—man, woman or child—is eligible to membership. It is only necessary to send the enrollment fee of $1 and address the application to William H. Taft, president of the association, Room 341, War Department, Washington. The applicant will receive a badge of membership and the Red Cross Bulletin for one year.

Local or neighborhood circles may be formed by seven or more friends or neighbors getting together and sending the fees and names and addresses to the president. Children are eligible. The local circle should choose a president and secretary and a local name, which will be enrolled in Washington. The secretary will receive instructions as to meetings, the subjects to be discussed and the fields of endeavor.

It is suggested that a physician be included in each circle.

The work of the Red Cross is international. In times of war or great public disasters it has been especially effective. Its mission is to relieve suffering. It provides nurses, doctors and medical supplies after great disasters.

Statistics show that Japan leads the world with 1,300,000 members and more than 3 million dollars in resources. The United States is fourth, with only 11,000 members and $21,000 in resources. The international meeting in 1912 is expected to be held in Washington and it is desired to increase the American membership to a million by that time.

"The uniform trend of decisions is against trial of any issues by a jury in matrimonial actions, save where absolute divorce is asked."

IF there's any sale feature illustrating more vividly than another the brea chandise Fair---this sale of summer Waists certainly is that feature. I mer Waists---Waists that are so demanded that stores generally find it har

Ready to Sell Monday

These Waists come from Rand Brothers of Philadelphia. They are their famous Columbia Wa excellent workmanship which bring them the equal of dress-maker made garments at three or four

Now you want to know the reason for this extraordinary sale—the reason for our being able to sell Waists that are being picked up these days at regular prices just as fast as they are being shown! The reason is this: Rand Brothers' stock of materials—especially the embroideries and laces—which were used in the making of certain numbers, became depleted. When it was necessary to use twenty or thirty thousand yards of embroideries in making up a regular line of Columbia Waists for a customer, they found they had but four or five thousand yards of a pattern.

Too many Waists and too many different styles to attempt description. The illustrations above effects. These Waists are of fine plain white lawns, white barred lawns, sheer white and figured batistes

Beautiful Decorated Porcelain Dishes, 10c

Section B, Third Floor, Main St. Bldg.

THERE'S a trade reason back of this ridiculously low price. It is this: After the dishes are shaped, fired and glazed, boys and girls handle each and every one, looking for flaws and little blemishes in the glazing. Those dishes which are flawless are put in one pile and the others—sometimes the blemishes are too slight for a layman to notice at all—are put in another pile.

These latter are decorated with patterns which cover up these little blemishes in the glazing to the best advantage and when they are sold at the factory they are termed "second selection."

These Dishes which we shall offer at 10c each are "second selection" bought all the way from a third to two-thirds off the usual prices for first selection.

Included in the great stock are all the dishes you use three times a day—dinner plates, breakfast plates, cups and saucers, sauce dishes, soup plates, oblong vegetable dishes, bowls and meat platters. The decorations are really beautiful, some in gold traced three color floral designs, others in rich illuminated gold border patterns. Not a dish in the lot worth less than 15c in "first selection" and some (and, we think, they really should be "first selection" at that) are marked 35c. You may choose to-morrow in the May Merchandise Fair any size, shape or pattern at, each 10c

Motor Cars and Motorists

A PROBLEM which shortly must be faced by the motor car industry is the damage rubber tires cause to macadam roads. It has long been contended by highway engineers that motor cars are rapidly shortening the lives of rock surface roads and many experiments have been made in the last six or seven years to determine the actual extent of the damage done. Recently the United States government took up the matter and conducted a series of tests on the famous conduit road a dozen miles from Washington.

While a racing car and others of various weights and types made many trips over the selected stretch of a mile and a half at varying rates of speed, from five to sixty-five miles an hour, a corps of skilled photographers, equipped with the most modern devices for photographing vehicles at very high speeds, made accurate records of the various tests.

Those who witnessed the experiments could not doubt for a moment that the various road experts all over the world are correct in the opinion that very rapidly driven motor cars are quickly tearing up the surface of the macadam roads, for not only were huge clouds of dust lifted into the air and blown off the road, but careful examination showed that the material under the wheel tracks of the machine was distinctly loosened and raveled even in the short period of these tests.

No such effects were noticeable after the passing of iron-tired vehicles; the series of tests beginning with the passing of a horse-drawn vehicle. This was photographed as it moved along and also as the wagon tires passed a given mark. Then the motor cars were sent over the course. The first was a heavy weight touring car moving at five miles an hour. A series of pictures was made of that car on its many journeys at varying rates of speed until the maximum of forty-five miles an hour was attained. Then the work was taken up by the huge racer, which tore down the road at a speed of fifty miles an hour, then at fifty-five, sixty and finally at sixty-five. It fairly lifted the road surfacing material as it sped along, regular ridges of rock dust rising in front of the rear wheels and floating away in blinding clouds. Other tests were made and other pictures taken of various types of heavy limousine cars and runabouts. It was plainly noticeable and was commented on that the cars when moving at the slow rates of speed equal to the speed made by horse-drawn vehicles made very little dust, the theory that fast speeding motors are responsible for road surface destruction being thoroughly substantiated by these means.

To understand how the soft, broad tires of the modern motor car can work an injury to a surface that not only withstands but improves under the constant passing and repassing of vehicles with iron tires, one must be apprised briefly of the theory on which first Tresauget of Limoges, and later MacAdam of Ayr, worked when giving such highways to the world. They reasoned that a road surfaced with bits of stone would improve under wagon traffic, because the iron tires of the passing vehicles would constantly crush the stones and form rock dust particles; that those rock dust particles would not merely fill in all the interstices between the stones but would also form a surface dust binder; the wettings and rollings tending to cement the dust into a shell-like surface and thus make the entire road one traffic-withstanding, water-shedding mass.

They reasoned well and wisely. The macadam roads lived up to the theories of their inventors and improved with the passing years until the advent of the motor car. It was but a short time after it came into vogue that highway engineers in all civilized lands learned that a new condition was confronting them and that established customs were being menaced. The trouble was quickly traced to the motor car, and it was studied. It was soon noted that the soft rubber tire was the highway menace. It crushed no rock itself and therefore contributed no quota of the needful surface dust binder, while the tremendous tractive force of the rear wheels drew up the dust made by the iron-tired wagons and sent it whirling away over adjacent lands.

C. A. Kiger and W. W. Ryan bought Packard "30s" from E. P. Moriarty last week, making fifteen Packards sold to Kansas City persons this spring. A Stevens-Duryea "light six" was delivered to Peter Soden. J. J. Heim bought a Stevens-Duryea of the same type. The same firm delivered a Stevens-Duryea car to E. W. Cowden, vice president of the Lee Hardware company at Salina, Kas.

"A man with nerves has no business in the tonneau of a record breaking motor car. It is difficult enough to keep one's person in the machine without being compelled to hold the heart in its proper place in the body.

"On a hill climb, when the car rushes across the starting line at sixty miles per, the feeling is one of intense exhilaration, but when the first bump is struck, figuratively you descend to the earth again, but literally you perform quite the contrary action. Suddenly your legs become unmanageable, and, narrowly missing the head of the driver or mechanic on the front seat, your feet shoot into the air above your head. The descent does come in time, but it does not come without accident, for you are certain to strike the back of the tonneau on your way down.

"By this time you are so engrossed in maintaining your precarious hold on the car that the prospect of turning over worries you only as a remote and not unwelcome relief to the troubles which have already assailed you.

"There is a stone wall at the side of the grade, presumably as a safety precaution, but the fiendish way in which the man at the wheel holds the skidding machine toward it promises only a contest of strength which can have but one ending. But the turn is safely made and the sight of relief is lost in the final bump as the machine goes over the finish line.

"The official timers make a careful inspection to assure themselves that they are all there. Then the older one, glancing at his watch, says:

"'A new record, but what a fool a married man is to make such a trip.'

"The younger is unmarried and therefore without wisdom. He says nothing, but reflects joyously that there is much in life to compensate him for his determination never to ride in a record breaker again."

This from W. W. Cowen, president of the Automobile club:

"Would the Bible story be the same if the patience of Job had been tried with a set of cheap tires?"

Here is some advice to prospective buyers from K. C. Pardee of the Maxwell company:

"It is my belief that the average layman who contemplates purchasing or has purchased a car sees published so many technical articles that he scarce knows what to believe. A few hints in a practical way may not be amiss.

"I would suggest to the buyer that after he has decided what car he wants, to spend plenty of time going carefully over the construction of his motor and learn, if possible, how to operate it before delivery of the car is made; insist upon the seller answering all questions that he may ask; and answering them repeatedly if necessary, until such time as the matter before him is quite plain. After the general principles of operation become impressed upon his mind other things, such as slight troubles to be remedied and adjustments to be made, will all come to him naturally and easily.

"It at times becomes a hard matter for a would-be purchaser to thoroughly satisfy himself as to the merits of any one particular car. Each ambitious salesman dissertates upon the peculiar advantages of his own car, and unless he be very politic he has some little thing to say against his neighbor, so by the time the would-be customer has made half a dozen calls he is considerably at sea. Insist upon plain, matter of fact statements, explanations and descriptions and not technical possibilities or probabilities."

"Motoring would be less hazardous if it were less popular," E. H. Jones of the Automobile club said the other day.

Many motor car owners, when their machines begin to fall off in power, seem to feel satisfied that it is the natural thing and pay little attention to it unless it falls off very rapidly.

The repair man is often consulted with but little satisfaction. The causes are many, the most common being those brought about by ignorance and misuse.

Improper lubrication may be due to insufficient oil, poor oil, poor circulation of cooling water, over-rich mixture, late spark, running with throttle wide open for long periods and forgetfulness on the part of the driver in keeping the oil supplied and well regulated. In any case, the result is that the cylinder and piston begin to cut, and though they may wear smooth again after a time, their diameters are changed, and after a few such cases the piston will be too small to fit the cylinder and leakage is the result.

Leakages, ever so small, past the piston and rings, tend to blow the lubricating oil away from the surface, and rapid wear is the result. When the motor is cold there will be no leaks and, therefore, the time to test is when the motor is hot.

It is expected that sixty cars will join in the endurance run to Lawrence and Ottawa May 16 under the auspices of the Automobile club. Arrangements have been made to care for the motorists at both places and the event is certain to prove a fine outing for those who participate. The entries close May 14. The runs and tours committee of the Automobile club has formulated a set of rules to govern the contestants. A map of the route has been prepared, too, and a copy will be mailed to each member of the club within a few days.

The site of the proposed country club house for the Automobile club is yet undecided.

"New and more favorable locations are brought to our attention nearly every day," W. W. Cowen, president of the club, said last night. "It is hard to make a decision."

The Automobile Club of America, with which organization the local club of motorists is affiliated, has set apart June 12 of each year as a day for giving an annual outing to orphan children. The Kansas City club of motorists are preparing to give the little folks a great time on that day. The plans for the outing will be announced later.

Kansas City is rapidly becoming one of the greatest distributing points for motor cars in the United States. Within the last thirty days the Buick agency here has received 150 Buick machines in two special trains from the factory at Flint, Mich. These machines were distributed to purchasers in the Southwest.

The Eastern manufacturers of motor cars are looking Westward for their market, according to local dealers who have been in the East recently. Fletcher Cowherd, jr., talked with several big manufacturers while he was attending the Briarcliff races and he says they told him the demand for motor cars was coming largely from the West and Southwest. H. E. Rookridge brought the

WITH AMERICANS IN LONDON

HOW VISITORS FROM THIS SIDE AMUSE THEMSELVES.

Concerts, Meetings and Bazaars Were Numerous Last Week—Paris Didn't Know When to Laugh at the First Presentation of a Shaw Play.

LONDON, May 9.—There were no lack of entertainments in London in the last week. Concerts, meeting and bazaars were numerous. Many English and American notables were encountered in the park and Picadilly whenever the weather permitted.

The Duchess of Sutherland, Mrs. Asquith and Mrs. C. S. Henry all lent their houses for charitable concerts, and Americans were present in large numbers, especially at Mrs. Henry's, where Mrs. Cloman, Mrs. Glasgow and Mrs. Adair helped to make the affair a success.

At the first court the Duchess of Roxburghe, formerly Miss Goelet, will present Lady Alestair Innes-Ker and Mrs. W. L. Breese.

William Waldorf Astor has made arrangements for his usual two concerts a season. This time he will have the chief operatic stars to entertain his guests. Royalty is always represented at these affairs.

A HOUSE FOR MRS. ASTOR, JR.

Mrs. William Waldorf Astor, jr., has taken a house of her own this year. She will entertain largely, having as a guest her sister, Mrs. Brooks.

Mrs. David Beatty is now at her town house, where she expects to have many of her compatriots in the course of the season.

Mrs. Frank Mackey will again have Mrs. Adair's house, as the latter is not yet well enough for many of the season's gayeties. Mrs. Ronalds is still in poor health, and before the end of the season she and Mrs. Ritchie will sail for America. Mrs. Ritchie is at present chaperoning her debutante niece, Feridah Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gerry have been paying a brief visit to London before their return to America.

Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer are coming to Hampden house for the season as the guests of Mrs. Potter Palmer.

JAPS CRITICISE AMERICAN STAGE.

The Japanese tourists who recently visited the United States are amusing London by their comments on all they have seen and heard. The performance of "Romeo and Juliet" affected them deeply, making them praise English stagecraft to the detriment of that of America. Mr. Kawada says:

"In my opinion American managers overlook their stage and love the physical rather than the spiritual.

The wedding next week of Mary Tracy of New York and Edward Hillman of Albany will bring together the members of the American colonies in Paris and London, as well as many English friends.

While Londoners await interestedly for the production of the new Shaw play "Getting Married, a Conversation in Three Acts," the Parisians had yesterday their first taste of Shaw brilliancy in the production of "Candida," which they received politely, if bewilderedly. Laughter was frequent, but generally in the wrong places, and the entire situation remained incomprehensible to the audience. The translation was inadequate, but the acting was superb, and a brilliant house encouraged the actors to do all possible, even though they wondered why the performance was ever given.

There will be no Shaw cult in Paris no matter how strong the entente cordiale between the two countries may be. The laughter and applause were so abashed and mystified, yet courteous, that the audience was much funnier than all the epigrams in the play. Among the Americans present were Mrs. Edith Wharton and Henry James.

FLED IN HIS WIFE'S ABSENCE.

When an Oklahoma Woman Came Home Her Husband Was Gone.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK., May 9.—Leaving this city Thursday for a visit with relatives at Gainesville, Tex., Mrs. Daniel Campau, a bride of a year, returned this morning to find that her husband had disappeared. An investigation revealed that he had sold his residence for $650, and withdrawn the funds from the bank. Officers are endeavoring to find him. Campau is a painter by trade.

same report back with him from Chicago last week.

"The business is twice as extensive in Kansas City as it is in Chicago," he declared.

Mrs. R. A. Long bought a Woods electric phaeton last week from the Moriarty concern.

The Ettwein Motor Car company recently delivered Stoddard-Dayton cars to these Kansas Cityans: George M. Hawes, Dr. A. C. Griffith, Dr. J. M. Scott, H. T. Fowler, J. R. Kelly, J. M. Penrod, J. A. Bowman, A. M. Blodgett, H. F. Schmelzer, Gale Southwell, Frank Brumback and Frank Hall.

J. L. Walls, manager of the local branch of the Studebaker concern, closed a contract yesterday with the John Taylor Dry Goods company for six electric Studebaker delivery cars. The cars are to be delivered for use within ninety days.

THE NEED OF BOYS' CLUBS.

More of Them Are Wanted to Help Make Good Citizens.

To The Star: After two halfdays' session of listening to the complaints of the boys in Judge McCune's court, a visit to the detention home boys' hotel, and the Institutional church and seeing the need of more help in the effort to make good citizens of the boys, my heart goes out to those who are alone and neglected in our city. What a great field there is for a boys' club in each part of Kansas City such as the Light Bearers' clubs with their sports and their "hikes" in the country. These clubs are helping the boys to grow to manly men of to-morrow. Here is a little incident that impressed me. A party of us were in the mountains by the side of a mountain stream when it occurred. One of the women dropped a columbine and it fell into the water at her feet. It moved now fast, now slow, now in a straight course, now in an irregular one, on, on, but soon the little flower was between two rocks trying to free itself. Unequal to the task it sank beneath the water. Why did not one of us go to its rescue? Why, didn't we?

It is not alone on the mountain top that we fail to reach out our helping hand. Purity and innocence are swept away before our very eyes. We see, we know, yet allow them to pass by because we are afraid we will dampen our shoes, or bedraggle our skirts if we step too close to the water. And so we let those for whom Christ died, glide on, and on.

JOY FOR THE BURKE BUNCH

Jimmie Durham Twirled Effectively After the First Three Innings and His Mates Behaved Well on the Bases.

Cousins tangled with cousins at the ball campus yesterday and Jimmie Burke's Louisville family put Cross's Kansas City colony on the grill in a hard-fought 2 to 0 game. Jimmie Durham, late of Philadelphia, and Clyde Goodwin, from the Panama, if you please, engaged in what is frequently referred to as a pitchers' battle. The Kansan had the better support and the clever base running of his mates enabled him to make off with the trophy.

A big Saturday crowd was out to greet the first appearance of Jimmie Burke and his Colonial tribesmen. The Irish leader was given quite a vocal ovation, as was his pal, Mr. J. Grover Perrine. James wished to show the fans just the sort of baseball he is giving the Louisville patrons this year. So he dispatched Mr. Jimmie "Bull" Durham to the dome and bade Jimmie turn loose everything tantalizing in his repertoire. Jimmie had some trouble in obeying instructions, but when the sight of the new trimmings around the ball yard had settled on his vision the Winfield pedagogue settled down and slipped 'em over in the most bewildering manner. The Blues were popping them up or rapping puny ones to the infielders. After the third inning Jimmie was never in hot water and the Cross athletes bagged only one hit in the remainder of the fray.

THEY GOT AWAY WITH LONG CHANCES.

Burke's men couldn't do much with Goodwin's delivery, but they took chances on the bases and got away with them. With two men down in the fifth Harley walked and stole. Quinlan signaled for a hit and run play and Harley started for third just as Larry smote a hard rap through second. Harley scored with ease. In the sixth Stanley opened with a hard smash to right for a base. Woodruff's sacrifice was thrown by Krueger to Cross at second to head Stanley. Cross pegged to first and Woodruff was called out, but Stanley gained the decision at second. Perrine walked. Peitz laid down a sacrifice and Stanley made the squeeze play good by counting all the way from second. Beckley's throw to the plate arrived about the same time Stanley slid in to the plate and again the Colonels got the juicy shade of the decision. The stunt of trying for a count from second was a daring piece of ball circling, but "Woody" got away with it in great shape.

The only times Monte's men appeared dangerous along came the swell fielders from Kentucky and doubled up the warriors. One down in the first, Cross singled to center and Jake Beckley cracked a lucky slow liner just over Burke's turret. Things looked good for a score on the jump but Rob Brashear lined a drive toward third that Burke cabbaged and pegged to "Nig" at second, doubling Jake. Murphy poled a blow in the second and Crisp rasped another in the third, but Durham tightened up each time. In the fourth Brashear opened with a walk. Murphy sacrificed and Kerwin drew a pass. Krueger hit one that looked good for a safety, but Perrine cut the rap down with his bare hand, tossed Kerwin out at second and Quinlan completed the double to first. That was the last time even a glimmer of light gleamed for the home boys.

HEAVY GOING FOR MR. "BRICK" OWENS.

"Brick" Owens wasn't all the popularity with the crowd or the players yesterday. Both Goodwin and Durham complained that Owens had specks in his glancers. The "Bull" was very peaceful in his murmurings, but Goodwin seemed inclined to argue the matter with Owens. However "Brick" made a motion like a "You-duck-the-park-sign" and Goodwin took the hint. The former Milwaukeean and Joe Crisp got their signal wires crossed early in the game. Joe called for a twister, but Goodwin shook his corona and whipped over a high one. The ball went by Joe like a cannon ball and Harley, who was on first, copped second without trouble. Goodwin acted peevish about the mixup, but cooled down in the course of events. The score:

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Monte Cross unraveled two of the five hits our athletes extracted from Jimmie Durham. Both of Monte's hits were clean drives to center.

Billy Hallman isn't hitting the ball with the regularity that was expected of him. Just hasn't got his glimmers focused right yet.

Woodruff was given a hit on his bunt in the opening inning. The ball was well placed and was very slow. When Goodwin reached it the runner was nearly to third. "Goody" tried for the ball with one hand to make the play faster but failed to get it. The scoring rules are very lenient in regard to this sort of a play.

Howard Murphy dropped a Texas leaguer over second his first time up. But that was all for Howard.

Billy Hallman stole his first base of the season yesterday. The play called for a close decision, but Hallman's excellent slide earned the call.

Jake Beckley got two assists but only one hit. Jake isn't rapping out the clouts in the one-and-two-every-day-style of his last year's halcyon hitting days.

Burke's error of Goodwin's bunt in the third was similar to the one on which Woodruff was given a hit. However, had Jimmie scooped the ball instead of juggling it he would have had ample time to get his man. Had Goodwin fielded "Woody's" bunt cleanly the Louisvillian probably would have landed at first ahead of the throw. That is the difference between the two plays.

The Colonels exhibited fine samples of the hit and run and the squeeze plays. Wonder what they will stage this afternoon.

Young Mr. Joe Wood will appear on the mound against the visitors this afternoon. Wood lost his game to the Colonels in Louisville through his inability to locate the plate. Joe has had the same trouble since coming home but to-day he will endeavor to redeem himself.

TIGERS WERE HUMBLED AGAIN.

Jayhawkers Won Yesterday's Game by the Score of 9 to 2.

COLUMBIA, MO., May 9.—The Kansas university baseball team again walloped the Tigers this afternoon on Rollins field by the score of 9 to 2. Stewart started in to pitch for Missouri, but was jerked out of the box in the third inning after three runs had been scored. Graves pitched for the remainder of the game, but was touched up for six more runs. Missouri scored only twice, one being a scratch home run by Vandiver. Hoffman pitched sterling ball for the Jayhawkers and had the local team at his mercy at all stages.

The work of the Kansas team in the field was a bit ragged at times, but Hoffman's clever work pulled the team out of every dangerous place. Only three hits were scored by Missouri, they going to Rider, Nee and Vandiver. This makes the seventh victory over Missouri that Kansas has scored this year in all forms of athletics. The only contest against the Kansans in which the Tigers have been successful was the indoor track meet. Two more games will be played between the two teams at Lawrence. The score by innings:

Longan, pitcher for the visitors, had a good speed, but used poor headwork. Both of Campbell's scores were made on St. Mary's errors. Swift played a good game for St. Marys behind the bat. Chicago 1, Pittsburg 0.

PITTSBURG, May 9.—Chicago defeated Pittsburg to-day by the score of 1 to 0 in a game played for the most part in a cold, drizzling rain. The feature was a throw by Wilson in the seventh inning from center field to the plate, catching a runner. BRASHEAR LEADING HITTER

BECKLEY HAS FALLEN FROM GRACE, BUT HALLMAN IS CLIMBING.

Cross and Krueger Are Going Great in the Field—Jake Has a Clean Slate—The Record of the Blue Pitchers.

The batting averages of Monte Cross's team, including yesterday's game, show that it is not the fault of the Blues' hitting that the club is not going better than it is. The team is hitting around the .250 mark, the actual average being .243. Jake Beckley isn't meeting the ball as often as he did on the road, and the veteran has dropped from the .300 class to .284. Roy Brashear is leading the regulars with the stick at .310. Billy Hallman is close to the classy region with .296. Hugh Hill was beginning to paste the ball on the nose when he again injured his knee. Monte Cross has improved his hitting since the club returned home. The leader is now rapping the blows at a .258 pace. Krueger has come up the last week on the bound and is now close to the .250 mark. Kerwin is just within the .200 mark. Howard Murphy also is boosting his swat average. A fact worth mentioning is that C. Milton Brandom's average has grown from .000 to .071. That is a vast improvement for C. Milton. The batting averages of the players follow:

Jake Beckley continues to remain at the top of the regulars in the fielding department. Jake has yet to make his first bobble. Monte Cross still retains his position at the head of the fielders who really have the difficult chances. Roy Brashear is well down in the list of fielders. Krueger is working nicely, and is close behind the Blue leader. The fielding averages follow:

YOUNG KETCHEL A WONDER

MICHIGAN FIGHTER KNOCKED OUT JACK SULLIVAN IN 20 ROUNDS.

The Bald-Headed Twin Put Up a Great Defensive Battle, but He Was Completely Outclassed—Ketchel Was the Aggressor From the Start.

San Francisco, May 9.—"Young" Ketchel defeated Jack ("Twin") Sullivan in the twentieth round of their fight at Coffroth's arena to-day. He had to bring into play all his hitting force and his entire knowledge of the ring game in order to encompass the Bostonian's downfall. It was as savage and, at the same time, as interesting a boxing bout as any ring follower could wish to witness. It was superiority in more than hard blows that won for Ketchel. After a few rounds had been fought it could be seen that Ketchel was the stronger of the pair. As long as Sullivan's strength remained intact he baffled Ketchel completely. That Sullivan felt his chances slipping away was shown by the tricks he resorted to. Twice during the contest he fell to the floor and gave an imitation of a man enduring the agony resulting from a foul punch. When he heard the voice of Referee Roche urging him to get up and fight he did so. Incidentally, it might be said that Ketchel did strike several unfair blows, but whether by intent or through Sullivan's change of tactics, the writer is unable to say. I only know that Sullivan was not fouled when he wished the crowd and the referee to believe that such was the case. Just before the finish came in the twentieth round, Ketchel used one punch that landed on Sullivan's thigh. A second later he drove a hard right into the pit of the stomach. The blow caused the Bostonian to curl up and fall. His lips were parted and his eyes were rolling, and from the look of distress he bore, it seemed as though he would be unable to gather himself together. He got up, however, just as nine seconds were tolled off by the timekeeper. He waited for Ketchel's advance and caught the Michigan middle weight one weak right hander on the mouth. Ketchel then dealt him a savage right smash just under the heart and there was no doubt of the result this time. When Jack fell his legs were bent, but when half the count was over he straightened them out, a sure sign that there was no fight left in him.

Referee Roche waited until the ten seconds had expired and then, turning and pointing dramatically to Ketchel, said:

"You win."

KETCHEL WAS ALWAYS THE AGGRESSOR.

So far as the details of the rounds is concerned, it may be said that the contest was such a one as was promised it should be. Ketchel said he would carry the battle to his man from the start and win just as soon as he could. Sullivan told his friends that he would try and baffle Ketchel for twenty rounds and then wear him down. Ketchel was always the aggressor. He began in his old style—namely, prodding at the stomach with a straight left while crouched. He has disarranged his opponent's defense by this method many times and has put in a knockout punch after bringing his man's guard down.

Jack ("Twin") is too old a bird to be caught by chance. He covered carefully when Ketchel pecked and stabbed, and between times he sent in tantalizing jabs with the left. Pretty soon Ketchel straightened up and cut loose with full range punches. And this was the style of fighting he put up from first to last. Sullivan's defense was really marvelous and there were several rounds in which Ketchel must have missed four out of every five punches he attempted. His best effort in the clinch fighting was a left rip for the stomach and he missed oftener than he landed even with this. Until very near the end of the contest he did not catch Sullivan a right-hand body punch that inflicted damage. Whenever Ketchel twisted his right shoulder and drove in a hard right for the heart Jack's left elbow dropped to the guard position as naturally as possible, and intercepted Stanley's best-meant punches.

As the fight went on it seems to dawn upon the crowd that if Sullivan was to be whipped it must be with one of the terrific rips that the Michigan man kept sending bodyward. The left and right swings which Ketchel landed on Joe Thomas's head were harmless assaults so far as Sullivan was concerned. As a rule he blocked these high swings and if one did land it seemed to roll, harmless, across the Twin's bal sconce.

SULLIVAN PUT ON DEFENSIVE WORK.

Sullivan, in pursuance of his ante-bellum statement, certainly confined his attention to defensive work. There were times when he engaged in short rallies and he always scored cleanly. When the battle was about half over the Sullivan lefts had Ketchel's right eye closed, his nose and mouth bleeding and his face puffed generally. Just once did Ketchell falter. That was in the sixteenth round. Sullivan, who seemed to put all his strength into the effort, clipped him with rights and lefts and the Michigan boy's head jerked from side to side. He was confused for a few seconds, but he soon struck his gait again and kept up the forcing tactics he had employed from the beginning.

The proof that Sullivan's punch was not to be feared was found in the seventh round. Jack waited for Ketchel's lead. It was a straight right for the head, and as Ketchel's fist shot out Jack smashed his own right against the Michigan man's mouth. By the manner in which Sullivan's shoulder twitched, it could be told that he had put all his strength into the blow, but the effects so far as punishment was concerned were literally nothing. In the eighteenth round Ketchel slowed up a bit and the Twin seemed to freshen. There was a suspicion at all times, for that matter, that Sullivan was simply feigning weakness when he appeared distressed, but the way his defense became impaired towards the end showed that he was really a very tired pugilist. In the nineteenth and twentieth rounds the Michigan middle weight fought at full speed, and the pace rendered Sullivan a fit subject for the two finishing punches. W. W. Naughton.

ATHLETICS IN THE EAST.

Will Cost America $50,000 for Representation in Olympic Games.

New York, May 9.—As the time draws near for the choosing of the athletes who are to represent the United States at the Olympic games in London, interest in the amateur sporting world centers in the work being done by the men who are to make up the team and in the preparations to send them to London in good shape. While these sports are for amateurs, this is a commercial age and the question of money will obtrude even in amateur sports. The American Olympic committee needs $50,000 to defray expenses and send a team which will give us the best possible chance of holding the high place won by American athletes in Athens. Much of this has been pledged, but there is much yet to be raised. The committee was greatly encouraged by the action of the Chicago Athletic association in undertaking to raise $3,000 in addition to the $500 already given. The clubs are falling in line and there is every reason for the committee to be sanguine.

The wonderful pole vaulting done by Dray of Yale, Cook of Cornell, Gilbert of Yale, Parker of Pennsylvania, and others at the Pennsylvania relay races has shown conclusively that America will be in the hunt in the sky-skimming event at the Olympic games at London in July. About the only men we have to fear are Soderstrom, the Swede, and Gonder, the French champion. Gonder won at Athens with about 11 feet 8 inches, but he will have to go a full foot higher to gather in the London honors.

Walter Dray can boost the vaulting record almost any time he goes after it on a good day, and it will be no surprise to see him take another fall out of it ere the college season is over. Cook, too, is within striking distance of the record at any time. He has done 12 feet 6 inches in practice. Gilbert, too, is a record man and is consistent at 12 feet. Barring a run of hard luck, the Oregon wrestler is sure of a place on the Olympic team.

President Sullivan of the A. A. U. has put a stop to the talk which was current last week, to the effect that Morrissey, winner of the Boston Marathon, would be barred from the American Olympic team. Mr. Sullivan says emphatically that Morrissey is practically a certainty for the team. It may, of course, develop that some phenomenon in long distance running will develop, but even in this event Morrissey will be sent across the sea as an insurance against accidents.

The executive committee of the National Rifle association has decided to send an American rifle team across to compete in the Olympic games. Plans have not yet been completed for choosing the team, but there is every reason to believe that the best shots in the United States will compete for the places on the team.

A meeting of representatives of the Intercollegiate Socker Football league will be held this month to award the championship for the season. Yale and Haverford are tied for first place, and the Haverford faculty, having placed a time limit on the game, the tie cannot be played off. As Yale beat Haverford in the single match played by the two, it is regarded as probable here that the championship will be awarded to Yale.

W. Kennelly, a raw recruit among the New York A. C. athletes, promises to develop into a fine performer in the field events. Wefers has changed the youngster's style in the high jump, with the result that he has improved two inches in a week's time. Kennelly is also good at putting the shot.

In making her football schedule, Yale has cut one game from the list and will play only nine matches. All except the West Point and Princeton games are at New Haven. Villa Nova was dropped for rough play last fall. The Springfield Training school was replaced by the Massachusetts Agricultural college, whom Yale meets for the first time.

Joe Bromilow, the Jersey half-miler, has started in training for the outdoor season. This will be Joe's sixth year in fast company, and he looks as good as ever. Bromilow, by the way, is helping the Paterson Y. M. C. A. in the promotion of its great athletic carnival on May 23. This meet will be one of the biggest things of the kind that Jersey has ever seen.

Lewis Strang, winner of the Briarcliffe Trophy race, is to drive in the Grand Prix the great French automobile speed contest, on July 8. He has signed a contract with Harry S. Houpt to drive the Thomas car in that race in place of Montague Roberts, who was first nominated for the driver's seat. With Strang will go J. B. Marquis, his mechanician in the Briarcliffe race.

The regular annual meeting of the Middle States Regatta association will be held here tomorrow. The annual election of officers will take place at this meeting, as well as the selection of a regatta committee, a programme of events and a place for the regatta for the present year.

THE STOFFT-ALLEN MATCH.

A Pool Game for a Side Bet and Gate Receipts.

Holly B. Allen and Billy Ryle, representing Bennie Allen, the 18-year-old pool player of Kansas City, and Henry P. Stofft of Cleveland, O., met this morning and posted forfeits for a pool match between these two players. The match is for a purse of $200. In addition to the purse the players will divide the gate receipts 75 and 25. The match is to be played in the old Turner hall, at Twelfth and Oak streets, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights of this week. The terms and conditions are the same as those used in all championship games and tournaments.

All indications point to one of the best pool matches ever seen in this city. Allen has met and defeated such men as Tommy Hueston, Alfred DeOro and many others.

Stofft, who recently came here from Cleveland, has been beating local players as fast as he could meet them. He has defeated such men as Ryle, Ferris, Tenney and McLaughlin.

There has been much talk of this match, and persons interested are glad to know that it has been arranged.

AMERICANS DO WELL IN ENGLAND.

August Belmont Heads the List of Winning Owners With $30,000.

London, May 9.—W. K. Vanderbilt's colt Seasick II, which it has been decided to send over from France to run in the Epson Derby, was given a prominent place in the betting today, 15 to 2 being laid against him. These odds indicate that his chances are regarded as practically equal to those of August Belmont's Norman III which won the Two Thousand Guineas stakes at Newmarket on Wednesday, and J. Buchanan's Mountain Apple, both of which are held at 7 to 1.

The phenomenal success of the Americans during the last six weeks of the present racing season is shown in the fact that August Belmont heads the list of winning owners. The value of the stakes he has won in that time totals nearly $30,000. Richard Croker is second on the list with $28,000, while Lord Rosebery is third with only $10,000. Danny Maher, the American jockey, tops the list of winning jockeys.

FRANK GOTCH AT THE CENTURY.

Manager Donegan Offers Liberal Prizes for Aspiring Wrestlers.

Champion Frank Gotch has signed a four weeks' contract with Joseph Donegan of the Century theater. Donegan is going to manage the champion, but he has to pay him $1,500 per week for the honor of bossing him. Beginning with to-morrow's matinee Gotch is to appear at the Century theater at each performance for one week. He will wrestle two or three men at each performance. Any person or persons who can prevent Gotch from throwning them in fifteen minutes will receive $25. Should they be fortunate enough to throw the "champ" Donegan will give them the Federal building, the city hall, the new union depot and a season pass to the Century.

Harvard Won Dual Meet.

Cambridge, Mass., May 9.—Strength in the field events and the distance runs enabled Harvard to defeat Dartmouth in the annual dual track meet to-day by a score of 88 to 48. Shaw of Dartmouth again ran the high hurdles in 15 1-5 seconds, which equaled the intercollegiate record.

MARTIN SHERIDAN, ATHLETE

Holds Two World's Records for Throwing the Discus—Was the Hero of Athens and Will Represent America in London Olympic Games.

(World's 220-Yard Low Hurdle Champion.)

Now that the time is drawing near for holding the tryouts for the Olympic games to be held in London this coming summer, athletes are beginning to prepare themselves for the trial competitions which will take place in different sections of the country in the early part of June. At Philadelphia the Eastern aspirants will compete for places on the team; likewise, Chicago for the middle West and San Francisco for the far West.

Athletic enthusiasts are trying to figure the chances of the different athletes in the respective trials. Some men are practically conceded places on the team—one man in particular being Martin J. Sheridan of the Irish-American Athletic club—without a doubt one of, if not the greatest, all around man the world has ever produced. There is only one athlete who ranks in Sheridan's class and he is John C. Garrels, the ex-Michigan wonder. As these two athletes have never met in competition it is a question as to which is the better man. Garrels has never competed in the all around championships, but his individual performances in the different events have been marvelous, while Sheridan has won the championship twice—in 1905 and in 1907—and holds the world's record at this branch of the sport.

AN ALL-AROUND CHAMPION A WONDER.

When a man can go through the all-around championship programme without making his will and break the record in the bargain, it can readily be seen what a great athlete he is. This is one of the hardest trials an athlete has to contend with. It is really a stiffer proposition than the Marathon race, although probably not so grueling. He is expected to run the 100-yard dash, walk a half mile, go through a 120-yard high hurdle, do the high and broad jumps, also the pole vault, throw the 16-pound hammer and 56-pound weight, put the 16-pound shot and, last of all, when the man is about all in, run a mile.

In each of these events it is necessary to make the best performance possible, as the points are counted for the individual work. It takes from five to six hours of steady, hard work to go through the above list.

Sheridan is an athlete who can always be relied upon to score an unusual number of points at the different championship meetings. Consequently he is a very valuable man for a team such as this country expects to send to London. The "Hero of Athens," as Sheridan is generally known, is at his best in the discus. He has made a careful study of this event, and by continual practice and developing certain muscles in his right arm has become the world's record holder. Martin really has this event at his mercy. Occasionally, to create a little excitement at the different meets, he pushes the record up a peg or so. At the Athens Olympics in 1906 Sheridan beat Gergantas, the Greek champion, very easily in the free-for-all style, and only lost the Greek style of throwing through a technicality.

HOLDS TWO WORLD'S RECORDS.

Sheridan's two world's records for throwing the discus are: Free style, 136 feet 10 inches, made at Celtic park last June, and the Greek style, 97 feet 8½ inches, made at the Jamestown exposition last September. He has already started training for his specialties and will no doubt be in good shape by the time the team sails for the other side. Uncle Sam can be pretty sure of counting on him for two first places. The only two men in this country who might upset these calculations are Ralph Rose, the Frisco giant, or John Garrels, and, both being Americans, no harm would be done. The known foreigners who have a chance of annexing these titles are Georgantas of Greece and Jaervinen of Finland; but the one best bet should be Sheridan.

Other events that Sheridan will undoubtedly score in are: Throwing the javelin, free style, and another similar event, throwing the javelin, held in the middle; also, the standing broad jump, standing high jump and the hop, step and jump, making in all seven events. It's asking him to do a great deal of hard work, but he is always ready to do more than his share.

The outside world does not know that when Sheridan helped win the honors for us at Athens he was incapacitated with a loose cartilage in the right knee caused by stopping a runaway horse while on duty with the New York police department. At times it was agony for him to compete. He stuck to his task, nevertheless, and scored heavily. He was compelled to withdraw from two events and could not do himself justice in another.

Besides the above performances Sheridan holds records in vaulting for distances, putting the different weighted shots and throwing weights for height.

Personally, as well as athletically, Sheridan is one of the finest fellows in athletics. Always willing to instruct beginners in any way possible has made him very popular in the athletic world.

It is hoped that nothing will occur to prevent Sheridan from taking the trip abroad, as his absence would materially weaken the chances of the American team.

JAYHAWKERS BADLY BEATEN

NEBRASKA DEFEATED K. U. IN TRACK MEET BY THE SCORE OF 60 TO 49.

The Cornhuskers Took the Lead at the Start and Were Never in Danger—Jayhawkers Won a Pretty Relay Race.

Lawrence, Kas., May 9.—By the one-sided score of 60 to 49 the Jayhawker track squad went down to an overwhelming defeat before the strong University of Nebraska team on McCook field this afternoon. Taking the lead by winning both places in the 100-yard dash, the first contest of the meet, the Cornhuskers increased it steadily throughout the afternoon, piling up enough points to insure victory before the battle was hardly half over. All the advance dope sheets of the contest were upset, the Nebraska lads in every instance proving to be stronger than the Jayhawkers had given them credit for, while all the surprises sprung by Kansas were on the wrong side of the ledger.

In only three events—the quarter-mile, two-mile and relay—were the Jayhawkers able to carry off the undivided first honors, while Parker of Kansas and Knode of Nebraska split the points in the high jump at 5 feet 8 inches. All the remainder of the first places and many of the seconds went to the strong Cornhusker squad. Dennis in the quarter-mile and Cummins in the two-mile put up the best exhibition of work of the Kansas team, both taking their events with a safe lead over their competitors. Collins, the Cornhuskers' weight juggler, was the star of the meet, taking three firsts in each of the weight events, the hammer, shot and discus. Perry of the Nebraska squad also did some splendid work in the broad jump, making a leap of 22 feet 2½ inches.

The redeeming feature of the meet from the Jayhawkers' standpoint was the relay. Hopelessly beaten in the meet the relay team went in for revenge and in one of the prettiest and most exciting races ever pulled off on McCook Dennis edged in a close winner over the Nebraska sprinter. The summary:

100-yard dash—Wildman, Nebraska, first; Hughes, Nebraska, second; Newbold, Kansas, third. Time, 10 1-5 seconds.

FIRST PLACE TO MANUAL

CRIMSON ATHLETES WON THE MISSOURI VALLEY INTERSCHOLASTIC.

West Des Moines Finished Second and the Central Highs Third—The Woodbury Brothers Starred for Blue and White Team.

The Manual track team revenged itself for the close defeat Central inflicted upon it last Saturday by running away with the annual Missouri Valley Interscholastic association meet at Elm Ridge yesterday. Central was unable to finish better than third, yielding second place to the West Des Moines High school by two points. The final score was, Manual 43, West Des Moines 40, Central 38, St. Joseph 11, Lincoln 9, Kansas City, Kas.; 2, while Topeka, the seventh entry, was unable to score.

It was to the sturdy men in the weights and the mile that Manual owed her victory, for from these events twenty-three of the forty points made by the crimson came. In the other events, however, Manual made a remarkable showing, scoring in all but the low hurdles, the high jump and the broad jump.

MONTAGUE OF MANUAL WON THE MILE IN A FINE FINISH.

At the start it appeared as if Manual would have a walkaway. In the first two events, the mile and the hammer throw, the crimson gathered in sixteen points, Montague's performance in the mile being the feature. Montague ran a brilliant race. He took the pole from the start and cut a pace so hot that he had the field stringing at the fifth furlong. Richards passed him at the eighth furlong post and led well into the finish. With a fine burst of speed Montague came up from behind twenty feet from the tape, just nosing out his schoolmate. Campbell added two in the quarter and Shrader one more in the low hurdles. Then, when Kanatzar, Schwab and Koenigsdorf heaved six more in the shot put the meet began to look like a procession. However, West Des Moines and Central got going then and cut down the crimson lead materially in pole vault, the 100-yard dash and the low hurdles.

This Manual reverse proved only momentary, however, for Kanatzar, May and Schwab came strong in the discus and boosted the crimson score ten points, practically cinching the meet.

A pretty duel for second place developed between West Des Moines and Central, after it became apparent that Manual had secured the big plum. Central had the lead up to the final event, the broad jump. With the blue and white only eight points behind the leaders, Des Moines three points behind and H. Woodbury almost sure of landing first place, things looked rosy for the Eleventh street institution. Bair and Harris of the Iowa team sprung a surprise just at that time, however, and Central had to be content with three points in the event and third place in the meet.

H. WOODBURY OF CENTRAL TAKING THE HIGH HURDLES.

The brothers, Harry and Charles Woodbury, of the Central team, landed twenty-five of the blue and white's scores. As in the Central-Manual dual meet, these brilliant youngsters bore the burden of the battle. But for them Central would not have been in the running. Harry Woodbury broke the conference record for the high hurdles, which he ran in sixteen flat. Bair picked up thirteen of West Des Moines' forty points. Kanatzar starred for Manual with ten points in the weights to his credit.

Four records were broken, Harry Woodbury did the high hurdles in 16 flat; Harris of West Des Moines ran the quarter in :51 2-5; Bair, in a heart breaking finish, nosed out Charles Woodbury in the low hurdles in the record time of :27 flat, and Trostle of West Des Moines cleared the bar in the pole vault at 10 feet 10 inches. The feat of the West Des Moines team in breaking two of the records was easily the feature of the meet. The summaries:

ANOTHER STAKE TO JACK ATKIN.

The Schreiber Colt Finished by Himself in Jamaica Feature.

JAMAICA, N. Y., May 9.—Jack Atkin, the 13 to 20 favorite, won easily in the Montague stakes, one and one-sixteenth miles, at Jamaica to-day. It was a lucky victory, for Restigouche, the only other starter, stepped in a hole on the upper turn and almost fell. Notter was nearly thrown from the saddle. He recovered quickly, but had no chance after the accident. Trace, at 11 to 10, won the Rosedale stakes, four and one-half furlongs, by eight lengths. The summaries:

GOOD RACING AT LOUISVILLE.

Polly Prim Defeated Minks and Pinkola in the Clark Handicap.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 9.—A pretty day brought out a fine crowd at Churchill Downs to-day and some good sport was witnessed. Polly Prim defeated The Minks and Pinkole in the feature race, the Clark handicap, at a mile and a sixteenth. Dark Night, in the third race, was the day's surprise, Al Muller finishing second and Colonel Bob third. Weather clear and pleasant. Track heavy. The summaries:

CALIFORNIA, MO., HIGHS WON.

The Warrensburg Normal District High School Held Track Meet.

WARRENSBURG, MO., May 9.—The first annual interhigh school track and field meet under the management of the Warrensburg State Normal school was held on the normal field to-day. It is a new feature in state sports and the entries consisted of students from all the high schools in this normal district. The high schools of Jefferson City, California, Higginsville, Lee's Summit, Sedalia and Warrensburg took part. Owing to the heavy rains all week, which made a soft track, the records did not show up strong.

California won the meet by taking 44 points; Warrensburg was second with 23; Lee's Summit third with 17; Sedalia fourth with 10; Jefferson City and Higginsville each 7 points. Lee's Summit won the relay race and the silver cup. California carried off the high school banner, which will be contested for each year.

Naval Crew Defeated Columbia.

ANNAPOLIS, May 9.—The naval academy won a double victory to-day over the representatives of Columbia university, that of the 'varsity eight by the narrow margin of four feet in distance and one-fifth of a second in time. The time of the midshipmen was 10:23 1-5 and that of Columbia 10:23 2-5. The cadets' second crew defeated the Columbia freshmen by a length and a quarter. THE LONDON SPORT LETTER

RACING KEEPS MUCH MONEY IN CIRCULATION IN ENGLAND.

Tommy Burns Is Still Holding Out for $30,000 for His "Bit" for a Bout With Johnson—Interest in Tennis.

LONDON, May 9.—If there is any doubt as to the hold racing has on the British public, some facts brought out recently by the Sporting Life concerning one week's racing in England would dispel it. There were during the week in question no less than twenty-six meets in different parts of the United Kingdom. The Sporting Life says: "One cannot help thinking of the money which this one week's racing alone will circulate. Some of these meetings extend over two days, while the Newmarket Craven meeting is a three days' fixture. Say that the total number of runners each day at all these meetings averages only forty, that would give a total of over 1,300 horses competing during the week. Nearly all these have to be conveyed by rail to and from the meetings, with lads to accompany them. Then there are the charges for stabling and forage to be considered. One would want to do an awful lot of calculation to arrive at an estimate of the number of people who will be traveling about the country to participate in the sport at all these meetings, and these visitors all spend money in necessary food and drink, besides the enormous amount that their fares for traveling alone must amount to. What is taken on the various courses in payment for admission to the different inclosures must also amount to a nice sum, while the total wages bill of the race course staffs is no inconsiderable item. And when one considers the huge sum involved in the breeding, rearing, training and racing of the thoroughbreds, and the many thousands to whom racing, directly and indirectly, affords means of earning a livelihood, apart from all question of betting, one wonders what can be the condition of mind of would-be statesmen, who, in order to pander to the faddists, talk lightly of plowing up race courses and abolishing racing.

Then there is the prize money to be considered. And here the figures are really astonishing, for a glance through the various programmes for the week reveals the fact that, roughly speaking, $27,500 will be competed for during the week. And this was by no means an exceptional week.

There is a divergence of opinion as to Tommy Burns's position in demanding $30,000 as his price for fighting the negro, Jack Johnson. Burns makes his position in the mater perfectly plain. "I can," he says, "get that amount for a fight with Johnson from one of the Pacific coast clubs. Why should I spoil that by fighting Johnson for less? It isn't a question of my beating him. I know I can beat him all right. But the big purse would be spoiled by my whipping him just as it would be if he whipped me. I have said repeatedly that fighting is business with me, and while I would be glad to oblige some of my friends by fighting Johnson for a smaller purse, I do not care to do it at such a loss. As far as Johnson is concerned he ought to be glad to fight me for his expenses if he is so certain he can whip me. He could make his pile afterwards, as I did. I gave him his chance and it was a good one for him. He did not take it; now he will fight on my terms or there will be no fight."

The claim that Burns is afraid of Johnson is not given any serious credence here. It is not improbable that Johnson will be matched with some of the men whom Burns has put out. It would then be possible to get a line on Johnson's ability. It is estimated, by the way, that Burns has netted something like $60,000 since he came across the water.

England is hardly over-hopeful about recapturing the Dwight Davis trophy from Australia this fall. The Illustrated Sporting News says: "Lawn tennis has long ceased to be only an Englishman's game, and one of the chief causes for its recent revival as a spectacular sport has been the invasion of foreign sports, who have introduced many new methods of attack and defense. Until last year material success, measured by the capture of championships, has not attended these efforts, but the "clean sweep" of all the chief honors achieved by colonial and American players in 1907 demonstrated beyond doubt the genuine powers of the newcomers. The central figure on the male side at Wimbledon last summer was Mr. Norman Brookes, who not only won the three English championships—a record only equaled by the late Ernest Renshaw—but was instrumental in transferring the Davis cup from these shores to Australia. Happily, Mr. Brookes is returning to this country to defend his honors, and the chief interest of the season will unquestionably center around his exploits. The Davis cup having gone to Melbourne, from whence it can only be removed by a successful invasion, there will be no matches in England this year associated with that trophy; but the international element will be fully sustained by the contests for the Olympic medals, one of which, it may be incidentally noted, will be reserved for ladies. Unless Mr. H. L. Doherty returns to the arena, it is difficult to see how Mr. Brookes can be prevented from carrying off this particular symbol of supremacy."

The Paris sporting public has been excited by a paragraph in the Presse saying the world's champion boxer, now in Paris, was willing to meet a negro boxer, also here, if the latter would agree to quit. As "Tommy" Burns, the champion, and "Sam" MacVey are both in Paris the linking of the names is unavoidable, but there is nothing to verify the rumor obtainable. The men are matched for a $20,000 purse, on June 13.

If there was ever any doubt as to the manner in which the Olympic games would be appreciated by the athletes of England, the entries for the earliest trials of the season would supply an answer. The A. A. A. distance championships secured a record entry of over forty in each, but that was left far in the shade by the eighty names sent in for the Polytechnic Marathon trial, which was decided on Saturday, April 25, over a course extending from Windsor to Wembley park. It was the greatest test of stamina and speed that has yet been held in our own country, and the entry was a thoroughly representative one, including the best long distance men of the country, with the sole exception of A. J. Robertson, W. Coales, A. E. Wood and J. E. Deakin, who are in all probability intent on the shorter Olympic races, and therefore deem it advisable to let the long distance trial alone. The contest was won by Duncan of the Salford Harriers in 2 hours 16 minutes and 45 seconds. Beale of the Polytechnic Harriers was second, time 2 hours and 17 minutes, and Lord, of the Wibsey Park Harriers, was third, time 2 hours 18 minutes and 4 seconds. Duncan holds the ten-mile and the four-mile championships.

It will pour electric life and force into your body while you sleep, warming and vitalizing the nerves and blood and invigorating every vital organ. It has attachments, suitable for every person, by means of which the current can be applied to any part of the body.

Why don't you stop it! you are still doctoring! But changing doctors does not cure your sickness. You are trying one medicine after the other, with the same disgusting disappointment. Patent medicines do you no good. You are a drug doser, and the only change in your bodily condition is for the worse. Why don't you stop this drug habit? Why don't you avail yourself of the modern remedy? Proceed in Nature's own lines. Use the life-giving, healing, strengthening forces of Electricity.

Electro-Vigor is a relief from the old habit—the drug habit. It does by natural means what you expect drugs to do by unnatural means. It gives real strength to your body and when your body has its natural strength there can't be any pain, for there is no pain in a perfectly healthy body.

Electro-Vigor is a girdle of dry cell batteries which you can wear about your waist while you sleep. It is always charged, ready for use, and generates its own power constantly. Electro-Vigor is not like the electric belt you know—there is no charging to do—no vinegar or acid solution to bother with, and we have perfected it with a regulation device which makes the current mild or strong at will.

Electro-Vigor is the grandest invention of the age for weak men; the surest and easiest cure for all nervous and chronic diseases. Its wonderful power is directed to the seat of the nervous system through which its vitalizing strength penetrates into all of the body, carrying new life to every function which has been weakened by excesses or dissipation, restoring energy to the brain and power to the vital organs. No sick man, no sickly or delicate woman will ever regret a fair trial of Electro-Vigor, which is nature's restorer of vitality. It will cure Rheumatism, Nervous Debility, Weak Stomach, Kidney and Liver Troubles, Lame Back, Sciatica and all ailments in Men and Women.

DALY STILL THE CHAMPION.

John Horgan Was Defeated Last Night at Three-Cushion Billiards.

ST. LOUIS, May 9.—John Daly of Chicago, by a burst of brilliant playing, to-night saved his title as world's champion at three-cushion billiards and the Lambert trophy from John Horgan of Elmira, N. Y., who had defeated him in the first two blocks of a 150-point match. Faced by a score of 100 to 77, in favor of his opponent, Daly began his winning streak at the start of to-night's game and won it, 78 to 42. Daly's high run was eight, his average .88; Horgan's high run was three, his average .50. The contest ended Daly 150, Horgan 148.

WON TWO-MEN CHAMPIONSHIP.

Lucas and Treiber of the Muehlebach Pilseners, with a score of 1,238, were the winners of the two-men event in the City Handicap tournament now being rolled at the "Kid" Nichols bowling academy. At the start these two men were picked to land near the top and they certainly made good, for no prettier two-men game was rolled in the tournament. Lucas came mighty close to making a record, going twenty-nine frames without an open, and then in the last frame on a good hit he left the 8 and 10, finishing with 602, while Traber kept plugging along in his same old consistent way. It looks like Chief Farley will be the first City champion, as 648 looms up awful big with only two more squads to shoot.

Yale an Easy Winner.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., May 9.—Yale had no trouble in winning from Princeton in the games here to-day. The result was: Yale, 73; Princeton, 31. Yale took nine firsts, ten seconds, eight thirds and Princeton four firsts, three seconds and five thirds in the thirteen events.

SCHULZ'S RIVER REPORT IN

Huge Freight Tonnage Awaits Cheap and Safe Transportation to Market, He Says—Ellis Asks for Immediate Hearing by the Board.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The strongest report ever made in favor of Missouri river improvements has just been submitted to the War department by Captain Edward H. Schulz at Kansas City, the engineer in charge of the Missouri river. In his special report, which reached the department to-day, Captain Schulz presents facts indicating the tremendous commercial possibilities of the Missouri valley and what the development of the river would mean to the West. Projects involving an expenditure of 20 million dollars between Kansas City and the mouth of the river are presented.

Captain Schulz's report will not be made public until the Secretary of War transmits it to Congress. It is available to members of Congress, however, and Representative Ellis went through it to-day. Mr. Ellis is very enthusiastic over it. He stated that it will be highly gratifying to Kansas City business men and others interested in the river's development. No other engineer has ever submitted such a thorough and comprehensive report on the Missouri river.

In discussing the commercial possibilities of the Missouri valley Captain Schulz defines as tributary territory about 100 miles on either side of the river. Of this territory he says:

> When we consider the great natural fertility and productiveness of this territory it is not extravagant to say that it surpasses any other on the globe. The production of grain, live stock and meat products in the portion between Sioux City and the mouth fairly staggers the imagination.

Captain Schulz estimates the population of this zone to be 4,129,000. He also discusses the production of the seven states bordering on the river and presents figures relative to the huge railroad tonnage. He expresses surprise that the river was not made navigable long ago and adds:

> When we see to what insignificant dimensions the commerce of the Missouri river has dwindled the matter seems almost incomprehensible. After noting the extensive commerce on the Ohio and the Great Lakes, one is filled with amazement at such lack of river interest as has been manifested along the Missouri river up within the last year or two.

Captain Schulz presents two projects for the improvement of the river. The most extensive of these projects provides for the ultimate deepening of the channel from Kansas City to St. Louis to a maximum depth of twelve feet at a cost of 20 million dollars, which is virtually a part of the main project, provides for a temporary six-foot channel at a cost of probably 3 million dollars. The report shows in detail the character of the work required on each of these projects. The lesser project would be a permanent contribution without loss or waste to the greater and final project.

SAVES THE BOTTOM LANDS, TOO.

Captain Schulz presents an interesting review of work done by the Missouri river commission. The effectiveness of this work is summed up as follows:

> On the part of the river where continuous work was done the result was remarkable. Continuous channel of not less than six feet depth was obtained at a stretch of forty-five miles, over what was originally the worst part of the river. In a distance of eighteen miles the area of lands recovered was 5,500 acres, and the area of lands protected was 12,800 acres.

The stretch of river referred to is below Jefferson City. The fact given as to the lands incidentally recovered and protected throws light on a very important feature of the work.

REFERRED TO ENGINEER BOARD.

Captain Schulz's report was refered today to the board of engineers for rivers and harbors, and Representative Ellis immediately applied to the board for a hearing on the report. The board of engineers is the final authority on river improvement projects next to Congress. It passes first on the engineering features and then upon the worthiness of the projects. What its recommendation will be on the report is indicated in its favorable action upon three previous reports submitted by Captain Schulz for the improvement of the Gasconade and Osage rivers, both tributary to the Missouri, and the Missouri river at St. Joseph. In indorsing the recommendation of Captain Schulz for an expenditure of $150,000 at that point to prevent the river from cutting ino Lake Contrary the board said:

> It appears from the statements contained within that there has recently been a revival of navigation on the Missouri river and that further efforts to develop water transportation are contemplated by the people of Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha and Sioux City in the near future. The board believes that it is advisable to complete the work outlined within in the vicinity of St. Joseph, at an estimated cost of $150,000, in order to preserve the regimen of the river and to avoid the greater expenditure which would otherwise be required in the near future to make this section available to reliable navigation.
> For the reasons briefly given above, the board concurs with the district officer and the division engineer in the opinion that the work of preventing the threatened diversion of the waters of the Missouri river into Lake Contrary would be of great benefit to the navigation which local interests hope to establish along the river, and to that extent can be considered as directly and necessarily required in the interest of prospective navigation.

Representative Ellis has requested the board of engineers to summon Captain Schulz to Washington so he can be present at this hearing and make a statement. The board will take action on his application next week. Lawrence M. Jones of Kansas City, president of the Missouri River Improvement association, and George C. Call of Sioux City, secretary of the Missouri River Navigation congress, are also expected to attend the hearing.

AN EXODUS OF FOREIGNERS.

Foreign laborers who were thrown out of employment because of adverse financial conditions, are still leaving the country in large numbers.

Kansas Cityans who have been in the East recently tell of seeing them leaving the iron manufacturing towns by hundreds. Every day one may see at the railroad stations in Pittsburg, Cleveland and other large manufacturing cities where there are extensive iron mills, parties, sometimes a carload of people together taking the trains for New York with tickets for foreign countries.

The persons leaving are chiefly Italians, and they go away bearing information that will discourage other foreigners of their own country from coming to this country. Where the number of unemployed is large, there is a general disposition to encourage their departure and preference in giving employment is shown to those who are American born or at least are citizens.

The central West suffered much less than the East on account of the financial troubles, but Italians are leaving the West. One Kansas City railway had a sign yesterday announcing that it would sell tickets to Genoa and Naples for $34.20, which is not much more than the first-class passenger rate to New York. Of course, it means the poorest kind of accommodations and steerage passage, but it helps to reduce the surplus labor which was rapidly filling the country when the financial conditions forced retrenchment in many kinds of manufacturing.

"My Lord, the Carriage Waits."

From an Exchange.

"The carriage waits without, my lord,"
 "Without what, gentle sir?"
"Without the lefthand runningboard,
 Without the French chauffeur,
Without a drop of gasoline,
 Six nuts, the can of oil,
Four pinions and the limousine,
 The spark-plug, and the coil.
Without the brake, the horn, the clutch,
 Without the running-gear,
One cylinder—it beats the Dutch
 How much there isn't here!
The car has been repaired, in fact,
 And you should be right glad
To find that this much is intact
 Of what your lordship had.
The garage sent it back, my lord,
 In perfect shape throughout;
So you will understand, my lord,
 Your carriage waits without.'

STUDENTS TO EXPOSE JOINTS

"HAVE YOU BEEN SUBPOENAED?" THE PARAMOUNT K. U. QUESTION.

The Trials of Lawrence Liquor Sellers Whose Arrest Followed the Recent Publication of "Students' Edition" Begin To-Morrow.

LAWRENCE, KAS., May 9.—The usual question when one K. U. student met another K. U. student to-day or yesterday was:

"Have you been subpoenaed yet?"

The trials of the Lawrence jointists arrested after the exposure printed in the students' edition of the Lawrence Journal two weeks ago will come up in the district court here Monday morning. All of the university students know of this fact and a great many of them are planning to be on hand, not because of any particular interest in the prosecution of liquor cases, but because of the witnesses whose testimony is relied upon to do the work for the county attorney.

Nearly 100 students will be on hand whether they can arrange their work in school or not. They have been subpoenaed to appear at a certain hour and they will be there. The other morning the sheriff went to the "hill" and hunted up the students and served the papers upon them. Two or three outran him in a race in Fraser hall, but he had little trouble finding those he wanted.

More than ninety subpoenas have been issued by the county attorneys, and forty of these, it is said, are being held in reserve and will be served if it appears that a greater quantity of evidence is wanted. Only about twenty-five of the subpoenas were for the student journalists. The rest were for students who are supposed to know some things about the "East bottoms" in Lawrence that will sound well in the prosecution of the joint cases if they will tell them on the witness stand.

The members of the Scoop club, who had editorial charge of the students' edition, are not worried over the approach of the trial. They have the evidence, they declare, and they are willing to tell it in its fullness in court. Already they are planning to use their witness fee money for a "function" to be given before school is out.

Jerome Beatty, managing editor, and Roy Roberts, city editor, of the students' edition, according to the plan, will be the first witnesses called, and they will be followed by just as many members of the staff as it is believed are needed to back up their stories. Harry H. Kemp, the "tramp" poet, whose poem, "The Bottoms," written after a trip to the scene one night, will not be at the trials. He left last week for New York and the Bermuda islands, where he will spend the summer with friends.

The cases are all to be called Monday morning. The order of the cases will be determined then. County Attorney Harley believes that the jointists, in view of the formidable array of witnesses, will plead guilty and save the additional expense of costs in case there is a conviction.

WESTMINSTER IS GOING TO ALASKA, GUNNING FOR THE KERATOSAURUS.

THE antediluvian Keratosaurus of the Arctic Circle, if you know what that is, is alive and may be captured.

This is why, it is said, the young millionaire Duke of Westminster now is in secret conference in Paris.

This is why he is to visit the United States in June.

In London it has leaked out that the duke and his beautiful young duchess are to "spend the summer in a long American vacation."

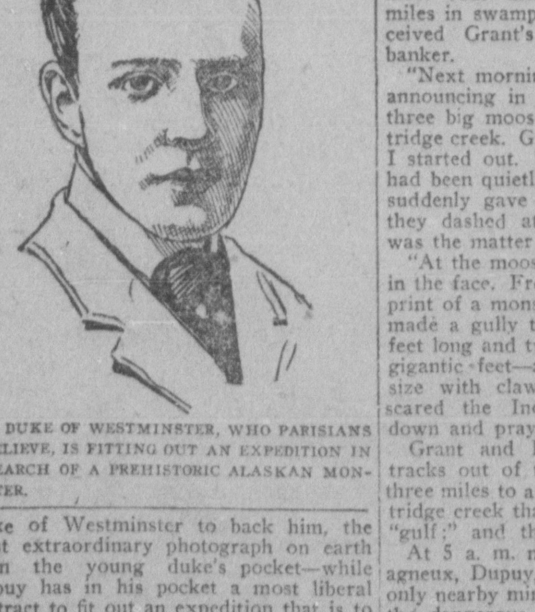
"Just what their plans are no one seems to understand," admits one of the Paris society sheets; "but it is more than probable that the richest peer and peeress in England will receive more than ordinary social attention, while the duke has signified his intention to take a hunting trip in the Rockies."

In Paris they claim to understand the true secret motive of the Rocky mountain hunting trip—which will quietly extend away up to McQuesten river in the Yukon, where the Klayakuk tribe of Snow Indians wait, close-mouthed and patient, around the Canadian post of Armstrong creek, until the good Jesuit Father Lavagneux shall give the word: "They come!"

In San Francisco there is a man who knows the banker, James L. Butler. And there is a gold miner of the Yukon, Tom Leemore, who, with Georges Dupuy and James Butler, actually saw—so they say—the awful Keratosaurus, photographed it in its rampage when it tore down great rocks and took prints of its giant tracks.

THE DUKE HAS THE PHOTO.

Who has seen the photograph of the Partridge creek monster? Not the Dawson City authorities, who refused to lend mules and fifty men to capture it. Not the editor of the Daily Nugget, who called Georges Dupuy "a rival of Edgar Poe." The miner, Leemore, who remained at Armstrong creek, confided it to Father Lavagneux alone "to interest some rich and serious European sport" and now that Georges Dupuy is back in Paris with the Duke of Westminster to back him, the most extraordinary photograph on earth is in the young duke's pocket—while Dupuy has in his pocket a most liberal contract to fit out an expedition that is to include even the chartering of a 4,000 ton steamship to bring straight to London the live monster, weighing itself fifty tons and more.



THE DUKE OF WESTMINSTER, WHO PARISIANS BELIEVE, IS FITTING OUT AN EXPEDITION IN SEARCH OF A PREHISTORIC ALASKAN MONSTER.

The Duke of Westminster has also in his pocket the following letter written by the Jesuit missionary Lavagneux (a French Canadian) to Georges Dupuy, after his arrival in Paris. It is the letter that enclosed the photograph.

Armstrong Creek, Canadian Post, Jan. 1, 1908.

My Dear Boy: The McQuesten trader has just arrived here with his sledge and dogs. He will make the hard trip to Dawson by the Barlow, Flat Creek and the Dominion. On his return I count to have fresh food and news from the outside world—perhaps from your dear self, with a word for the friend, Leemore, who, as you will see by the precious inclosure herewith, deems the time now ripe for your best efforts.

And now, as to ferocious animals, would you believe, in the name of our Lord, that I and ten of my Indians again saw, on Christmas afternoon, Leemore's terrible monster! It passed like a hurricane over the frozen surface of the river, smashing, crashing, dashing into the air behind it enormous blocks of broken ice. All its hairy fur was covered with hoar frost and its terrible red eyes flamed in the twilight!

The monster held in its mouth a cariboo weighing at least 700 pounds while careering along at twenty miles per hour! At the corner of the "cut-off" it disappeared.

In company with Chief Stineshane and two of his sons I took prints of its tracks, exactly as you, Butler, Leemore and I did, that last day, in the moose leak. Now, my son, Leemore insists that you——

Here ends all but the business part of the letter. The present writer does not pretend to have copied more than a copy of the original; there are omissions; it is a translation; and there may be words not in the original; but as to the substantial exactness of everything in it touching the monster, I am positively convinced.

THE MEN WHO SAW THE MONSTER.

As to the perfect good faith of Georges Dupuy there is no doubt. His place in Paris as a writer and sporting explorer is well fixed. Regularly on the staff of the "Auto" sporting daily, it was he who, when the New York-Paris automobile race was being organized, gave all the force of his authority to denying the possibility of any automobile's crossing Bering strait upon the ice—which doesn't exist.

Dupuy is one of the present day Parisians who travel. During the past ten years he has explored the earth and produced books that rival those of the Count de La Vaulx himself. He has been three times to the Klondike, for example.

James Lewis Butler, his friend and San Francisco banker, being up at Dawson City buying gold claims, had agreed last summer to join him on a hunting trip at the post on the McQuesten. Taking his coffee on good Father Lavagneux's porch, Dupuy saw Butler hurrying to him from a birch bark canoe propelled by two Indians.

"My dear Dupuy," said Butler, shaking with emotion, "do you know that there are prehistoric monsters alive up here? I've just seen one!"

Laughing, the French sport led the San Francisco banker inside to the Jesuit missionary. Curiously, Father Lavagneux heard him without incredulity.

"From Gravel lake, which I reached Tuesday night, my next camp was the mouth of Clear creek, where I thought to meet your men. Terrible going; forty miles in swamp. At night I joyfully perceived Grant's cabin lights," said the banker.

"Next morning, yesterday, Grant came, announcing in his furtive, silent manner three big moose in pasture back of Partridge creek. Grant, your two Indians and I started out. We saw the moose. They had been quietly eating lichen. Now they suddenly gave out a cry of terror. Off they dashed at breakneck speed. What was the matter?

"At the moose-leak a prodigy stared us in the face. Fresh in the mud we saw the print of a monstrous body. The belly had made a gully track two feet deep, thirty feet long and twelve feet wide. And four gigantic feet—a yard by half a yard in size with claws twelve inches long—so scared the Indians that they just lay down and prayed!"

Grant and Butler had followed the tracks out of the mud, down the valley three miles to a place in the ravine of Partridge creek that rare prospectors call the "gulf;" and there they disappeared.

At 5 a. m. next morning Father Lavagneux, Dupuy, Butler and Leemore, the only nearby miner, hastily sent for to join the dangerous hunt, went to the tracks, accompanied by five Indians. Neither the sergeant of the mounted police nor the "trader" would have anything to do with it.

"All that morning we tramped the flats of Partridge creek," says Dupuy. "We found no new tracks. At noon we built a fire in a small very rocky gully. Just as the tea was boiling, down came crashing an avalanche of boulders amid thunderous snortings, roarings, rumblings that made the earth tremble!

"The monster, black, gigantic, lurched down the ravine beyond us, sweeping great rocks aside like so many pebbles!

"Butler, Father Lavagneux and I were petrified. The Indians fell prostrate.

"'A Keratosaurus! It's the Keratosaurus of the Arctic circle,' babbled Father Lavagneux while the Titanic creature stopped and stared at us with what looked a playful curiosity!

"For ten long minutes, nailed to the spot, we stared at the prehistoric thing that stared at us. In full daylight! You know that you have seen the Eiffel tower? I know that I have seen the Keratosaurus! Its withers stood twenty-five feet high. Its entire body—from the extremity of its rhinosceros-horn to the end of its tail—measured over seventy feet. Its hide was like that of a wild boar, with long coarse hairy bristles, gray-black.

"Then, suddenly, the monster raised its head and roared like thunder and went romping down the ravine in vast bounds at forty miles per hour. It's head, held forty feet above the earth, was the last thing I saw in the whirlwind of big rocks a-hell-racketing behind it!

THE MINER COOLY "SNAPPED HIM."

"'No use to have shot at such a fellow,' I heard someone saying casually. But I got three good snapshots of him with my old kodak, with the sun well on my back.'"

It was Leemore, the miner, the most phlegmatic temperament Dupuy has ever come across in years of wandering. While the others were transfixed with horror, he was quietly calculating what he could make of those snapshots.

"If I take them into Dawson, one of two things will surely happen," he replied to all appeals for copies later. "Either those smart Alecs down there will give us the laugh for faked-up photographs, or else, there's just a possibility the whole town will come out to catch the Keratosaurus. Where will I be in it? Where will you be in it? We'll keep quiet, and Father Lavagneux and Dupuy, here, will interest one of those English sporting lords who won't think anything of fitting out an expedition, chartering a steamship, squaring us all in a proper, lordly manner * * *"

There you have the bare facts that are leading the young Duke of Westminster to make a "social vacation" in America, so Parisians believe.

"On the 24th of the month Butler and I, after two days of repose, went down to Dawson," says Dupuy. He must have had a disagreement with Leemore; or else Leemore said they might go ahead and try it without photographic proofs.

"We asked the governor for fifty armed men and a lot of mules," explained Dupuy. "For thirty days we were the laughing stock of Dawson City, and the Daily Nugget published on myself a flattering editorial that had for title, 'A Rival of Edgar Allen Poe.'"

At this hour, even, when they are engaged in actually fitting out their expedition, I think neither he nor the young duk will be disturbed that I have given away their secret.

"No one will believe it," said the duke while dining at Paillard's. No one will believe that they have chartered a tramp German steamer with the privilege of tearing out of it a steel-grilled central space sixty feet long, twenty-five feet wide and thirty deep. What for? What do you think?

AN AMERICAN IN PARIS.

TO CONVERT KING EDWARD.

The Mormons of Utah, through their missionaries in England, have set out to accomplish the conversion to their faith of His Majesty, King Edward VII.

Elder Soren Peterson of Logan, Utah, now president of the London conference, is the instrument selected by the Lord's agents in Salt Lake City to effect the regeneration of this king of earthly kings. Whether the reputation of Mormons as polygamists will impress His Royal Highnes favorably, unfavorably or not at all is a matter of conjecture on the part of Zion's workers in London.

If Elder Peterson's ambition and prayers are fulfilled and the "defender of the faith" is won from the Church of England to the church of Joseph Smith, Brigham Young and Reed Smoot the effect will be far reaching. A revision of the map of nations may result and Buckingham palace may become a European annex to the Bee-Hive house.

"I have now in course of preparation the finest copy of the Book of Mormon ever printed," said Elder Sorenson. "On the front cover will be inscribed in gilt letters the king's name and mine. When the book is finished I shall seek an audience with His Majesty and I believe it will be granted me. If I fail I shall employ other means to place this work in the hands of the king."

Through the conversion of a number of police "constables" in London the Mormons believe they have taken a distinct step forward in their campaign. At first the workers gave their attention to the Whitechapel district and plucked brands from the burning in the crowded tenement quarters. When the necessity for service in the royal vineyard was revealed to them they directed their guns against the London "bobbies," finally baptizing some of them as Latter Day Saints.

"We have undertaken a house-to-house campaign which is to include every dwelling, high and low, in London," said the missionary. "First we distribute tracts. On the second call we leave more tracts and seek personal interviews with the occupants of the houses. Then we call a third time to explain the tenets of our faith and invite the hearers to our meetings."

And meanwhile the same work is being prosecuted with vigor all over Europe. Equal attention is to be given Berlin and Paris.

So far not all has been rosy with the Mormon elders in Germany. They have been expelled from some towns and in others the workers have found it advisable to disguise themselves as students before the local police have permitted them to so much as enter. But the report that these elders are preaching polygamy is denounced by the workers here as the fabrication of wicked newspaper men in the employ of Satan.

"But we are making encouraging progress," Elder Peterson said. "The Mormon church now claims 5,000 converts on the continent and as many in England. Last year in England we baptized 130 and this year's work has started out even more favorably. We have a sixty-years' lease on our headquarters building in London and expect to purchase a $100,000 building on Stamford hill soon. Already we own a building in Rotterdam and several in Denmark."

The church also owns two buildings in Liverpool, where Apostle Charles W. Penrose, one of the twelve, has his headquarters, and from which he directs the work throughout Europe.

Not Altogether.

From the Baltimore American.

"So your wife made a sharp retort when you took her to task, did she?"

"I don't know that you could call it a sharp retort exactly."

"What was it?"

On May 10, 1869, the Last Spike Was Driven in the Union Pacific Railway—An Event That Marked the Birth of a Commercial Empire.

To-day, the 10th of May, marks the thirty-ninth anniversary of one of the greatest commercial events in the history of the United States. Just thirty-nine years ago to-day the last spikes were driven in the first railroad to link the great West commercially with the rest of the United States. So the year which marks the ninety-ninth anniversary of Lincoln's birth also marks the anniversary by sixty years less of the Pacific railroads, in which he so strongly believed and which he did much to encourage. For it was Lincoln who showed the greatest faith and enthusiasm of any public man of his time in a transcontinental road.

The whole country, which so long had held aloof from the Pacific railroad projects, seemed to awaken and realize the meaning of the ceremony which was being performed at the little railroad town of Promontory in Utah, 638 miles east of Sacramento. All the principal offices of the country were connected by telegraph with the now forgotten town of Promontory, and the click of the instrument communicated to waiting thousands the blows of the hammers on the last spikes of the road.

WHEN THE LAST TIE WAS LAID.

The governor of California had come from the coast to attend the ceremonies, but from the East there was the scantiest representation. The last tie was made of highly polished California laurel. On this tie was a silver plate bearing the inscription

The Last Tie
May 10, 1869.

Into this were driven four spikes, two of silver and two of gold, and the great link to the Pacific was completed.

Since then things have changed vastly and wonderfully within almost the time of a single generation. The old West practically has vanished and with it the features which made the building of the first Pacific a wonderful romance. In the first twenty-five years after the completion of the road it accomplished results which have influenced the whole world to a striking degree.

When the first Pacific line was built engineers ran their tracks around a boulder rather than move it, and even gave way to the largest trees. And, though an authority writes that the constructors of the Union Pacific builded better than they knew, it has taken at least 100 million dollars to reconstruct the road and make it an efficient transportation system, judged by modern standards.

To-day with the Western Pacific, now nearing completion, not even mountains can turn the engineer aside. The boulder which obstructed the early engineer has become as a pebble to his successor, to be snatched out of the way in a moment. In the early days it was "get there somehow." To-day it is get there directly and wisely.

THE RAILROAD AND THE INDIAN.

And the Indian. The change in Western railroading is the change in his history. Only thirty-nine years ago he fought it and scalped its builders. To-day he is a mere wielder of the pick and shovel on the newest line. The railroad owes a certain debt, however, to the Indian of early days, for it is due to him that the best pass through the Black Hills was discovered. Known as Sherman's pass it was only found after months of searching by what closely approached an accident to General Dodge, an engineer of the Union Pacific. After having searched in vain for a suitable pass he was chased one day by a band of Indians, and in escaping, found that he had come upon by luck just that pass for which he had been searching.

From the banks of the Missouri to the Pacific coast this anniversary is worth remembering. It marks the birth of the commercial empire of the West, the greatest industrial kingdom ever conquered by the agencies of civilization. To the East it is of scarcely less importance, for it has given the residents of that section their greatest granary of foodstuffs and the greatest market for their products. Thirty-nine years ago to-day with the stroke of the hammers on the last spikes of gold and silver, the conquering of the West was begun. To-day the West has railway systems which might be the envy of the East or of Europe.

A Good Reason.

From the New York Times.

"And is Gladys at all conceited?"

THE TIP EVIL STILL GROWS.

Millionaire Americans Have Demoralized Public Resorts of Europe.

To tip or not to tip is the question confronting all classes of society in England just at present. The habit of exacting tips has grown so by what it fed upon that now the givers of tips are raising an outcry against tip grabbers throughout Europe.

Traveling Americans are held to be directly responsible for this situation. Their lavish expenditure in this direction has simply demoralized Europe. In many places millionaire Americans who desire to demonstrate that they "possess the rocks" have allowed their desire for notoriety to exceed their judgment. The consequence is that, when the next person, more moderately endowed, makes his appearance, he meets the contumely of the upturned nose and the reversed hand.

At railway stations, big hotels, restaurants and theaters the habit of tipping is more or less an unassailable custom. And though it long has been the custom for tips to be freely given—and more freely expected, perhaps—at English country mansions the domestic bandits have recently grown even more rapacious. If one is invited for a week-end visit it is almost as costly as putting up at a first class hotel. Every servant—even though he only hands you your cane or umbrella—expects not less than $5 on your departure. Recently, at the end of a few days' shooting at a well known country house, the departing guest offered the gamekeeper $10 in the form of two golden sovereigns. The minion of the gun room turned his back on the proffered gift with the cool remark: "Sir, this is a paper house;" meaning that nothing less than a five-pound note should have been tendered.

The most exacting adepts of the tip in country places are chauffeurs who drive one to and from his destination. Unlike old fashioned family coachmen who were satisfied with a modest reward for such service, the chauffeur regards himself in the light of a privileged functionary. If one fails to tip him both going and coming he does not hesitate to let the fact be known. Doubtless he regards himself in the light of a species of life saver, entitled to a reward for not running his car into an obstruction.

The treatment of an invited guest at a country mansion is governed by the chauffeur's manner on arrival. The other servants can tell at a glance whether or not the guest has "opened up" in a way equal to expectation. If not, a hundred and one embarrassing little things are likely to happen before the end of your visit and the visitor can congratulate himself if he doesn't have to fetch his own hot water in the morning.

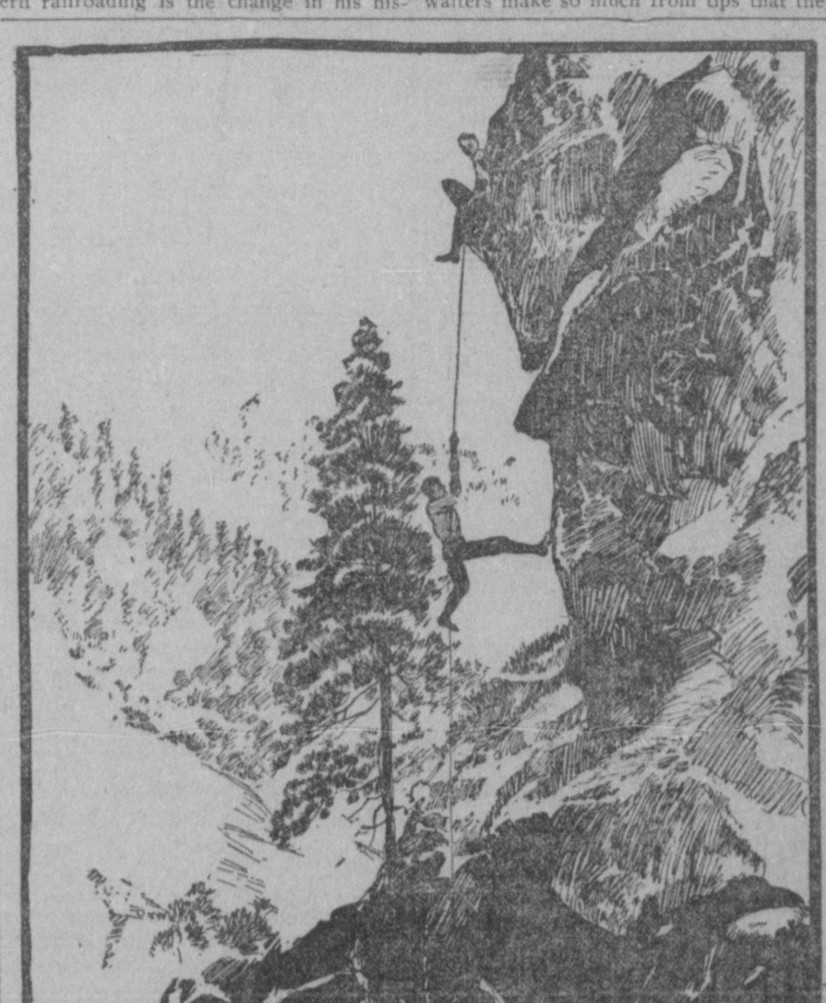
It seems that there is a tendency to revert to the times of old when tipping in great houses almost amounted to a species of blackmail. It was customary for servants to "line up" in the hall and to expect $5 for every article handed to the departing guest. On one occasion a man refused to take his own gloves from the hand of a servant because he did not consider them worth the price expected by way of a tip.

A few years ago it was usual at most of the better class restaurants to pay by way of a tip 10 per cent of whatever a meal cost. But now all this is changed. Waiters expect not less than 15 per cent and even 20 is demanded at such resorts as the Ritz and Carlton. In other places the waiter commandeers all the change from a banknote, even though it is a considerable amount. There are many hotels where waiters make so much from tips that they pay for the positions they hold. In such institutions it is almost as much as one's life is worth not to give an adequate tip. Public insult is meted out to all such delinquents and an appeal to the proprietor meets with scant sympathy, naturally enough, as that dignitary shares in the expected "swag."

For this state of affairs the management of these places is entirely to blame. The waiters have to depend for their living upon "voluntary contributions," and the consequence is that the public must suffer from unreasonable exactions.

At railway stations the greatest offenders in tip-dispensing are also Americans. They bestow half-crowns (sixty cents) where they should only give twelve cents at most. The consequence is that Americans are "spotted" and sought after to the neglect of the steady-going Britisher, who ponders deeply before parting with a silver sixpence (value twelve cents).

It is a singular phenomenon that this mania for tip-grabbing has followed wealthy Americans all over Europe. Many select continental resorts have been ruined, owing to the fact that a few traveling millionaires have passed through and, by lavish tip-squandering, have raised the hopes of all who "also serve" by only standing and waiting for tips upon which they expect to retire for the rest of their days. There now are to be found on the continent few unexplored resorts which have escaped the man who seeks fame through the largeness of his donations. Wherever this class of persons has been the general public to follow is sure to suffer.



RAILWAY ENGINEERS OF TO-DAY WILL NOT BE TURNED ASIDE EVEN BY MOUNTAINS.

BY WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

"IT is a race—" said Victor Murdock, reflectively, as he balanced his cigar in his right hand after hearing that Stubbs had definitely decided to run for governor and let Bristow have a clear field against Long in the race for senator, "a race"—and Victor paused, hunting for a word—"a race between icebergs!" Which practically epitomizes the senatorial contest in Kansas this year.

To Kansas Senator Long has always been an alien. And Bristow—alas for Bristow!—he has committed the one unpardonable sin for Kansas: He is "cold."

Long cannot talk the Kansas language; Billy Morgan is his chief interpreter and Mort Albaugh translates the high Kansas of Morgan into the low Kansas of Andy Richards; but Bristow, though he can and does talk the Kansas language, pure and undefiled, with the bark on; hot, turbulent and impassioned at times, he seems to be talking it through a megaphone. It is a voice crying from afar off. The people understand what he is saying; they like what he is saying—but they don't seem to see the man behind the voice.

"And yet," said Tom McNeal, who is one of the most human of all Kansans, "I used to feel just that way about him; but after I got well acquainted with old Joe I came to like him. He is the most likable fellow in the world, when you get far enough into his heart to know it."

"Still," said McNeal's interlocutor, "you never knew anyone to just naturally 'take to' Joe, did you?"

"No," replied McNeal, as he looked away for a moment, grinning; "I should say Joe was a kind of acquired taste—like olives!"

"The great trouble with Joe" said Henry Allen, "is that he doesn't 'belong.' If Joe just 'belonged'—that is, drank a little beer once in a while and sat into a game sometimes, or went pussy-footing over the state looking after 'the situation'—no one on earth could beat him for anything. Joe is the loyalest fellow in the world. He is warm-hearted, generous and as brave as a lion. He is a regular wildcat for his friends in a fight. But he doesn't 'belong,' and he never will 'belong;' it simply isn't in him, and he will have to win some other way."

And yet, in the face of this, Bristow has not broken with a friend in all his twenty years' career in Kansas politics. He has "got along" with Cyrus Leland; because, Leland will tell you, "Joe stands hitched." Which means that Bristow keeps his word, doesn't try to lie out of a promise, isn't one thing to one man, and another thing to the next man who comes along. He has the thing in character that men call bottom. His honesty is not a veneer; there is something fundamental—almost clumsy about it. It is so serious a thing—this heavy, plodding honesty of Bristow, that it has dwarfed his sense of humor—which after all is a sense of tragedy, and the man whose giggler generally creaks and needs oiling, also has dust in his tear ducts. If he could laugh easier, he could cry easier, and could "feel another's woe" easier, and that is the gist of the whole matter. Grind a joke or a heartbreak into Bristow, and he sees it, feels it, and it moves him deeply. But humor and pathos are not always in his eyes as he looks out into this vain world. For to Bristow it is a world of work. The man is a dynamo of energy. Everything he has on earth he has worked for. Life is a serious business with Bristow, full of toil and moil, struggle and contest, sowing and reaping.

His whole career has been one of hardship. He left the home of his father, an itinerant Methodist preacher in Southern and Central Kansas, when he was a boy in his teens. He got hold of a miserable little farm on the eastern slope of the Flint hills in 1880 and soon after got married and began rearing a family. The farm didn't pay—no one could make it pay—and young Bristow decided that he needed an education. So he packed up his family and went to Baker university at Baldwin. There he soberly went to work to acquire useful knowledge. He didn't have a good time, as the boys were having it about him. A man with a wife and family going to school isn't much given to the frivolities of youth. But Bristow did acquire an education. He learned everything in all the books that were put before him. He went into the college contests, and won some and lost some, but win or lose he never went in with an idea of enjoying himself. He went to school to improve his mind, and he improved it. If ever a man absolutely got, possessed, acquired and accumulated for his own in fee simple, the thing they call an education, Bristow got it.

He was not a popular idol in school; but he was absolutely respected. No one sneered at him. And when Baldwin City wanted something in the Republican county convention in 1888, Bristow was looked upon as the man who could best represent the township—a Methodist township, that had not been getting its deserts in county politics; so, Baldwin City and Palmyra township came down to the county convention for "Our Joe" for clerk of the district court. That was the closest approach to the frivolity of a nickname that Bristow ever had. He was nominated and elected. He had organized the Blaine and Logan club in Baldwin in 1884, and found that he liked politics. So when he was elected clerk of the court in Douglas county, and went to Lawrence he got a notion that politics should be his career.

It is odd for a young fellow in these days to pick out deliberately a political career. But Bristow did that thing. There is no chance element in his nature. He never, like Micawber, is "waiting for something to turn up." He is rather up and doing. So he bought the Salina Republican-Journal of J. L. Brady after serving his second term as clerk of the court, moved to Salina, and in 1894 ran for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Fifth district and was defeated by W. A. Calderhead. He was made secretary of the Republican state committee that year and Governor Morrill made Bristow his private secretary in 1895. Thus he became acquainted with all the Kansas politicians and their ways. In 1896 he was again secretary of the state central committee and his hard routine work made him recognized as a power in the West. So at Mr. Leland's suggestion and upon the urgent request of Governor Morrill McKinley made Bristow fourth assistant postmaster general.

The place of fourth assistant postmaster general is honestly administered, a place of hard, grinding work. If administered, as often it had been, it was a headsman's job and required nothing better than a grateful disposition and a swift, sure ax, to make it a success. McKinley desired the place run honestly, so Bristow began to acquire enemies. They did not interest him. For he was interested in his work. He peered ahead with his searchlight glasses, and saw only the track beyond, and so, like an engine he plunged into danger. The Spanish war brought the corruption that follows war. Senator Mark Hanna had some Ohio debts to pay, and put some of his henchmen in Cuba, into the postal service. The henchmen naturally weren't satisfied with honest money. They went to stealing because they thought they were protected, and as the Cubans were paying for it, why they put all four feet in the trough, and there was a scandal.

McKinley sent for Bristow. Bristow indicated that it was Hanna's friends who were stealing, and said that he had no desire to go to Cuba to whitewash any one—not even Hanna's henchmen. McKinley promised Bristow that there should be no whitewash; Bristow went to Cuba and a number of Hanna's friends went to jail, and Bristow made an enemy—the most powerful one in the government. He stormed the White house demanding Bristow's removal; McKinley smiled, but Bristow stayed. He laid tricks and set traps to get Bristow, but McKinley knew the game, and Bristow stayed, and when McKinley was killed, Hanna took up the matter of Bristow's removal with Roosevelt on the train to Canton with the body of the dead President. Hanna was implacable. But when scandal broke out in the postoffice department, Roosevelt sent for Bristow, and again Bristow went after the crooks, and put a lot of them in jail. It took work—hard, prosy, monotonous work. There was nothing pleasant about it—nothing dramatic, nothing spectacular. It was painful; it was disagreeable; it was heartbreaking, but Bristow did it, and did it so well that twice after he left Washington Roosevelt of his own motion has called Bristow back to do work that required absolute honesty, absolutely impartiality and entire absence of fear.

This work was on the Panama railroad enquiry, and the call for that work came from Roosevelt and Taft, not from any Kansas politician. They wanted a man above politics. And Secretary Taft said that Bristow's report was the most marvelously accurate and absolutely fair and intelligent report that the government had received in years. The report concerned the cost of maintaining and running the Panama railroad. It was out of Bristow's line, but it, too, took work, and Bristow had the capacity for work, and he succeeded.

That is the life of the man who has grown up in Kansas, who played a strong, manly part in national politics, who has been in the very heart of Kansas politics, and yet, according to his best friend in this world, who does not "belong." He has kept himself clean from scandal; he has gone through many devious ways, but has come out undefiled. So the politicians dislike him, and he has to be well known to be well liked. He is an acquired taste, and has lived on the whole rather a lonely life. It has been a life without much fun in it—and there's the secret of it. When he was a boy and a young man, he was so mortal poor and so mortal ambitious that he kept working while others played, that he might reach his goal. He has grown to be a serious, earnest, conscientious man, and now that he is stirred to the heart of him by the iniquities of our present transportation system, he is going at his senatorial candidacy in the same fervid, blind, determined, dogged way that he went into college, worked in Washington and toiled in Panama. His work is not brilliant, but it is deep and sincere, and, best of all, it is brave. He fears nothing on earth. He is wedded to his ideals, and nothing can divorce him.

In his campaign one big idea has possessed him, and that is that no just railroad rates will be established in America until rates are based on the cost of service to the railroad and not on the value of the service to the public. He believes that the cost of service to the railroads cannot be determined accurately until there is a national bureau for finding what railroads are really worth. In this Bristow is following lines laid down by President Roosevelt and by the national railroad commission

Bristow is making his campaign on the recommendation of Roosevelt's messages and on the recommendations of the commission. In his fight he has the same zeal that moved his abolitionist father. He has the grim enthusiasm of Phillips and Garrison. He is for his idea, not so much because the people are for it, but because it is everlastingly right.

And now it is fair to ask what kind of a Senator this lean, earnest, tireless lonely man will make. To begin with, he will go into the Senate with a national reputation. He will have a standing there at the very start, among the men with whom he will work, as high as that of Long, among the men whom Long works with. But the men whom Long works with and the men with whom Bristow would work, are two sets of men. Long represents Aldrich, Allison, Hale and the New England crowd. Bristow would not train with that crowd. He would find the progressive group. Long represents the "interests." "The railroads," said Senator Curtis, "defeated me for senator in 1903." And that was the year Long was elected. Long has stood by his friends. The spirit that makes him a machine man in Kansas has made him loyal to those who were loyal to him when he needed help. He got nothing from the people and he has paid little heed to the people.

Bristow, on the other hand, never has "belonged." He doesn't work well in "organization." He is essentially his own master. At the core of him, he is lonely and thinks out his own problems in his own way. He never was "one of the boys." He never will be. The social bug never has nipped him. He will not be wheedled, or coaxed or bossed away from his ideals. He is strong. His is the strength of the man who is captain of his own soul.

The question before Kansas is a simple one: Shall Kansas send this determined, hard-headed, single-minded, candid, zealous, impassioned, courageous man to Washington to represent Kansas; or shall the machine send a machine man, who can get offices for the boys to represent Wall street in Washington, and the boys at home? Shall Kansas be represented by a good natured alien who needs interpreters, but who is at home in the Senate lodge at Washington, or shall Kansas be represented by a rather different man who is afire with the Kansas idea?

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE.

Public Land Opening

UNDER CAREY ACT, IRRIGATED LANDS, EDEN VALLEY, SOUTHERN WYOMING.

150,000 Acres 50 Cents Per Acre

$20 down holds valuable farm in District No. 2. Water assessment $30 per acre, payable in 10 years, pays in full for a perpetual water right and entitles entrymen to proportionate ownership in the irrigation works, which when completed and land settled is turned over to the settlers.

Extract from an official report published by authority of the Wyoming legislature: "The arid land act (Carey Act) is now proving to be the most beneficial to the state of Wyoming of all the United States laws. The State Land Board has taken special and practical interest in furthering interests of the settlers. The state and national governments afford perfect protection for capital invested and to the settler for title to his land and the perpetuity of his water right. There is no possibility of loss to the individual investor or the settlers. The soil, climate and altitude of Wyoming are especially adapted to the most profitable crops grown by irrigation."

Write to-day inclosing 4 cents in stamps for pamphlet and official map containing full particulars as to making entry on lands. Filings made without leaving your home. Address

Lady Mary's London Letter.

LONDON, May 1.—Countess Szechenyi, who was Gladys Vanderbilt, is expected to take London by storm during the coming season. She has arranged to stay in England for a few weeks only, yet in that time it is highly probable that she will cause as great a furore as did Alice Roosevelt when she landed here on her honeymoon. Everybody who is anybody in the American colony is hoping for a chance to entertain her, but up to date she has given her consent to but very few. Mrs. Astor, junior, who from all that I can gather thus far in advance will be the American hostess par excellence this season, is already at work organizing a series of festivities in honor of the visit of the count and countess at Cliveden. Among those who have promised to be present, and indeed who are most anxious to meet the couple, are the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and family.

But perhaps more important still, from the viewpoint of the American visitor, will be her visit to Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid at the embassy, where a grand ball is to be given in her honor. A little bird informed me that it was more than likely that Queen Alexandra herself would be present. Hitherto, although the king and queen are on the best of terms with the American ambassador and his wife, the latter has never attended any of their big social shows. But this time, I understand, she has given a definite promise and can be depended upon to keep it.

The presentation of the Countess Szechenyi is to take place at one of the forthcoming courts, and if reports speak truly she is going to give London a shocker by the sumptuousness of her attire. I hear that work has already been begun on the dress in Paris, that the embroideries to be used are well nigh priceless and that the whole thing will cost a by-no-means-small fortune. Quantities of precious stones are being introduced and if the tout ensemble doesn't go everything that has gone before one better, it will not be because the daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt has not tried.

The plans of the Duchess of Marlborough for her cousin's entertainment have yet to be announced. When the countess landed here from New York she gave only a small dinner party at Sunderland house with a few chosen guests.

Smart Americans will again occupy about one-third of the choice boxes at Covent Garden Opera house this season. Instead of putting the boxes up at auction the management's policy is to allow all subscribers of the previous year the refusal of their places. So that in the majority of cases well-known Americans will be found in the same old positions. There are some exceptions, however.

I hear that one immensely rich American, who, socially speaking, is never apt to "arrive," recently offered a fabulous sum for one of the royal boxes, but was curtly told that these were exclusively reserved for their original occupants.

Lady Lowther, wife of the new British ambassador at Berlin, is one of the most attractive of the many American women who have married diplomats. Being popular as well she will be welcomed not only by her compatriots, but also by a large circle of English friends this season, which she intends to spend in London. She was Alice Blight of Philadelphia when she captured Sir Gerald, who was then first secretary to the British embassy at Washington. His advancement has been rapid. The Lowthers are an extremely powerful family and can accomplish most things with little effort.

There was not much to envy in Lady Lowther's lot at Tangiers while her husband was minister there. Legation life is dull there to a degree, for weeks and weeks go by and absolutely nothing happens. Lady Lowther was telling someone lately that her chief excitement was derived from the arrival of the English and American newspapers.

The marriage of Miss Essie Redmond, the elder daughter of John Remond, leader of the Irish parliamentary party, to Dr. Power of New York, is arousing great interest in Irish and, indeed, English circles, for the Redmonds have many English friends, though they never go out of their way to cultivate them.

"Every stitch of my trousseau is to be made in Ireland," she says. With that object in view she has just gone to Dublin with her stepmother and sister. According to present arrangements the wedding will take place at 6 a. m., an hour which Irish people often select for their marriages. After the wedding Dr. Power and his bride will go to New York, where they will make their home.

Mr. Redmond's second daughter, Miss "Joey" Redmond, although barely 20, is a dramatist, and several of her Irish plays already have been performed. Like the rest of her family, she is ardently patriotic and to have to live for a part of the year in London is one of the many grievances which she treasures up against the hated Saxon. She is a good horsewoman and is often seen in the Row in the early morning taking her canter.

We in English society are delighted to hear that the Charlemagne Towers are expected in London for a brief stay during the coming summer. Berliners whom I have met say that Mrs. Tower is the cleverest American woman in Europe, and we are all looking forward to meeting her. From all accounts she, and not her husband, is the American ambassador to Germany. She runs the embassy as well as Yankee society in the big German capital, and at the same time is on intimate terms with that more than exclusive lady, the kaiserin.

Until the arrival of the Towers in Berlin it was truly a dull spot for Americans, who hitherto, unless of great social standing, were left out in the cold. Like our own Edward, William of Germany has a great penchant for the rich. The Towers spend money royally. They run the embassy on a more expensive scale even than any of the imperial palaces. Moreover, they are decidedly cultured people, and their contributions to hospitals and the kaiserin's pet charities are most lavish. Everyone of importance who has lived in Berlin knows that the empress has some philanthropic scheme everlastingly on hand, and if her friends want to remain her friends they have to "shell out" every other week or so. Many of her charitable enterprises are private affairs. She hears perhaps of orphans in need of assistance, or of a family, which through some accident has come to grief, and off she goes and makes collections for them. In cases of this kind the Charlemagne Towers always come out in the big-hearted manner which characterizes them, so that their uses to the imperial lady cannot be overestimated.

When we say that values range to $25—include regular $20 and $25 garments—we are very conservative.

Were we to have them for our own regular stocks, there is not a thing about them that we would have different.

Every suit is fresh from a specialist in $20 and $25 models

The maker was content to realize his expenses. The suits came to us at what they cost him, and they are going to you at but very little more.

FASHIONABLY MOULDS YOUR FIGURE
ROYAL WORCESTER ADJUSTO CORSET

PRICE $3

The ADJUSTO is equally adapted to medium or average figures. It is skillfully designed to fashionably mold and shape the form into graceful lines.

The ADJUSTO bands, when tightened, lift the abdomen, hold it firmly, and support it comfortably. Gradually the excess flesh of hips and back is reduced and distributed equally, giving the straight back and new flat-hip effect.

My duties require my standing most of the time, and until I wore the ADJUSTO it was difficult to finish my day's work without becoming exhausted. I can now do more work with less exertion, and feel much better. It supports my figure perfectly, and is the strongest and most serviceable corset I have ever worn.

Another remarked—"Since wearing the ADJUSTO my hips, abdomen and waist have become noticeably smaller, and my figure greatly improved. In all other corsets I require size 27, but I wear a size 25 ADJUSTO with perfect ease."

All genuine ADJUSTO Corsets have trade mark "ADJUSTO" stamped on inside of corset. This ADJUSTO trade-mark is your protection against imitations.

ANCIENT Greece's Olympic carnival will be outdone on a scale of magnificence never dreamed of by Athenian sportsmen in the fifth revival of these Hellenic games to be celebrated this coming July in London. For the first time in the history of modern athletics every nation of the civilized world will send teams comprising its finest athletic specimens to struggle for the world's honors in tests of speed, strength and skill.

But while all the countries of the world will figure more or less, the actual fight will reduce itself to a determined struggle between the athletes of the United States and England. Apparently the one thing that rankles in the breasts of the English athletic rulers is the fact that in nearly every previous meet between the two countries the American has been too much for the Briton, and no country likes to be habitually beaten. Heretofore the English have made all maner of excuses for the string of American triumphs, and this year they hope to get even with a vengeance. The United States has won all four previous Olympic meets.

T. MOFFITT, THE UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA INTER-COLLEGIATE CHAMPION HIGH JUMPER.

The average American "rooter" has a very limited conception of the far reaching plan England has on foot for the discomfiture of the United States. The English committee has organized into one team the athletes of England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. In previous years England has been our only competitor, but this year the four islands will be grouped into one team. For months the English committee has been working with its athletic material, and nothing will be left undone to put on this team every available point winner England possesses.

Some American enthusiasts are inclined to think that in view of previous meetings we should have no trouble in soundly beating the British. They argue that our straight run of victories in the Olympic meets of the past prove that we are invincible. But they should remember that at Athens in 1896 and 1906, at Paris in 1900 and St. Louis in 1904 England did not have her full strength, nor even half of it. This time the meet is held on English soil, the Britons have the advantage of their own climate and we the very great disadvantage of having to become acclimated, a handicap that no one fully understands unless he has had to experience it. So although the signs point to an American victory, it is by no means a certainty.

CAREFUL PREPARATION IN AMERICA.

If possible the American committee is going the English body one better in the thoroughness with which it is building up plans for its team. In spite of the fact that we have won all the Olympic meets to date, the 1908 team should be fully 50 per cent stronger than any of its predecessors. For the first time there is in charge of the team a central committee whose business it is to get out and on the team the full strength of this country. In 1896 only a small body of American athletes went to Athens, and in 1900 at Paris, although there was a much larger representation, it consisted in the main of college teams not working together. In 1904 when the meet was held at St. Louis the American competitors were limited almost entirely to the club athletes, there being only a scattering of the college champions. There was very little improvement in conditions at Athens in 1906. At that time the spring dates and a ruling of the committee in charge made it absolutely impossible for the undergraduate college athletes to compete. Consequently the very cream of America's athletes were kept off the team. This condition, however, was the fault of no one in America.

"At present no defects can be found in the method of selecting the American team. The plan to hold three elimination trials means that every athlete of ability will have a fair show to make the team and that there can be no charges of favoritism. The 1906 team, with the single exception of Sheppard, comprised the strongest men available, though it was not selected from tryouts. The committee overcame that difficulty by taking all the men who were available. This year the field from which the team will be selected is much larger and the elimination process is necessary.

It is safe to say that the 1908 team will be composed for the most part of college men, graduates or undergraduates. There was never a time, it is true, when the club men were so active or produced such splendid records as now, but a perusal of any athletic almanac will show that by far the majority of our world and American records are held by the college men. Further proof of this is the fact that good as was our Olympic team of 1906, another team of strictly undergraduate athletes could have been picked and beaten our Olympic representatives in a dual meet. These same records show that the American team will be well rounded in every event, the only possible weakness being in the distance runs, where Americans have always been second to the English.

In the sprints we will be especially well cared for. Naturally the man on whom the most dependence is placed is N. J. Cartmell, the captain of the University of Pennsylvania team, and for two years in succession the holder of the intercollegiate championship in the 100 and 220-yard dashes. Cartmell has a record of 9 4-5 seconds for the 100 yards and 21 2-5 second for the furlong event. What distinguishes him principally is his consistency, for he always is good for ten seconds in the short sprint and is even more reliable in the longer race. He also has the advantage of having raced in England. His chief antagonist on the other side will be Morton. For 100 yards Morton will push Cartmell hard, but since the event is 100 meters, nearly 110 yards, Cartmell will have the advantage. Besides Cartmell America has some first-class sprinters in Huff and May of Illinois, Butler and Stevens of Yale, Dodge of Harvard, Gamble of Princeton, Parsons of San Francisco, a 9 4-5 man, and several of the club men.

FAST MEN AT 400 YARDS.

For the 400 meters dash America is, if anything, better fixed than for the sprints. There are two certainties here—Taylor of Pennsylvania and Hillman of the New York Athletic club. Taylor is the intercollegiate champion with a record of 48 4-5 seconds, and so easily has he won his races and broken records that he has never reached his limit of speed. Like Cartmell, Taylor has had experieence with the English climate. Next to Taylor the best man in this country for the 400 is Hillman, who holds the Olympic record for the distance of 49 1-5 seconds, thanks to the fact that Taylor was not at St. Louis when he made this mark. But Hillman is, at the worst, only a fraction of a second behind Taylor and England must uncover a phenomenon to head off either man. Among the other sterling quarter milers are Townsend and French of Cornell, likewise Rogers of the same institution if he tries for the team; Merriam, Quigley and Barker of Chicago, Clarner of San Francisco and Atlee of Princeton, every one of whom can do close to fifty seconds or better.

In the 800 meter run America is well fortified. The star performer in this event is Melvin Sheppard, who two years ago came within one-fifth of a second of the world's record of 1:53 2-5. If he can repeat his performance he ought to have no difficulty holding his own with the best England has for this distance. It is unfortunate for America that Guy Haskins, the intercollegiate mile and half-mile champion, has been declared ineligible for the American team because he is a native of New Zealand. Although he comes from the Antipodes, Haskins never did any running until he matriculated at the University of Pennsylvania, but at the same time he never took the trouble to become naturalized, though he intended to settle down in this country. His loss deprives the American team of the one man in this country confidently counted on to give the Britons a fight in the 1,500 meter run. In the 800 meters with Haskins gone the men who will have to help Sheppard are Lightbody of Chicago, Glarner of San Francisco, Ramey, the former Michigan star; Parson of Yale, the intercollegiate record holder for the half-mile; Pilgrim, who won the 800 meters at Athens in 1906; French, Carpenter and Townsend of Cornell and Sheehan of Boston. Next to Haskins the best milers for 1,500 meters are Coe of Michigan, who did better than 4:22 at the intercollegiates last June; Rowe of the same school, White, a youngster who has been developed into a star over winter in New York; Sullivan of the Irish A. A. C., and Sheppard, who has a record of 4:22 for this distance.

America does not expect much in the five-mile or Marathon runs. The growth of distance running has been extremely slow in this country and we do not often produce men capable of winning Marathon honors. For the five-mile run we will certainly secure some good men among the intercollegiate cross-country stars, and Nelson, Bonhag, Bellairs and two or three others among the clubmen are likely to make a respectable showing. There will be reason for surprise, as well as rejoicing, if we score many points in either of these events.

For the 110 meter hurdles America can present a trio of star performers, hardly one of which can be matched on the other side. These are Garrells of Michigan, the intercollegiate champion; Shaw of Dartmouth and Smithson of Portland, Ore. Garrells is undoubtedly the best of the trio and, in fact, is almost as fast a man over the high sticks as was Kraenzlain, the world champion. Garrells has been credited with 15 1-5 seconds for 120 yards, but a slight wind caused the record to be disallowed. Garrells, although a graduate of Michigan, has returned to Ann Arbor and is training under the direction of Coach Fitzpatrick. Smithson has been doing phenomenal work in the East within the last year and should be good for 15 2-5 seconds without trouble. Shaw is hardly as fast as his mates, but his record is better than that of any of his English rivals. As there is no 200 meter hurdle race on the programme this year a different set of hurdlers will have to be found for the 400 meter event. The mainstay in this event will be Harry Hillman, the holder of the Olympic record of 58 seconds.

AMERICA STRONG IN THE FIELD.

But strong as is the American squad in the track events an even cleaner sweep should be made in the field events. For some reason our English rivals do not take as quickly to the field events, in which success depends so much on cleverness. This is particularly true in the jumps and the pole vault. In the high jump the English champions, with their old-fashioned style, appear like novices when contrasted with American representatives. In fact, it has been only through observation of the American methods that the English have improved at all in this event. Consequently it will be conceded without argument that men like Moffitt, Pennsylvania's intercollegiate champion, with a record of 6.03¼, and Porter of Cornell, who has done 6.03, should have things their own way, and that even Patterson of Michigan, Marshall of Yale and Risley, the former Colgate and Penn man, should do better than England's best, who is Leahy of Ireland.

In the broad jump there has been but one Englishman in athletic history superior to America's representatives. This single exception is O'Connor, with a record of 24 feet 11 inches, but this performance has always been surrounded by doubt, and two years ago O'Connor lost to Prinstein at Athens. This year America's best men probably will be Dan Kelly, now of New York, Cook of Cornell and Heath and French of Michigan. Kelly is the National A. A. U. champion and has done 24 feet 3 inches, while Cook also has a mark of 24 feet and both Heath and French are capable of doing 23 feet.

Dray of Yale and Cook of Cornell, the latter the world champion and runner-up in the pole vault, should have things their own way in this event. In fact, Americans do not look to England to give them any opposition here, but to Sweden and France. Dray has a mark of 12 feet 5¼ inches and Cook has done 12 feet 3 inches. Gonder of France won the event at Athens two years ago with a vault of 11 feet 6 inches, which is about the limit of the Europeans.

America has world champions to offer in three weight events, the hammer throw, shot put and discus. In case McGrath is not eligible to throw the hammer for America on account of his nationality, this event can be well cared for by Flanagan, who held the world record at 172 feet 11 inches until McGrath last summer bettered this mark by nine inches. England has no man who can throw within twenty-five feet of Flanagan, so we should be assured of first place here. There also are some very good men in the colleges who should be able to beat out the Britons. These include Cooney of Yale, with a mark of 161 feet; Horr of Syracuse, who can do as well, or Talbott of Cornell, who holds the world's record for the twelve-pound hammer.

For the shot-put no better men could be found than Ralph Rose and W. W. Coe, both former Michigan men and world champions. Rose now holds the world's record with a mark of 49 feet 7½ inches, having beaten by 1½ inches the record of Coe, made nearly three years ago. In addition to these two men America can make use of the services of Garrells and Krueger, the latter from Swarthmore college, and holder of the intercollegiate record of 46 feet 5½ inches. In addition to this quartet there are half a dozen men in America capable of doing 44 feet or better.

This country is just as well fortified for the discus throw with Martin Sheridan, the all around champion, and Garrells, the intercollegiate title holder. Sheridan has the world record of 133 feet 1-3 inch, but Garrells has a collegiate record of 140 feet. That this was never allowed by the A. A. U. authorities is due to some technical defect alleged to have been found in Garrell's discus.

In view of the fact that the American athletes must compete in a foreign and enervating climate it is of the greatest importance that they be handled by an expert trainer. Consequently the appointment of M. C. Murphy of the University of Pennsylvania, to the position as trainer of the team has allayed a multitude of fears. Murphy's appointment means that the American team will enter the Olympic games with the minimum number of men out of condition. Although Mr. Murphy has no equal in coaching athletes his wonderful intuition in bringing a big team of men to the fine edge of condition, known as "fit," is more wonderful yet.

Mr. Murphy is too wise a man to interfere in any way with the training of the athletes who come to him from other colleges unless they specially request it. He will take it for granted that most of the men will reach him in pretty good condition and that his problem will be to have them go to their marks in London in the best condition possible.

The American committee has done everything in its power to insure a fair selection of the team. The three preliminary tryouts at San Francisco May 16, at Philadelphia June 6 and Chicago June 13, will insure every candidate in the country a fair chance to make the team. The only arrangement which might be wished otherwise is the sailing date, June 27. This will allow the team only a week of training in England before the games are held, whereas they should have at least two weeks to become acclimated and recover from the sea voyage.

HAND-EMBROIDERED MILLINER

DOUBLY blessed is the home-sewer who has mastered the art of rapid, showy embroidery, for her millinery bill will be greatly reduced thereby. This is a summer of embroidered hats, embroidered sun bonnets and embroidered Charlotte Corday caps. Likewise it is a summer in which almost every costume demands its matching hat, thanks to eccentricities in coloring. The girl who can embroider a hat or fetching cap to match each of her summer frocks of lawn or linen will be strictly in the swim at small expense.

For the past few years the lingerie hat has been considered the privilege of the rich only, because, unless made by a master hand, it was apt to look dowdy. But the American woman is most resourceful and persevering, so she has attacked every lingerie hat difficulty and emerged triumphant.

The most marked departure of this season in lingerie hats is the wide range of colors and trimming. Formerly white linen or pique only was used for the foundation of the stiff embroidered hat, with perhaps a bow of white or delicately tinted ribbon, while for the more dressy hat white lace plaited or fluted and entwined with soft ribbon, was used.

This season the linen and lawn hats come in all colors to match frocks, six or seven shades of blue, and as many of pink, shading from the heart of a blush rose to the rich American beauty hue. Of yellows I have seen at least four shades in both linen and lawn, in addition to browns and the natural pongee shade. Many of the white hats are embroidered in colors, and, vice versa, you will find colored linens embroidered in white.

Trimmings are equally catholic and varied. On the stiff linen sailor you will find the inevitable "Merry Widow" or Alsatian bow, but generally there will be at least one huge, placid looking rose tucked on the left side or in the very center of the bow. Or there may be a stiff, almost tailored wreath of small flowers around the crown and a huge bow in the front.

TRIMMING FOR FINE LINGERIE HATS.

The lingerie hat is finely shirred or plaited lawn, with lace and embroidery of the very finest sort inset or edging the brim, and may be trimmed with quantities of flowers and choux of lace. Huge choux of mirror velvet, looking for all the world like heads of lettuce with flowers for their hearts, are used for trimming the lace hats.

For wear with a rather heavy linen, pique, madras or percale costume, there is nothing better than the hand-embroidered sailor to match, and for that use is shown a very good model, with a detached crown which buttons to the brim by means of shaped tabs. These are unbuttoned when the hat is to be laundered, and the ribbon is run under the tabs when the hat is made up. The pattern consists of a foundation brim and band, an embroidered brim and the crown. The girl who is quick with her embroidery needle can ornament this shape with Wallachian or English eyelet stitchery, but the girl who is inexperienced had best buy heavy all-over embroidery, of which she will require seven-eighths of a yard. She can then finish the edge of the brim with scallops, heavily buttonhole stitched with mercerized floss, or she can use a narrow, finely plaited Val. edge.

This pattern will look well in any of the colored linens, embroidered with self-tone or white, and trimmed with matching or shaded ribbons. I saw the other day in a smart shop a sailor built on just these lines in natural colored linen, simply scalloped around the edge with natural toned floss. The ribbon running round the crown was rose-colored, and for trimming there were three enormous silk pompons, in as many shades of rose color, from pale to almost a cerise tint.

LINEN HAT WITH RED FLOSS.

Another stunning combination showed a linen suit in natural pongee color, with a hat to match, embroidered in a perfect shade of cardinal red floss and trimmed with an Alsatian bow of cardinal red taffeta ribbon. A cardinal vestee was worn with the suit.

A lovely lingerie hat shown with a gown of cream colored batiste was of cream-colored linen embroidered with Wallachian stitches in two exquisite shades of pink. The flowers in the pattern were done in the lighter shade of pink, the eyelets in the darker shade, and the only trimming on the hat was a bow made almost entirely of loops in two shades of pink velvet ribbon matching the tones used in the embroidery. The chemisette and cuffs of the batiste dress were embroidered in pink to match the hat.

The Charlotte Corday cap, which is enjoying a tremendous vogue, is shaped not unlike a high dusting cap, with a soft, rather narrow brim made of one deep or a number of narrow flounces, either lace of embroidery. It is generally trimmed quite elaborately with twisted coils of ribbon, in colors, or in black velvet, or in the new gilt and silver ribbons. A favorite combination on the Charlotte Corday hat of fine lace or embroidery is delicate blue ribbon with pink roses or delicate pink ribbon with blue forgetmenots. Exquisite little yellow flowers such as never grew in any garden or field, are combined with black velvet ribbons.

When the frock is of lawn with a combination trimming of lace and embroidery, both lace and embroidery appear in the hat, and generally speaking, the hat is more becoming if innumerable little plaited frills of lace face the brim.

FETCHING SUNBONNETS.

For the outdoor girl, there is the usual array of fetching sunbonnets, and the very newest fancy is to have the strings come out from the center of the back of the brim, instead of either side.

Pique hats and sunbonnets are in vogue for girlies as well as their elder sisters, and no little maiden's summer wardrobe is complete without a stiff hand embroidered hat and a fussy sunbonnet, which is generally a mass of embroidery and lace. When a little girl has a best frock of delicately tinted batiste or lawn either pink, blue or yellow, most effective is a matching hat or bonnet, made from the same material, especially if the fabric be embroidered. Children also have hats and little coats embroidered alike.

SHORT SLEEVES LOSING VOGUE.

By Autumn It Is Certain That They Will Be Entirely Out of Favor.

From Mrs. Osborn's Letter in the June Delineator.

As usual, sleeves are of prime importance in the warm weather wardrobe. More than any other detail of the toilet they betray the exact date of its creation. "A gown is as old as its sleeve" is an axiom of the dressmaking profession.

In Paris the short sleeve is already passe. The American woman, however, will not drop it abruptly for the long sleeve. She will be inclined to temporize on account of the heat of our long summer, but by autumn it is a certainty that the short sleeve will have been laid to rest.

One of the best examples of the typical small sleeve is used in the tailleur. It is full length, of course, close fitting and with no perceptible fulness at the armhole. An excellent phase of it is illustrated in the costume of shantung in the shade called "ashes of violets." The little coat has a square seamed postilion back and a deep V-shaped closing in the front that is caught to one side with a darker tone chou of silk, plaited and ruched into a clever semblance of a double violet.

The sleeve is most interesting and unusual for it has but one seam, and that on the outside of the arm. The sleeve buttons from the elbow to the wrist with a bias line of great buttonholes bound in cloth, and small round cloth-covered buttons. The armhole of the coat is turned under and piped so that the seam is as flat as possible.

The Outdoor Girl's Gloves.

Unless you are a typical outdoor girl with a large income, do not invest in chamois skin gloves for summer. The athletic girl who drives a great deal likes this large loose glove for rough wear, but they are not a good investment for the typical summer girl. They make the hand look large, and while they wash as clerks guarantee they will, like the chamois skin you use for cleaning windows, they have weak spots and wash through on the latter. A good silk glove is a far better investment, but do not be inveigled into buying brilliant blues, greens, purples and rose colors to match your silk or linen frock. White, or soft shade of tan, are in better taste; black gloves are hot in summer and should be worn by those in mourning only.

The Button Craze.

Beware button trimming on your summer gown unless you have quantities of pretty buttons to use. Half a dozen buttons of ordinary style scattered on a blouse, and a dozen more on a skirt make no showing whatever. On the summer coat you may use two or three very large, showy buttons on the front, but if you are trimming a gown with them you must have dozens of small buttons arranged in groups or designs. Neither are plain buttons used except on severely tailored suits. The crocheted button is most popular.

Damask Cloth for a Luncheon.

From Vogue.

For an informal luncheon a damask cloth has a wide band of conventionalized pomegranates with green leaves—the fruit shading from palest lemon to deep orange. The centerpiece, a dainty crystal vase encircled by grape fruits and mandarins, wreathed in leaves, among which are seen a bewildering mass of brilliant nasturtiums. The china with a design of nasturtiums is also charmingly in keeping with the rest.

STYLES FOR YOUNG GIRLS

AFTERNOON AND SUNDAY FROCKS IN NEW AND CHARMING DESIGNS.

The Line Between Fashions for Misses and Older Women Is Now Distinctly and Definitely Drawn—The New Way of Fitting a Girl's Dress.

From the New York Herald.

Most attractive are the styles this season for the afternoon and Sunday frocks for girls from 12 to 17 years of age. The apparent simplicity of the models is most becoming to any girl, and the colors and fabrics seem to be especially suitable this year to bright complexions and clear skins, while the fashions are not so involved or complex as is sometimes the case.

More and more it is noticeable that time and thought are bestowed upon this question of fashions for young girls, and no longer are the same models used for young and old, as was done a few years since. On the contrary, the line is most distinctly and definitely drawn, and it is considered quite as incongruous for a young girl to be dressed like an older woman as it is for the older woman to be dressed like the young girl. Certain styles, certain colors and certain fabrics are assigned to each, and the rules are extremely strict in regard to what is correct for each.

DAINTY MODELS FOR THE GIRL OF SIXTEEN.

The afternoon and Sunday frock is much more elaborate and expensive than the school or morning frock and is also different from the one suitable for a dance. At the same time there must be in all a certain appearance of simplicity. Voiles, cassimeres, light weight cloths and this season the different weaves of pongee may be included and all are considered suitable for this purpose.

With the clear complexion and bright tints of youth the color question does not have to be so carefully considered, and with bright colors the more delicate shades can be used. Blue, pink, cerise, tan and gray are all youthful colors and are extremely becoming to young girls, but mauve and purple in the more exaggerated and darker shades of brown are relegated to the older women. A pearl of silver gray is becoming to and suitable for young girls, but all the shades of steel or dark gray are inappropriate. There are many mixed effects that are most attractive, and plaids, checks, stripes and polka dots are to be had in endless variety of design.

TUCKED SKIRTS IN FAVOR.

Skirts are more generally becoming if made with some fullness. The tight fitting, many gored skirt is not satisfactory or smart and is, in truth, not well adapted to a girlish figure. At the same time care must be taken not to have the skirts too full, and if there are gathers, shirring or tucks they must be most carefully worked out, otherwise the hips are made to look too large. The double skirt is rarely to be seen for young girls, and the plaited skirt, in the many variations that are so fashionable, is the most generally popular of all. The favorite double skirt is made on the double flounce order, for there is one wide flounce on the drop skirt, and then the upper skirt, cut on the same lines, hangs over it. The objection to the double skirt or overskirt is that it cuts the figure and makes a girl look so much shorter, and at the moment it is fashionable for girls as well as older women to look tall and slender.

Fortunately the time has passed when no attention was paid to having a girl's clothes fit well, when the gathered skirt and full waist were the only patterns furnished and any variety was obtained by the disposition of the gathers or the fullness. Now each and every girl's figure is consulted, and just as much attention is paid to each and every frock the girl wears as when she is full grown. Waists should not fit tight; soft full effects are far more becoming and far smarter than any others, but this does not mean that there are no carefully studied lines. One of the most expensive and most successful of dressmakers, who for many years has turned out the smartest of gowns, never puts a tight lining in any frock, but there is a most carefully cut thin lining in everything she makes, and a broad corselet belt of thin material defines the waist most becomingly.

GUIMPES AND THE DUTCH NECK.

Fitting the yoke a guimpe is one of the problems that must be solved, for a perfectly fitting guimpe makes the simplest frock look well, and vice versa, a badly fitting one ruins the most elaborate and expenive model. There should be no end of trouble taken to begin with. There should be a most carefully fitted pattern to copy. After that the battle is won. Schoolgirls are not expected to wear high collars; are, indeed, supposed not to wear them, as it is contended that the high, tight fitting collar injures the shape of the throat.

With all frocks on the elaborate order the round collarless neck or the square Dutch neck is fashionable. With the school frock or simple skirt this fashion even seems smart and appropriate, and the turn down collar, plain or with just a little embroidery, is substituted. The height of the collar should be determined by the length of the neck, always avoiding the extreme in every way.

Tailor Mades With Trains.

From Vogue.

Afternoon costumes are a new departure in picturesque and superlative chic styles. They are specially designed for the wearer on the same principle that great portrait painters insist on choosing the character of gown to be worn by the sitter. These costumes have long trailing skirts, long tunics, or long skirted coats that take tunic lines. They fly open from the shoulders. For the present season they have been of chiffon cloths and Liberty satins, mingled with Greek nets, while later the same modish nets and linen or fine duck may be combined. For their trimming are used white passementeries and heavy braiding, with touches of raised embroidery in places.

Deceitful Appearances.

DESSERTS WITH EARLY FRUITS.

Strawberries, Pineapples and Pieplant Make a Tasty Dessert.

After a winter of plum puddings, rich custards and heavy mince pies all the members of the household will welcome the sight and taste of early fruits. In large cities strawberries have been in market for some time, pineapples are plentiful and cheap and pieplant always makes a tasty dessert after a sweet salad. Here are a few recipes which the housewife will welcome:

Pieplant Pie—This pie should have only the lower crust of fairly rich pastry. Cover a deep pie dish with a crust and fill with the following: Stew the pieplant in as little water as possible until very tender. Beat the yolks of two eggs, two tablespoons of cornstarch and half a cup of sugar all together. Put this in the pieplant and let it boil until thick, then add the juice of one small lemon. Fill the crust with this. Make a meringue of the whites of the eggs and two tablespoons of sugar, and brown in medium oven.

Pineapple Tipsy—Cut the top from a large, very ripe pineapple. Also cut sufficient from the stalk end to make it stand firmly on a platter. Now remove all the inside portion of the pineapple, tearing it away with a fork and leaving nothing but the hollow case. Remove the hard pieces of the fruit and cut into small dice. Put these into a deep dish with an equal amount of fresh strawberries, cut in halves. Sprinkle liberally with granulated sugar and cover with a wineglass of sherry, place on the ice for an hour, occasionally basting the fruit with the syrup which forms. Put the pineapple case in the ice box. When ready to serve, add half a cupful of nut meats to the fruit mixture, fill the pineapple case and serve on a platter garnished with geranium leaves.

Rhubarb Tartlets—Make a puff paste as follows and fill tart shells with it: One pound of butter, one of flour and the white of one egg. Wash the salt out of the butter, or use fresh butter, if you have it. It is likewise better to use what is known as pastry flour, not patent. Take a little of the butter with the flour and white of an egg and mix into dough with a small quantity of ice water. Roll out rather thin, spread on a layer of butter, fold over and roll again. Repeat this process until the butter is all used. Now put this away on the ice until the next day, when it will be ready for use. Fill the tart shells with rather a thick layer of this, brown in quick oven and fill with rhubarb, prepared as follows: Neatly trim one pound of fresh rhubarb, remove all the fibers, wash in cold water, drain and cut into pices not over an inch long. Place in saucepan with four ounces of sugar (preferably brown) and half a teaspoonful of vanilla extract. Mix well with a wooden spoon, cover the pan and let it cook slowly for about twenty minutes, stirring frequently. Fill shells with this, edge with powdered sugar and serve.

Strawberry Charlotte Russe—Line the bottom of a tin or china mold with white paper and the sides with split lady fingers or thin slices of sponge cake. Soak one ounce of gelatine in half a pint of cold water. When soft, place on the fire and let it remain until dissolved. Press one quart of fresh strawberries through a sieve and add to them one cup of powdered sugar. When the gelatine is cold mix with the berries and sugar, add one pint of cream whipped stiff and sweetened to taste. Pour this mixture into the middle of the lined mold and place on ice. This is to be eaten ice cold.

Almond Delight Pie.

From the Boston Post.

Make a crust by creaming eight ounces of butter, then adding three ounces of powdered sugar, the yolks of two eggs, two tablespoons of milk and three-fourths pound sifted flour. Knead until stiff enough to roll out to one-half inch in thickness. Spread this paste upon two round buttered pie tins. Make a filling for the pies by blanching and chopping fine one cup of almonds. Then pour one cup granulated sugar moistened with one teaspoon of water, into a frying pan. Place over a slow fire until melted, then add the chopped almonds, stirring briskly until the mixture turns golden brown. Turn this out on the paste and spread quickly before it cools. Beat three whole eggs with an egg beater, gradually adding two tablespoons powdered sugar. Stir into this one and one-half cups milk and then pour the mixture over the browned almonds and sugar in the pies, and bake in a hot oven. As soon as the custard is firm spread over each pie a meringue of two egg whites beaten stiff and mixed with two tablespoons powdered sugar. Let brown lightly.

THE EXAMPLE OF DES MOINES.

The city of Des Moines has rendered a real service to the entire country in the development of a Commission government. In every way Des Moines was peculiarly fitted to set this standard of modern government before the cities of America and the fact that it has made good to the absolute satisfaction of the people there must have the greatest possible weight with other municipalities.

Des Moines, in the first place, is entitled to rank among the large cities of the country. It has a population estimated at about 100,000. A government that will adequately meet the demand of the present day for a city of that proportion cannot be ascribed as inadequate to meet the requirements of cities much larger. In all potential factors the affairs of Des Moines and of a city of five times greater population are subject to the same rule of government, and Des Moines has demonstrated to the cities of the Nation that it has practically solved the problem of efficient municipal government.

Another felicitous feature of the Des Moines plan is the fact that it is a city of great wealth, of superior attainment in the intelligence and culture of its people. It is one of the historic cities of the United States; it has the age that guarantees wisdom. Its people are conservative, and inclined to tread the old and well-tried paths. No great emergency brought about the Commission government in Des Moines, as was the case in Galveston. It was not the love of innovation that created the demand for the abolition of the moss-grown, out-of-date ward representation plan of conducting its municipal affairs. No sporadic reform issue brought about the change in Des Moines's civic rule.

It was merely the evolution natural where conservative intelligence is applied to public affairs. Des Moines became convinced, as every American city has been convinced, that the old-style government was inadequate and inefficient. Facing this condition, there was in Des Moines the public conscience and public intelligence to meet the emergency. The people were quick to respond to the suggestion that only complete revolution in municipal matters would answer the purpose. They placed their city government upon a business, rather than a political, basis, and the result has amply justified their action.

Kansas City, Kas., can well afford to follow Des Moines's example. The entire country has been compelled to acknowledge that the Iowa city has taken an advanced step. Kansas City, Kas., is most fortunate in the opportunity presented to be the second large city in America to avail itself of this model and modern form of government.

THE CHARM OF INDIA.

England has been in India for 150 years. It has established British settlements in some of the chief cities. It has constructed thousands of miles of railways. It has founded schools for higher education. It has trained numerous Hindus at Oxford and Cambridge. But it has not yet succeeded in convincing even a handful of the people that English civilization is more desirable than the simpler life to which they are accustomed. That the mass of the people, illiterate and superstitious, should remain untouched by an alien culture is not strange. But the average Englishman is incessantly surprised that the educated Hindu does not forthwith and automatically become British.

In Shaw's play, "Caesar and Cleopatra," the English secretary, Britannus, says: "O Caesar, if I could but persuade you to regard life seriously as men do in my country! What Briton speaks as you do in your moments of levity? What Briton neglects to attend services at the sacred grove? What Briton wears clothes of many colors as you do, instead of plain blue, as all solid, well esteemed men should? These are moral questions with us."

They are still. That is why Hindu perversity is a matter of grief in London. It throws light, too, on the Bengalese conspiracy to overthrow British rule that was discovered a few days ago. Undoubtedly Asia has a charm for Asiatics that they find missing in the busy life of Europe and America. One reason, perhaps, is their dislike of the machinery of social intercourse. A Turkish ambassador to Paris once told an English friend that he found the endless detail of living there almost insupportable. Life was full of social obligations, of formal parties, of imperative engagements. Mechanism, he felt, was destroying the joy of civilization. He liked to go as he pleased, to be free and independent. This was possible in Turkey, but not in France.

A Hindu at the World's Parliament of Religions in Chicago put the difference on higher grounds when he said: "I am often afraid when I contemplate the condition of European and American society, where your activities are so manifest, your work so extensive, that you are drowned in it. You have little time to consider the great question of regeneration, of personal sanctification, of trial and judgment and of acceptance before God."

This criticism is based on a fundamental divergence. The Hindu cares nothing for the material accessories of Western civilization. Millions in India live on a few cents a day without distress or regret. To the allurements of furniture, clothes, foods, they are indifferent. While such a culture has its drawbacks it has certain obvious advantages. For the poor man is without servility. He is independent. He cannot be controlled by money. India is without a proletariat.

This essential difference in ideals is what has maintained the barrier between English and Asiatics on the vast peninsula. Eventually it seems likely to end the British empire in the East.

AS TO "WEALTHY MALEFACTORS."

"It is true that there are wealthy men in the United States, just as there are men who measure six feet or more," says the Square Deal, a monthly magazine published at Battle Creek and edited in New York. This statement precedes a general discussion of wealth and its accumulation, to the general effect that disparity in possessions is inevitable and that success is merely an index of superior capacity. It should be said that the Square Deal seems to be published primarily in opposition to labor unions. However, it follows the conventional argument of the privileged and discredits the idea that the "wealthy malefactors" are sufficiently numerous to justify their classification.

It is a common argument in defense of the very rich that many of them began poor. Great accumulations from small beginnings are regarded as the natural development of innate ability—like the six-foot stature of the man who comes of six-foot stock. It ought to be remembered that stature cannot be prevented, physical conditions being normal; but on the other hand it cannot be purchased, nor stolen, nor borrowed nor even earned. But the simile is about as sound as the common reasoning advanced against predatory wealth.

There are instances of large wealth, honestly achieved, and the world has no quarrel with those who have thus acquired fortune, especially if they make good use of it. But the greatest riches in this country have been largely acquired by unfair methods. Sometimes they have accrued through criminal practices, by systematic, conscious violation of law; sometimes by methods sanctioned by law, but still immoral and indefensible; sometimes by cunning subterfuges that violate the spirit and observe the letter of the law. From the purely material standpoint—as a means of success and in its relation to those who do not seek thus to advance their interests—it does not matter much whether money is stolen, whether it is taken by fraud, whether it is extorted through the exactions of monopoly, whether it comes from the fructification of a high protective tariff, whether it grows out of rebates, whether it is made out of a corner on wheat, corn or cotton, whether it is amassed from franchise grabbing or whether it is gained from the sale of watered stock, for all of these methods necessarily imply the use of artificial power to secure something for nothing; that is, the margin of abnormal profits always represents gain that does not in turn represent value received.

It will be admitted that some methods of enrichment are now outlawed statutorily or morally, that once were regarded as legitimate. It is a mark of progress in national morals when it can be said that some of these methods have been voluntarily abandoned while others have been prohibited by law; when every man engaged in business has had the standards of honesty and fair play laid down so that he can no longer plead ignorance or innocence if he takes advantage of those with whom he trades.

THE WHEAT CROP AND THE "WIDOWS AND ORPHANS."

The conditions now prevailing indicate an enormous wheat crop. This will mean good times for the country. But if any widows and orphans have bought wheat in the speculative market they are likely to encounter a loss.

This, it must be admitted, will be bad for the widows and orphans. But few other persons will regret the bumper crop because of that.

Curiously, a wholly different view is insisted upon when stocks and bonds are subjected to shrinkage by an adjustment to conditions which are good for the country. The square deal is to economic conditions what a beneficent year is to natural wealth. But if the square deal results in overturning fictitious values in the speculative markets it is argued with vehemence that the good of the country depends on profit-taking in stocks.

Those who are injured by a blessing, whether the blessing is a plentiful harvest or a rule of honesty, may be more unfotunate than culpable. But Povidence will withhold its early and latter rains in their behalf. And government should not avoid fair play to suit them.

Mrs. Gunness and Other Moral Derelicts.

Thus wrote Reginald Heber in his "Missionary Hymn" of Ceylon's isle and various other foreign lands. But such affairs as the Gunness murders in Indiana suggest the universal kinship of a race which after all in its most favored portions is only a few thousand years out of barbarism. Occasionally an individual appears even in the most advanced civilization with the instincts and lack of moral sense of the man of the stone age. The case of Mrs. Gunness at once recalls that of the Benders and of Holmes of "Holmes Castle" notoriety.

In these persons the normal restraints of society seem to have been wholly wanting. They murdered, calmly and calculatingly, with no personal feeling against the victim. He had something that they desired and the easiest way to get it was to kill, which they did without compunction. Such abnormalities are rare in Western Europe and America. They are fairly common in some other parts of the world, where they are not regarded as extraordinary.

Thus, the Thugs in India were a religious order who did murder in honor of a goddess. They constituted a caste whose members were carefully trained for the profession. It was part of their moral code that murders should be bloodless. The victims were dexterously strangled. But there is nothing to show that the Thug had the slightest compunction in carrying on his profession. Murder was not repellant to him. His whole training made him regard the taking of human life as no different from the slaughter of any other animal. In Turkey there is much evidence that a considerable proportion of the Mohammedan population looks with indifference on the murder of the unbelieving Christians. To slay them is not regarded as a sin, though circumstances, to be sure, usually make such violence inadvisable.

The obvious inference is that pity, humanity, sympathy are acquired traits, resulting from the peculiar development of Western society. Under different social conditions they may never show themselves or they may even be regarded as weaknesses. Your small boy, then, starts in life with a blank state morally. He is as much of a barbarian as his ancestor who went out from his cave every morning with his stone ax to tomahawk a deer or his neighbor. The sort of moral code he develops depends largely on his surroundings. Brought up by the Thugs of India, he becomes a murderer by profession. Reared in Boston, he joins a Peace society.

Occasionally, for some reason or other, the moral restraints of American society go over his head and fail to take hold of him. Then he grows into a moral derelict, without pity, without compunctions. The ordinary motives of civilized men do not stir him and he is more dangerous to society than a maniac. Some such development as this seems to account for the sporadic outbreaks in civilized communities of the murderous Holmeses, Benders and Gunnesses.

A PRAYER.

When joy and laughter rock the world
  And children laugh on every side,
When selfishness has been forgot
  And hands and hearts are opened wide,
And shoulders bend to help the weak,
  And hands reach out to guide along
The feeble ones, and all are kin,

When jealousies are pushed aside,
  And envy finds no dwelling place;
When strong, and erst-aggressive ones,
  Lift up the feeble in the race,
When beggars reap a harvest great
  That make up for the year's scant dole,
When men are moving heart to heart
  And standing soul to soul—

When it is joy to fare abroad,
  And it is pleasure just to live,
And life's one bitter drop is that
  Alas! we have not more to give!
We ask, O God, thy comfort for
  The hearts bereft that grieve and break,
For those no open hands may help!
  Dear God! for the Redeemer's sake!

HE IS EDWARD'S ADVISER.

Viscount Esher, the man who provoked the kaiser's recent historic letter to Lord Tweedmouth, probably wields more secret power than anyone else in England at the present time. Besides being the intimate friend of King Edward, and occupying the unofficial post of his chief adviser, he is a man to be reckoned with in all matters of importance. He is the power behind the throne. Little did the kaiser know of his ability when he said in his letter that Lord Esher should "leave ships alone and stick to drain-pipes," a contemptuous reference to Lord Esher's appointment as deputy constable of Windsor Castle, in which capacity he brought the sanitary arrangements in connection with the king's palace up to date.

LORD ESHER, WHOSE POWER IN ENGLAND WAS UNDERESTIMATED BY THE GERMAN EMPEROR.

Lord Esher is recognized in England as one of the most thoroughly informed authorities on naval affairs. Though his public record as a reorganizer is mainly identified with the war office, Lord Esher is a pastmaster in naval matters. When the task of reforming the army was imposed upon him, as one of the members of the royal commission appointed for that purpose, his first suggestion was that the army should be remodeled along naval lines.

This radical move brought down upon him the criticism of all the "experts," but he finally carried his point, and now it is recognized that he was rght. He is one of the strongest adherents of Admiral Fisher, and, as chairman of the war office reconstruction committee, paid the "Sea Lord" the compliment of following his advice by applying to the army many suggestions which the admiral made.

What aroused the ire of the German emperor was a published letter which Lord Esher sent to the Imperial Maritime league, in which he said that there was not a man in Germany, from the kaiser down, who would not welcome the downfall of Sir John Fisher, or words to that effect. Sir John is the first sea lord, and has practical command of the navy. He has the credit of "scrapping" most of the old ironclads and completely rehabilitating England's first line of defense. This has caused most of the unmuzzled admirals on the retired list to howl wrathfully.

When the cabinet was reconstructed in 1903 Lord Esher was offered the war office, but he refused, ostensibly owing to ill-health, but really because he could exert more power "behind the scenes." Lord Esher was a close personal friend and adviser of Queen Victoria, and acted as intermediary between the queen and her prime ministers on many important occasions. He recently has edited for publication the letters and manuscripts left by the late queen, which shows the great confidence reposed in him by the king. When King Edward came to the throne Lord Esher desired to retire from the court, but the king made most flattering offers and practically installed him as his chief mentor. Wielding almost unlimited power and being able to "run things" without coming into the open, no wonder Lord Esher has steadily refused all posts of public command.

Man.

Caleb C. Colton.

Man is that compound being, created to fill that wide hiatus, that must otherwise have remained unoccupied, between the natural world and the spiritual; and he sympathizes with the one in his death, and will be associated with the other by his resurrection. Without another state, it would be utterly impossible for him to explain the difficulties of this: possessing earth, but destined for heaven, he forms the link between two orders of being, and partakes much of the grossness of the one, and somewhat of the refinement of the other.

He Had Other Qualifications.

From the Chicago Record-Herald.

Pictures of Napoleon generally show him with a frown on his face, but no historian has ever found any evidence to indicate that his frown was what made him great.

SOME WEDDING DAY SURVIVALS.

THIS is about the time of year when we read in the society column that Mr. Henry Brown has captured the heart and hand of Miss Susanne Perkins and that the wedding will take place in early June. When June comes and the wedding has been celebrated at a fashionable church we are favored with an elaborate account of the event, with full and complete descriptions of the costumes of the bride, the groom, the bridesmaids and the best man. The details of the beautiful ring ceremony, impressively performed by the Reverend Mr. Blank, are dwelt upon, and the sumptuous wedding supper, served at the home of the bride's parents by the most prominent caterer in the town, is given its full share of space. Then follows an account of the presents, and incidentally it is mentioned that the groom's presents to the bridesmaids were exquisite and costly. Lastly the happy couple are off for their honeymoon followed by showers of rice and old shoes.

Henry and Susanne and their friends merely re-enact a modernized version of a very ancient social drama. Long before there were newspapers, or churches, or preachers or much else in this world except men and women and wild animals, there were wooings and weddings. But in primitive days and among primitive peoples Henry Browns did not woo and win their Susannes with the sweet lies of love—in fact, we are told that romantic love is an altogether modern sentiment. At all events, the Henry Brown of those days either bought or stole his wife from her father, and as in modern times impecunious swains and dowerless maids persist in braving the perils of matrimony and poverty, so in primitive society if Henry Brown was too poor in horses, oxen, sheep or other chattel property to buy Susanne, or was disposed to be tight fisted, he took some stout, healthy friend as "best man" and proceeded to lie in wait for the girl and carry her off by force. The part of "best man" was not the easy snap in those days that it is now. The best man might get hurt in the fight that was very likely to follow with Susanne's father or big brothers, cousins, uncles or perhaps, her aunts. Such originally was the office of the handsomely dressed "best man" who, minus bludgeon or spear, still accompanies the bridegroom to the altar.

In many parts of the world the form of marriage by capture still survives as sham capture. Among certain tribes of India the groom is obliged to overcome a strong man who is appointed to defend the bride. Among the Mordvins as soon as the suitor and his friends are seen approaching the bride's house it is barricaded and the defenders ask, "Who are you?" The answer is, "Merchants." "What do you wish?" "Living goods." "We do not trade." "We shall take her by force." A show of force is made, but finally the suitors are admitted, after paying twenty kopecks. In Little Russia it is customary to barricade the door of the bride's house with a wheel, but after offering a bottle of brandy as a "pass" the suitor's party is allowed to enter. Among the Esthonians the intermediary comes to the bride's house and pretends that he has lost a cow or a lamb and asks permission to hunt for it. The girl's relatives at first stubbornly deny having any knowledge of its whereabouts, but finally they allow the suitors to search, and the bride usually is found without much delay. In Western Prussia, after the bridegroom has made his terms with the bride and her parents, he comes to their home and says: "We were out hunting and saw a wounded deer run into this house. May we follow its tracks?" Permission is granted, whereupon the men start in pursuit of the bride, who has hidden away with other village maidens. At last the "hound"—one of the bridegroom's companions—finds her and brings her to her lover. Similar customs are said to prevail in parts of Russia, Roumania, Servia, Sardinia and Hungary.

In some places the symbol of capture is still maintained as "bride-racing." In one instance the girl is mounted on a swift horse, is given a good start, and then pursued by her lover similarly mounted. If he overtakes her she becomes his bride. If not the marriage is declared off. As a rule, however, after a little exciting sport Susanne allows herself to be overtaken. Amongst other tribes the symbol of capture is perpetuated in the foot race or water chase in canoes, or the race may be run through a series of tents, as in Siberia. In this case all sorts of obstructions are placed in the way of the groom by the friends of the bride, and if he be successful in running the gauntlet and jumping the improvised hurdles in time to catch the girl he becomes a Benedict. It is also a custom for the "fair one," if she be more fleet-footed than her lover, kindly to wait in the last tent until her Henry Brown catches up.

The custom of making presents to the bridesmaids is a survival from the days when the wife-hunter actually bribed the fair one's girl friends to make no resistance or outcry. We get a glimpse of this in Central India, where the Kurku girls pretend to resist the removal of the bride. When the groom and his friends approach, the girls pelt them with balls of boiled rice and then coyly retreat, followed, of course, by the men. At the door of the house the girls make a stand and only give way when the men have paid toll in the form of presents to them.

The wedding feast also is of very ancient origin and probably began as a part of the purchase price paid by the groom for his bride when he resorted to that method instead of larceny. In fact, eating together often was the only marriage ceremony amongst primitive peoples. Among the Greeks and Romans the final and most highly regarded part of the marriage ceremony was the offering of sacrifices, the saying of prayers and the eating of the sacred wheaten cake at the family hearth. The sacred cake still survives in our wedding cake, a slice of which the bride's girl friends still are wont to place under their pillows. The Jews drink consecrated wine, the Chinese drink tea, and the Japanese, saki, as a substitute for eating wedding cake.

The custom of giving presents to the bride in all probability originally came from the purchase sum paid by the groom to the family of his bride, this purchase sum degenerating into a mere present, which in some cases was returned to the giver, in others given to the bride. In Athens, during the early period, the dower was known, for frequently the bride was provided with a marriage portion by her father or guardian. This led to the giving of presents by the bridegroom to his bride. It was a common observance for gifts to be exchanged between the bride and groom or their guardians and numerous instances of this are recorded. It is part of the ceremony in China and Japan, and Tacitus tells of a similar custom among the old Germans.

The wedding ring also is of ancient origin. When Henry Brown places the plain gold band on the third finger of Susanne's left hand he says, "I thee with all my goods endow," even if he owes the tailor for his wedding clothes. Not so, in olden times. The wedding ring—originally of iron—was placed on the third finger of the bride's left hand to signify that she was "second in command." The groom wore his ring on the third finger of the right hand to signify that he was lord and master and that her duty was to obey.

The honeymoon also had its origin in marriage by capture. When primitive Henry Browne grabbed his Susanne and fled, his first thought was of a safe place in which to hide himself and bride away until the wrath of his father-in-law, his brothers-in-law, his mother-in-law and his wife's other relatives abated. This time of seclusion, thirty days more or less, continued to be observed after the original reason for it had ceased to exist. We have it and observe it still—and sometimes it is yet observed for the very same reasons which originally gave rise to it.

And we still throw rice and old shoes after the bride and groom just as our ancestors have done for ages.

The explanation of rice throwing is simple. It is a custom very widely distributed and practiced and symbolizes the wishes of the throwers that the newly married couple may enjoy abundant temporal blessings. It also is intended as a charm against race suicide.

Fraser in his "Golden Bough" calls attention to the fact that over the greater part of the world the soul is conceived as a bird ready to take flight. This is a conception familiar to most people and it has left its trace in most languages, particularly in poetry. But what is metaphor to a modern poet was sober ernest to his savage ancestor, and is so still to many people. The Malays, for example, carry out this conception to its practical conclusion. If, they argue, the soul is a bird on the wing, it may be attracted by rice and so prevented from taking its perilous flight. In the Celebes it is thought that a bridegroom's soul is apt to fly away, so colored rice is scattered over him to induce it to stay. At South Celebes rice is thrown on the head of anyone in whose honor a festival is held with the object of detaining the soul, which at such times is in especial danger of being lured away by envious demons.

The old shoe throwing custom is more difficult to explain. It is said that the practice obtains only among English speaking peoples or among peoples who have adopted the custom from them.

It is asserted that old shoes were thrown, to begin with, because men believed in their Animism, and we still throw shoes because in spite of all our education and all our science we have not been able to shake ourselves entirely free from the old beliefs and practices of the dark days of the childhood of the race. Animism is the attribution of a personal life or soul to inanimate objects, so that articles of clothing worn by another are endowed with the power of imparting good fortune, as for example, the miracles and cures reported as resulting from touching the garments of saints.

Another theory is that the throwing of the shoe after the bride and groom originally was a symbol of renunciation of dominion over the bride by her father or guardian, and the receipt of the shoe by the bridegroom, even if accidental, was an omen that the authority was transferred to him.

At Anglo-Saxon weddings it was the custom for the father to deliver one of the bride's shoes to the bridegroom, who touched her head with it to show his authority.

Curiously enough, it is said that in Hebrew the same word means wife or shoe, and in the Bibical story of Ruth and Boaz, when Elimelech desired to surrender to Boaz his prior right to Ruth, he drew off his shoe.

But whatever may have been the origin and meaning of the custom it early became general among the English to throw an old shoe after anyone setting out on a journey to bring him good luck, a conception readily derived from either theory of origin.

And Ben Jonson's lines

> Would I had Kemp's shoes
> To throw after you have been explained as meaning that Kemp doubtless was a lucky fellow whose shoes would bring good luck to the person after whom they were thrown.

Another ceremony which is quite widely observed is that of lifting the bride over the doorstep of her new home. This is a survival also from the days of marriage by capture and symbolizes the resistance on the part of the woman, for the bridegroom did not always find the bride willing to be carried off. Sometimes he had to beat her into insensibility before he could take her. When a Votyak bridegroom comes after his bride on the wedding day she is denied to him three times. After that she is searched for, dragged from her hiding place, and her face covered with a cloth, while she screams and struggles. Then she is carried to the yard, placed on a blanket face down, and the bridegroom belabors her with a stick on a pillow which has been tied on her back. After that she becomes amiable and obedient. A Mordvin bride must try to escape from the wagon on the way to church. In old Finland the bride was barricaded in her house even after the wedding and the Island Swedes have the same custom. This burlesque of bridal resistance after marriage occurs also among the wild tribes of India.

ADE'S SLANG WORRIES THEM.

Dramatist's "Americanisms" "Stump" British Theatergoers.

If "The College Widow," which Henry W. Savage is presenting in London, has taught the native Britisher anything it is that the American language, as regards certain purple patches of it, is a foreign tongue. The audiences at the Adelphi, while keenly enjoying the show, are still struggling manfully with George Ade's line of talk."

The management of the American farce have done all in their power to help the English theatergoer to some sort of an appreciation of American slang "a la Ade." For instance, with every programme they give a glossary explaining the plain-English English of such choice bits as "a web-footed rube," "cutting up didoes" and "sick the widow on him." But, although this document is studied assiduously by the audience, they know very little more after than they did before reading it. For one thing, the dialogue and incidents move too rapidly for the mental processes of our Britsh cousins. This, even despite the fact that the pace has been considerably lowered since the dress rehearsal. The players now take things slowly, judged from the American standard, to give the audience an opportunity of understanding some of the Chicago humorist's best efforts. But in vain. The audience goes into convulsions at every performance over the compelling humor of the play, the humor "that makes the whole world kin" and which is independent of the slang, but it does not and cannot appreciate the slang. The lines that were always good for a "laugh" in the United States here pass by unnoticed. It is all absolutely lost on the British audience. It rolls off their comprehension like water off a duck's back; "Stub" Talmage, who can't open his mouth without emitting a delicious piece of slang, gets ripples of encouraging mirth only from the Americans in the audience. But "Bub" Hicks, the "web-footed rube," and the Hon. Elam Hicks, both of Squantumville, who wouldn't know a choice bit of slang if it came up to them in the street and shook them by the hand, can't come on the stage without a burst of joyous rapture from the stalls, the pit, the balcony and the gallery.

All the slang that even George Ade at his best is capable of writing could never have made the play a success if it did not have the elements of universal humor.

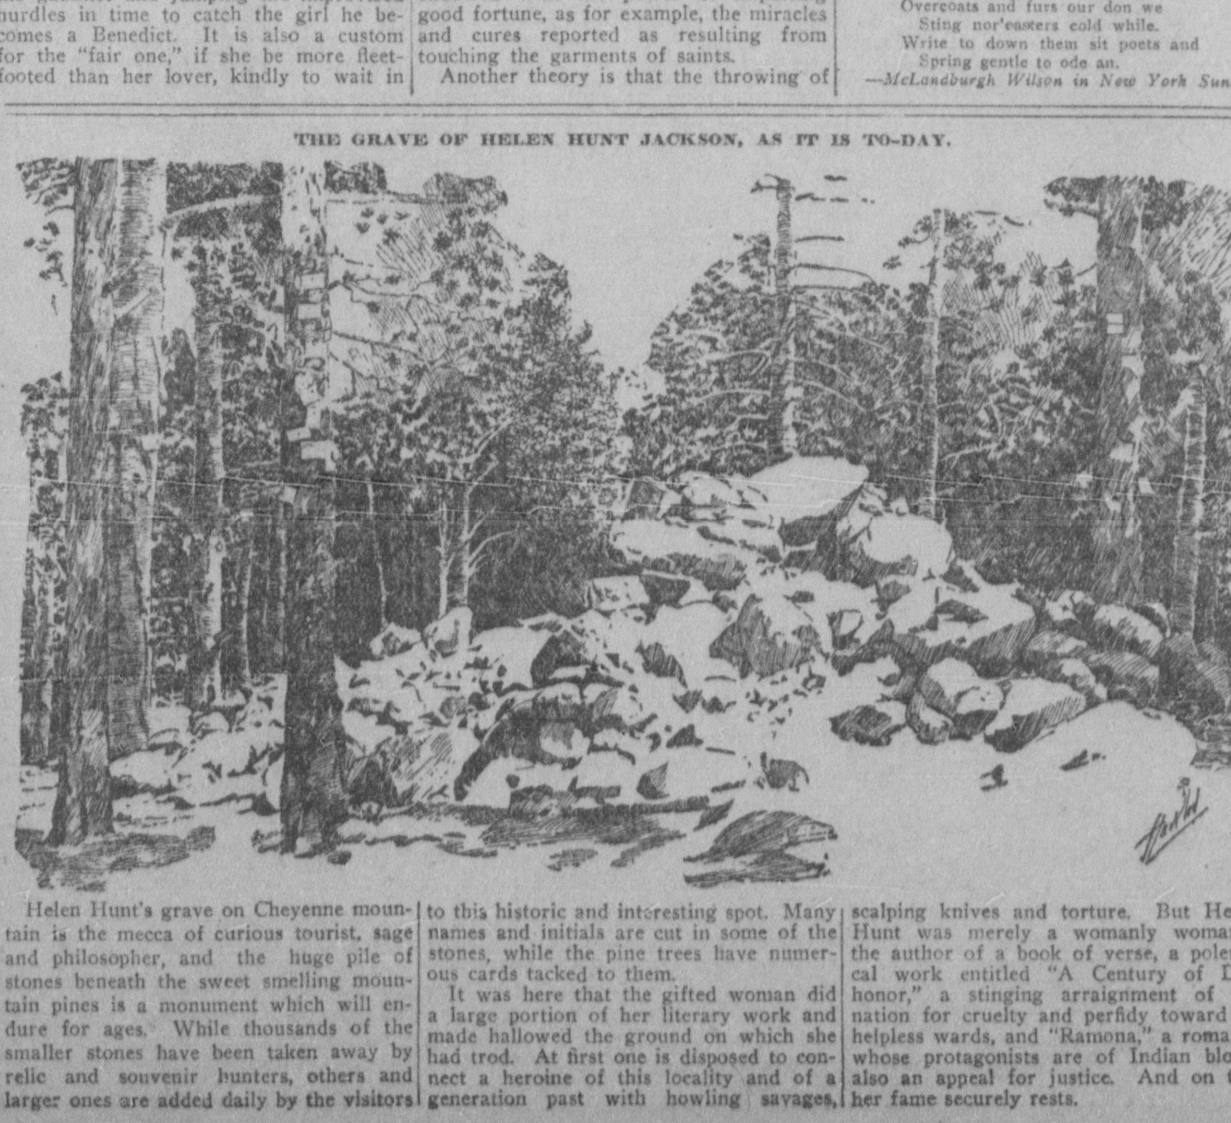
THE GRAVE OF HELEN HUNT JACKSON, AS IT IS TO-DAY.



Helen Hunt's grave on Cheyenne mountain is the mecca of curious tourist, sage and philosopher, and the huge pile of stones beneath the sweet smelling mountain pines is a monument which will endure for ages. While thousands of the smaller stones have been taken away by relic and souvenir hunters, others and larger ones are added daily by the visitors to this historic and interesting spot. Many names and initials are cut in some of the stones, while the pine trees have numerous cards tacked to them.

It was here that the gifted woman did a large portion of her literary work and made hallowed the ground on which she had trod. At first one is disposed to connect a heroine of this locality and of a generation past with howling savages, scalping knives and torture. But Helen Hunt was merely a womanly woman—the author of a book of verse, a polemical work entitled "A Century of Dishonor," a stinging arraignment of the nation for cruelty and perfidy toward its helpless wards, and "Ramona," a romance whose protagonists are of Indian blood, also an appeal for justice. And on this her fame securely rests.

LOVE IN ONE OCTAVE.

Sunday, Madge, you seemed so fair,
  Love, the rascal, came to blind me;
Monday morn I feared your stare;
  Tuesday you thought fit to mind me;
Wednesday—well, perhaps you'd care;
  Thursday saw your lips resigned me;
Friday came the solitaire;
  Saturday, the vows that bind me!

"Well, you will not think me unduly curious if I ask to what denomination you belong?" asked the minister. "I suppose," responded the other, "I'm really what you might call a submerged Presbyterian." "A submerged Presbyterian?" exclaimed the minister. "I should be glad if you would explain." "Well, I was brought up a Presbyterian, my wife is a Methodist, my eldest daughter is a Baptist, my son is the organist at a Unitarian church, my second daughter sings in an Episcopal choir and my youngest goes to a Congregational Sunday school." "But," said the minister, aghast, "you contribute, doubtless, to some church?" "Yes, I contribute to all of them," was the answer; "that's what submerges me."

After many years in an office, and after changing positions often, the girl writes that she has a fine one, which she has kept a long time and thinks she holds it by obeying the following rules: "I never receive a telephone call, nor eat candy, nor chew gum in the office; never visit with other employees, nor permit them to say more than good morning, to which I respond with a slight nod and a somewhat sickly smile; no clerk, office boy, or what not, no matter how puzzled or harassed, is conscious how sorry I am for him or her, and how gladly I would assist—in fact, I sit all day working evenly, cautiously, so that I may not finish my work too soon and be idle."

Some Juvenile Bugaboos.

WHEN you were a boy what was your greatest bugaboo? What were you most afraid of—the thing that had no reality—but which presented the vividest terrors to your nervous soul? Was it a h'ant, the gloomy, still spot in some pool of water, the dark, the shadowy moonlight?

It has been the experience of everyone, particularly the imaginative, to conjure up some horror that set the teeth on edge or brought trembling chills to sturdy young limbs. That is the one unfailing memory of boyhood.

RAN UNTIL MY BREATH FAIRLY WHISTLED.

"My bugaboos were so many that you couldn't count 'em," said George M. Shelley, assessor of water rates, recently. "But the biggest scare I ever had was in an old swimming pool back home. It rained a heap one spring and the boys said that rain was good to raise snakes. There used to be a few water moccasins in the place where we went swimming, but they were scary critters and would dive five miles every time they heard the first boy splash as he dived into the water.

"Now, every boy knows that what will scare one water moccasin won't scare a dozen. They get awful bold, so I have been told, when a lot of 'em get together. I went swimming with a bunch of the lads one day after this rainy spring. We were having a glorious time, the water fights and doing dares, when I happened to look out over the water. A lot of dark specks at the surface with long ripples running back of them caused me to know what they were instanter. They were water moccasins. I let out a yell, leaped with one jump to the bank and started for the bushes without waiting for my clothes.

"I didn't hear any of the other fellows following, so I thought I was left alone as a martyr to those snakes. All boys know a water moccasin can run on land as fast as it can swim, and that's faster than man or boy can do either. So I hit the high places. I quit running after a while and longed for my clothing. Step by step I crept back and at last peered over a hummock. All was still. My clothes were still there, but the boys had put the wet knot in them. While I was untieing the knot a bunch of them broke out of the woods giving me the grand laugh. Each had a small turtle by the tail. You know, a turtle's head poking out of the water looks powerfully like a water moccasin?"

"I had plaited an extra long whip one time," said Frank P. Walsh, in telling of his scariest moment. "I went out in the woods to cut a suitable handle for it. While prowling about a young sapling knee deep in the grass with my knife in my hand, I happened to look back and thought I saw a long brown snake reaching over toward me.

"I left that place. I ran as fast as I thought I could, but when I heard something slashing away after me in the high grass. I put on extra steam. I ran until my breath fairly whistled. It was near three-quarters of a mile to the nearest road and I headed for it. I wanted to get out of that grass. But every time I looked back over my shoulder I could see that brown snake following me. The faster I ran the more noise it made. As I stumbled, almost exhausted, through the rail fence bordering the road I looked back again. My heart almost stopped beating. There was the snake. But I saw it wasn't moving, so I took courage to look again. Then I felt foolish. The 'snake' was my whip. I had stuck one end of it in my pocket when I started to cut the sapling and the other end trailed along the ground after me."

"I'll acknowledge that I was scared once, if you'll promise not to print my name," said a Third regiment officer. "You know, I might lose my place in the militia if it was thought that I wasn't the bravest man, or one of the bravest, in the world. Back in Illinois, where I was raised, there was an old house that was said to be haunted.

"The boys of the town were mighty brave around that house in the daytime, but at night, I've seen a party of a dozen of us walk four blocks out of our way, seemingly by unanimous consent and without anyone saying a word, merely to avoid going by that place. None of us would acknowledge that he was afraid, so we used to go up there—in the daytime—and throw rocks at the house. We broke every window light in it to show our contempt for ghosts. Some of us got so bold that we would dare the ghosts to come out and fight—in the daytime.

"The common superstition was that the devil, horns and all, lived in the house. Old Man Wilson, who had lived next door, saw the devil in the house one stormy night by a lightning flash. He moved over to the other side of the village.

"The owner couldn't rent the place any more, so it gradually became a tabooed spot. Grass grew up wild in the yard. The place looked rusty and a fit resort for haunts of any kind. It was scary to even look at the place in the day time. I was blowing one night about my courage to a bunch of kids up in the square. I think I had had a fight with a boy a year or so older than myself and was filled with visions of wading through gore. Some one opposed my claims of courage. It caused me to get bolder. There wasn't anything in the world I was scared of, I told them.

"Someone said they would give a pocket-knife, forty chinies and a big agate if I would go through the haunted house that night. The thought half scared me to death.

"'I wouldn't do it for $5,' I said. Then they said I was scared to go through the house in day time. I said I'd go, just to show my courage, if I could get the knife and the marbles. I was ashamed to own myself a full coward after what I'd said. They accepted the proposition.

"I never slept a wink all that night. Every time the wind would blow the limbs of a big cottonwood tree near my home against the roof and the leaves would sound that peculiar noise cottonwood tree leaves do in the lightest wind, I'd creep down under the cover and cuddle close to brother, who was sleeping with me.

"My heart was beating a million a minute when I put foot on the first step of the haunted house porch. A bunch of the fellows played hookey with me that morning to see if I was game. I opened the door cautiously and looked in. Everything was quiet. Boldly I stepped into the hall. There was only one room back of the hall and it had no back door, so that in spite of leaving the front door open, I was forced to get out of sight of the kids at some time in my progress through the house.

"I thought I'd make a run for it as the easiest way out of the difficulty, but I just couldn't bolster up my bravery. While I was trying to set my clacking teeth for it, a rat ran across the floor. Light as its footsteps were, they made queer echoes in the house. Then the floor squeaked under my foot. I stood there and trembled and tried to count my heart beats. It was impossible.

"I looked back at the bunch. They were strangely quiet and uneasy. That gave me a little courage. It is something to be a boy hero in a village. So I crept slowly around the corner of the hall and glided softly into the middle room. I was trying to fool the ghosts. I went on into the kitchen. I couldn't have run then if I wanted to. I was within two feet of the kitchen door when I chanced to look around toward a side window. Just over its ledge a pair of horns were raised and lowered twice.

"I made one leap backward and ran for the front door. My terror became communicated to the kids and the whole bunch of us tore for uptown, too scared to yell. But the hot pace and the sunlight calmed our nerves and we went back to investigate. I found out one thing. If you are going through a haunted house, the best thing you can do is to circle around the structure and kick any cow in the slats that happens to be browsing outside under any of the windows."

"Bugaboos? Well, yes, I had three when I was a boy," laughed the Rev. William J. Dalton. "The first one I remember was a big negro who was town crier in St. Louis. I can remember him well, though I was young when he used to go about the streets.

"He went barefooted and carried a big bell. His specialty was lost children. His voice was deep and resonant and he would go along crying: 'Lost child; little girl 5 years old, with blue eyes and light hair. Lost child; little girl 5 years old, with blue eyes and light hair.' Woe be to the child who found his voice and the bell attractive enough to cause it to follow him, because such children never came back. Our mothers told us so.

"We used to crouch back on the doorstep whenever the negro went by and some of us ran inside our homes and watched him with terror in our eyes. At his approach you could see all the kids in the neighborhood within sound of his voice skedaddle for home. Finally the bigger boys got to bantering each other to follow him. They all came back and the bugaboo was spoiled.

"Another bugaboo was old General 'Billy' Rider, the old fellow who attended every session of the Missouri legislature except the last two. Rider wore a keen knife at the back of his neck. He had cut several persons who attacked him or engaged in fights with him. We boys used to go about in deadly fear of meeting Rider. We thought he would cut us to pieces. Poor fellow, I preached his funeral sermon here more than a year ago, after he had been found dead kneeling beside his bed.

"The bugaboo that gave us our greatest fright, however, was a St. Louis doctor. After I reached an age of some discretion, I learned that he was an eminent practitioner and somewhat of a scientist. But the boys said that if he caught you out after half-past 8 o'clock any night, he'd take you up to his hospital and cut you up and boil you down for the castor oil that was in you."

I OPENED THE DOOR CAUTIOUSLY AND LOOKED IN.

From the Delineator for June.

Modern verandas are literally homes. They are readily transferred into living rooms, sleeping rooms and dining rooms.

To furnish a veranda to the best advantage for living purposes, furniture should be utilized that can withstand the weather and hard usage. Several large easy chairs, a settee, furnished with crash or denim-covered cushions, and hammocks are essential. Bamboo screens or awnings will add materially to the comfort of the veranda equipment; a swinging couch is a luxurious addition that will be greatly appreciated. Such a couch may be home made, only length and depth and a wealth of pillows being necessary for comfort. It may be supplied with a home made full length pad or a number of pillows. It is a fancy of the moment to have summer porch pillows filled with pine or balsam needles, hops or clover. Husks from green corn are saved, and with some lemon verbena, geranium, lavender or other leaves to give fragrance, make particularly nice pillow fillings. Lacking better material, finely torn paper with any sweet scented leaves intermingled makes cool and acceptable fillings for porch pillows.

A home made folding screen which is both convenient and picturesque may be made by stretching green burlap over an ordinary frame. Over the top weave or darn an Indian border in colored raffia. This screen will be thick enough to serve as a protection from drafts.

IRIS AND FLEUR DE LIS.

BY FLOY CAMPBELL.

WHEN we hear the word Iris there comes before us the picture of a flower, tall and stately, deep purple in hue, the three paler petals curved into a dome above its heart, the three darker ones reversed in a balancing curve. Purple—that is the common color, and the one of which we instinctively think. But why should this flower be named after the Grecian goddess of the rainbow, if that is its one hue? A year ago I saw a garden that answered this question. There were rows on rows of iris. First a rank of blossoms almost crimson in their rich mahogany-red. Then a row, deep orange. Then pale yellow, cream-white, deep purple, pure violet, smoke-gray, pale blue and pure white. The one color of the spectrum that was lacking in the flowers was added by the leaves, and the rainbow was complete and perfect.

In the countries where the iris grows wild it is said that the yellow variety is the commonest, but neither the blue nor the white flower is rare. The many colors which we now possess are, of course, the result of long cultivation, and did not exist in the days when the plant was first named. In those early days, however, it is doubtful if men distinguished seven colors in the rainbow, as we do now; for it was often alluded to as tri-colored. But whatever the number of colors distinguished by the Greek, he found in this many-hued flag that grew beside his streams an apt namesake for his bright goddess, and from his tongue we have adopted the name.

The iris is not a lily. It can scarcely be called a distant cousin of the lily, even though both flowers belong to the petaloideous division of the Endogens. That gives them the same relationship in the floral world that two men might have who belonged to the French division of the Caucasians. But though the kinship is thus distant, the iris and the lily have been more confused in history, art and literature than any other flowers, and it is probable that the vexed question as to which blossom has the honor of being the original of that conventional form we know as the fleur de lis never will be finally settled.

Because of references in old documents to "the whiteness of the lily of France" and because of the present form of the name, there are many who claim that the original flower was the one we call the Easter lily, but the claim is not very seriously pressed. Other authorities would derive the fleur de lis from the lotus of Egypt, through the Persian lotus, and the Greek honeysuckle, and would deny it any connection with the iris of our gardens. There is an indisputable similarity in all these forms, and by selecting our examples from the decorative art of the different ages and countries with sufficient discrimination, we can make out a very plausible case. But the iris flower, placed beside the familiar conventional form, speaks with eloquence in its own behalf, and the weight of present opinion is on its side.

It is generally believed that "fleur de lys" is a corruption of "fleur de luce," which is in its turn a transformation of "fleur de Louis" or "flower of Louis." Another French authority derives it from the older name, Clovis, which is the same as Lovis or Louis, U and V being interchangeable letters, according to old usage. There seems no doubt that the device always has been used by the old French kings, and even as early as the time of Constantine are found traces of it on the banners of the Eastern empire.

Two legends connect the flower with Clovis. One says that when he was on his way to Rheims after the battle of Tolbiac, he received a lily from heaven. Another gives t more elaborate account:

"The device of Clovis was three black toads, but an aged hermit of Joye-en-Valle saw a miraculous light stream one night into his cell, and an angel appeared to him, holding a shield of wondrous beauty; its color was like azure, and on it were emblazoned three gold lilies ("trois Fleur de Lis d'or") that shone like stars. This the hermit was commanded to give to Queen Clothilde. Scarcely had the angel vanished when Clothilde entered, and, receiving the celestial shield, gave it to her royal husband, whose arms were everywhere victorious."

It was Louis le Jeune, or Louis VII, however, who adopted the "celestial flower" in the national standard.

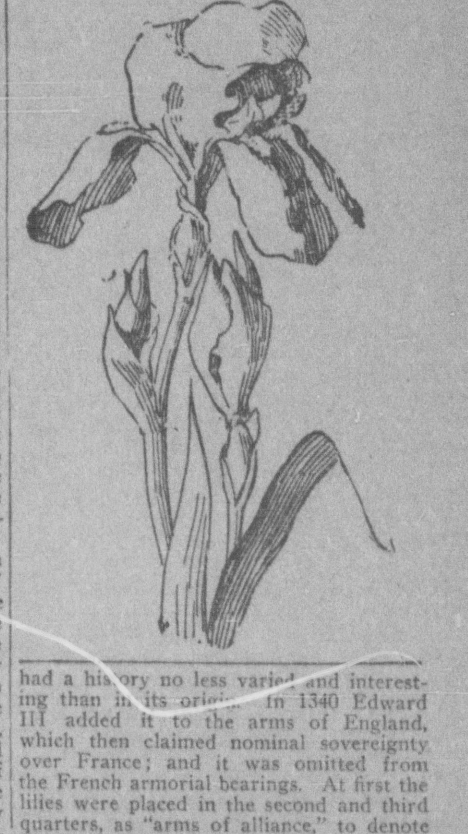
"About the middle of the Twelfth century, Louis VII of France, having been excommunicated by the pope, and his kingdom laid under an interdict, was persuaded to join the Crusaders, where he distinguished himself, as was the custom of those times, by a particular blazon, for which he chose the iris flower, that was from thence called the Fleur de Louis, Louis's flower, and which was first contracted into Fleur de Luce, and afterward into fleur de lis, Lily flower, although it has no affinity to the lily. The iris flower soon became celebrated in France as fleur de lis, and was not only used in the arms of France, but was employed in the decorative embellishments of the crown itself."

The number of lilies with which the banner was charged has often varied. Legend says that after one of the battles fought by the crusaders, the white banner was found to be thickly covered with these flowers, and it was so used until the time of Charles, when the number was reduced to three. This change was made about the year 1381, when Charles altered the national arms in commemoration of an adventure which then befell him.

The youthful prince was hunting in the forest of Senlis when he roused an enormous stag, which could not be taken by the dogs. It was finally entangled in the meshes of a net, when it was found to wear a collar of copper-gilt, bearing the inscription, "Hoc mihi Caesar donavit" ("Caesar gave this to me.") That night the king, whose imagination had been much impressed by the occurrence, dreamed that he was being carried through the air on a winged stag, and the following day he gave orders that two winged stags should be added to the arms of France for supporters and the number of lilies reduced to three, in honor of the Trinity, and in commemoration of the miraculous hunting of the previous day.

Whatever the original of the fleur de lis may have been, then, two things are clear. It is of very ancient origin and it was originally named flower of Louis, not flower of the lily. It is claimed, with some show of probability, that "lis" was finally adopted as its name largely on account of the sanctity with which the lily had become invested in consequence of the comparison which Christ instituted between its glory and that of Solomon.

Still another derivation for the name is suggested in the fact that the iris is often called the flower of delights, or "delices." But whether the decorative form we know so well sprung originally from the lotus of Egypt, from the white lily, or from the iris, the usage of to-day, by common consent, has given the honor to the purple flag which blooms so abundantly at this season.



The fleur de lis, in its later days, has had a history no less varied and interesting than in its origin. In 1340 Edward III added it to the arms of England, which then claimed nominal sovereignty over France; and it was omitted from the French armorial bearings. At first the lilies were placed in the second and third quarters, as "arms of alliance," to denote Edward's descent, on the maternal side, from Isabel, daughter and heiress of Philip IV of France. But when Edward was encouraged to claim actual sovereignty over France, he placed the lilies in the first quarter, as "arms of dominion and pretension," which mode of quartering was continued by his successors. The monarchs down to Henry V, however, bore only "seme de lis"—that is fleur de lis strewn thickly over the groundwork of the shield—but the latter monarch, when he had fully determined to make good his claims by marriage and by war, quartered the three full fleurs de lis in exactly the same manner that the French king bore them. He placed the English arms in the first quarter, however, thereby claiming for them the highest honor.

When Henry VI was crowned in Paris as king of France the shield was again changed, the lilies being returned to the first quarter. They remained a part of the English escutcheon until the beginning of the last century, when George III was on the throne. When, in 1800, Ireland was joined to England, it became necessary that the title of the king and the national arms should be modified. The fleur de lis was then expunged from the royal arms, as the title of king of France was finally dropped, since neither the title nor the symbol had any longer any actual ground for existence.

During the Revolution the iris was proscribed in France, as the violet was during the Restoration; and persons found wearing it were condemned to death. Wherever a fleur de lis was found in sculpture, it was broken to pieces by the infuriated populace. Napoleon substituted the bee in place of the fleur de lis, and the violet became his floral emblem.

A type of fleur de lis is prominent in Italy, but there its form is more elaborate, and its origin yet more obscure than in France. During the struggle between the Guelphs and the Ghibellines, the former adopted as their badge the red lily, and the latter the white, just as the red and white roses were adopted by the houses of York and Lancaster in England. To this day the lily remains the emblem of Florence, where, at every turn one sees emblazoned the red fleur de lis.

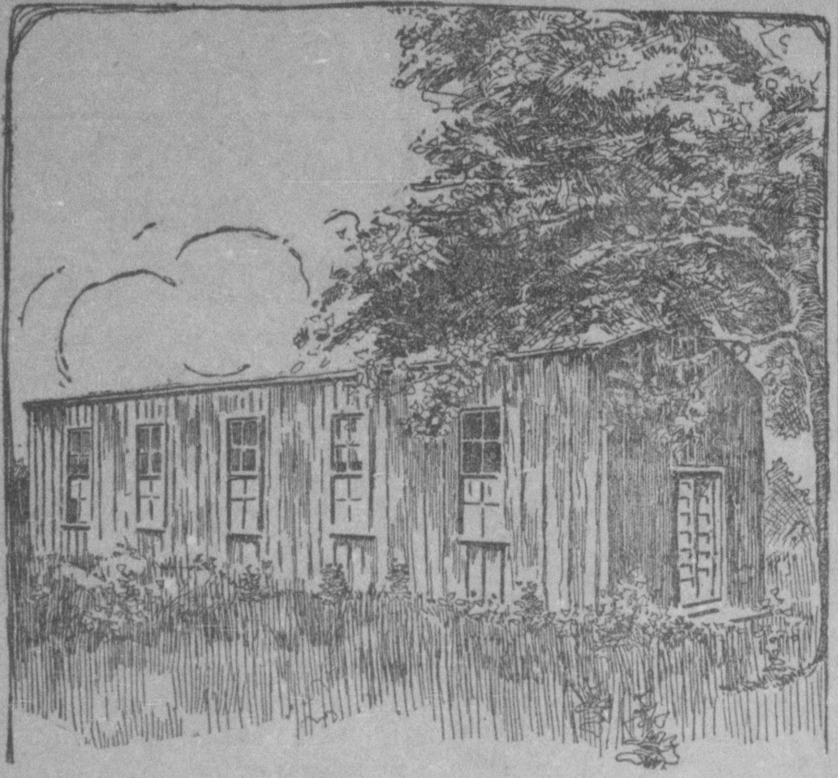
THE EVOLUTION OF A HOUSE of WORSHIP

IN September, 1872, a church was placed on rollers and removed across Wyoming street, at that time a mere country road in the West bottoms of Kansas City. The church was 30x40 feet in size and was used as the place of worship by less than fifty families. The building was the Catholic church of the Annunciation.

Now, thirty-six years afterwards, a new church is being built several miles from the old site, but the name has been retained. At Benton and Linwood boulevards Annunciation church is to have an imposing facade, its two towers, surmounted by crosses, will rise above nearly 1,500 worshippers and it will have among its parishioners many of the leading Catholic families of the city.

"Establish a church which will not interfere with the present parish." This was the order received in 1872 by the Rev. Father William J. Dalton, at that time less than 22 years of age and just past his novitiate. There was but one Roman Catholic parish in the city at the time. The Rev. Father Bernard Donnelly was its pastor. Father Donnelly was the fourth of the Catholic priests regularly stationed in Kansas City. He came here in 1849.



THIS FRAME SHACK FOR TWO AND A HALF YEARS SERVED AS A PLACE OF WORSHIP FOR THE PARISHIONERS OF THE CHURCH OF THE ANNUNCIATION.

When Father Dalton began his labors in the West bottoms there were less than twenty-five Catholic families outside Father Donnelly's parish. There lived in the bottoms the French and Irish who had come West as hunters and trappers. There were frontiersmen and voyageurs, adventurers and fighters over this section in earlier days and their descendants, lured by the beauty of the picturesque junction of the Kaw and Missouri rivers, remained here to live.

The West bottoms in that day had none of the large buildings and no railroad yards, such as it now has. The hunters and trappers sent out West by the Astor syndicate early in the Nineteenth century had brought their families with them. The Kaw and Missouri rivers were the homes of many fur bearing animals. The French voyageurs imported from Canada found a delightful climate and a fruitful soil.

These men built huts along the Kaw river, with tiny gardens at the back of the homes. Here the families lived and in these huts the social life of the town, circumscribed by lack of comon comforts, revolved about the comings and goings, the births, deaths and weddings of a handful of persons.

Later comers built homes further and further from the river. The new arrivals became small merchants. Their coming, by the logic of circumstances, took away from the Kaw river front the supremacy of the town's "business center," for the broad Missouri, with its deep channel and the consequent invitation to the commerce of the day, caused the main interests of the city to be removed to the levee along its bank.

But what the West bottoms lacked in commercial advantages it made up in residential opportunities to the poor persons forced to live there. Those who made money built homes in the West bottoms, so that wealth and poverty touched elbows even in that restricted space.

The first services in Annunciation parish were held June 30, 1872. A storeroom has been given for the use of the small congregation. It was on Twelfth street between Wyoming and Genesee streets. Father Donnelly had lent a chalice for use in the services, while the sisters of St. Teresa's academy lent the vestments worn in the ceremonies.

The same night the heads of the families belonging to the new congregation met and subscribed $292 toward a building fund. Its increase was urged with the same energy with which it had been started. It took much work, for the parishioners were few and poor. The first beginning of the church was in the purchase of two lots at the southwest corner of Fourteenth and Wyoming streets.

A circumstance showing how few persons lived in the West bottoms at the time was that the site selected was considered by some as "too far away." The parishioners lived, for the most part, on the Missouri side of the state line, almost due east of the Armour packing plant's present site. But few of them lived within a few blocks of the church site, which was at the extreme southeast part of the settlement in the West bottoms.

Work on the church was begun in July. It was a frame shack, of good construction, but ill favored inside and out. Six days were consumed in building it. The next month, two lots were bought across the street at the southeast corner of Fourteenth and Wyoming sreets. In September the church was put on rollers and moved to the new site. Afterwards an extension fifty feet long was built to the church, for the population of the West bottoms had increased by strides.

Untiring in effort for advancement, Father Dalton and his congregation worked unceasingly. A parochial school, a residence for the priest and a new church built on the original site and costing $40,000 followed. Within five years these buildings and a residence for the Catholic sisterhood, which presided over the school, had been erected.

The original twenty-five Catholic families in the congregation increased to 1,500 families. But as the home life of the people had crept block by block toward the West bluffs, so the business places, in turn, began supplanting them. The stock yards expansion, increasing demand for freight yards, the establishment of big implement and other wholesale houses in the West bottoms brought about high values for the homes of those who tenanted the West bottoms.

Many of the parishioners were made rich by the increased values of their holdings and removed uptown to live on the better residence streets. Others were forced out by the march of business. Soon Annunciation parish could boast of not more than forty families, while the demand for switches and sidetracks near the river level increased.

Thirty years to a day, or June 30, 1902, after the first services in the Church of the Annunciation, the final ceremonies in the building were held. So far as Father Dalton was concerned, he was left without a charge. The thousands among whom he had lived and with whom the years had passed pleasantly were gone. The stately church echoed the steps of but few. Annunciation parish was a memory.

"Start a parish anywhere south of Twenty-seventh street and east of Brooklyn avenue," was Rome's order to Father Dalton. Benton boulevard at the time ended north of Twenty-eighth street. Linwood boulevard was just projected. Father Dalton selected the site of his new church at the intersection of these two thoroughfares.

An incident strikingly illustrating the rapid growth of the southeast part of the city is that when Father Dalton canvassed the vast territory covered by his parish he found but twelve Catholic families, and four families in which the husband or wife were of Catholic faith.

Subscriptions and an entertainment which netted $500 made possible the building of a frame shack for devotions. The church held sixty persons, though it would not seat more than fifty. The park board pushed the completion of the two boulevards upon which the little church fronted. For two years and a half the congregation worshipped in the frame shack, surmounted by a gold cross, its unplaned and unpainted exterior a source of interest and amusement to thousands who drove along the boulevards.

Two years ago the cornerstone of the new church, which will have cost $100,000 when finished, was laid. The rear of the church is completed. The side walls are built up 100 feet on either side and the front has been boarded in. Sixty feet more of the walls and two massive towers are yet to be erected.

The completed church will have a room of French plate glass for mothers who desire to bring young children with them to services. The room will be built in the front of the building above the babistry and overlooking the altars. The mothers may look out above the congregation to the sanctuary, while the plate glass will drown the cries of fretful children and prevent the worshippers from being disturbed by the noise.

The new church will have the largest seating capacity of any church in the city and again as much as the Cathedral, which seats 700 persons. Aside from the main sanctuary, there are two chapels in the church. These will be used for weekday services when but few of the parishioners attend. None other of the local Catholic churches has a chapel.

The church is being built of steel and Carthage cut stone. It is dignified in outline, the dimensions being 160x60 feet. Father Dalton expects to have the church completed by fall.

After work on the church is ended, a residence for the priest will be erected, west of the church upon a lot bought when the church property was secured.

"It is a long time since the corner stone services were held for the brick church in the West bottoms," Father Dalton said, in speaking of his labors. "It was a great occasion in Kansas City. A parade was held, headed by Mayor R. H. Hunt and the fire department. The orator was the Rev. Father R. J. Ryan, now archbishop of Philadelphia, and considered then the most eloquent of the Catholic clergy. Father Ryan said that it was the largest crowd to which he had ever spoken.

"It is considered the work of a life to establish and build a parish church. It seems the grace of God that I have not only aided in building one, but may have hope to see a second erected and free of debt. A great many tales could be told of the sacrifices and privations endured by every one concerned in the building of both churches. But there is, I am sure, a grace in giving which will prove compensatory."

Earl of Crewe, Fashion's Darling, Proves to Be a Worker.

One of the most significant things about the change which has just taken place in the personnel of the English cabinet is the promotion of the Earl of Crewe. He not only has been raised from the posi-trator. But despite his undoubted ability, tion of lord president of the council, with a salary of $10,000 a year, to secretary of state for the colonies, which brings him $25,000 a year, but he also has been nominated by the king for the Order of the Garter, the most coveted decoration at the disposal of the English sovereign.

While Lord Crewe is said to be the handsomest man in the House of Lords, and a thing of rare beauty to gaze upon, he has risen superior to that serious handicap since he assumed a position in the liberal government, and is now looked upon in all quarters as a man of many parts, a clever debater and a capable adminis- the new secretary for the colonies will always be known, primarily, as a dandy, an exquisite, the joy and delight of the ladies who are wont to crowd the galleries of the hereditary chamber to see him give battle at overwhelming odds in the cause of liberalism. Barring Lord Althorp, lord chamberlain, Lord Crewe wears the tallest collar in John Bull's little island. He is always on his dignity, never forgets for a single moment that he is an exalted lord, and invariably adopts an apologetic tone when he ventures to disagree with one of his fellow noblemen.

His clothes are immaculate in cut and condition, his patent leather shoes always shine with the glow of newness. He reclines on the red leather benches of the House with grace unequaled. He is tall and slim, his eyes are soft and mild and his features regular. He parts his hair in the middle and curls his mustache at an angle calculated to pierce the heart of any impressionable woman. He is the politest man in a chamber renowned for its manners and its culture. When he arises to chide an oponent, everyone is sure that he will do so in tones that anyone else might employ in handing a cup of tea to a lady. His own father-in-law, Lord Rosebery, surely the kindest of his critics, has publicly dubbed him "a butterfly."

So far as anybody has been able to discover, as lord president of the council, Lord Crewe had no duties except to carry a huge double-handled, heavy and unwieldly sword that was always in the way and frequently gets between somebody's legs in the procession of courtiers when the king opened Parliament. For this arduous labor he received $10,000 a year. Some years ago when Parliament was bitten by the bug of economy, it was declared in many quarters that such a considerable sum was a fancy price to pay a man for carrying a sword for half an hour once a year, and it was proposed to reduce it to an amount that was not visible to the naked eye. In the extremity, while Lord Crewe was figuring how he could manage to live without his salary, some political genius came along and saved the day. The noble lord was actually given some work to do, he was not separated from the "filthy lucre," and incidentally he was "made" politically.

Lord Crewe was given the first education bill of the present government to guide through the House of Lords. It was an impossible task, to be sure, but the spick-and-span peer made such a good try at it and accepted defeat so gracefully that he has been reckoned a pillar of liberalism in the House of Lords ever since. Now he has something to say on every topic that comes up in that body, and nobody begrudges him his annual pay envelope.

Lord Crewe is an enthusiastic farmer and a keen sportsman; a mighty hunter and a famous shot; a member of that exclusive organization, the Jockey club, and races his own stud of horses. He owns 25,000 acres and a valuable library of 32,000 volumes.

The Order of the Garter, for which Lord Crewe has just been nominated, is the oldest and most exclusive of the British insignias. The members are limited in number and thus it is only when death creates a vacancy that a new member can hope to break in. The king has the right of nomination, but only the members can elect. It was instituted by King Edward III. The legend which is said to account for the emblem and its famous motto, "Evil be to him who evil thinks," is a pretty one, but unfortunately has all the earmarks of pure tradition. It is said that the Countess of Salisbury dropped her garter while dancing with the king. His Majesty immediately picked it up and tied it around his leg. Observing his queen's jealous glances he handed it back to the peeress with the words that have come down through history.

Only One Alveolar Method

The remarkable success attained by this company in restoring missing teeth by the now famous Alveolar Method has caused imitators to spring up in many cities.

The most audacious of these we have commenced court proceedings against, and shall make them quit their nefarious and fraudulent practices, in justice not alone to ourselves and our business, but to the public, who would suffer untold harm through these ignorant counterfeiters.

Imitation is said to be the sincerest form of flattery, but when it has to do with so important a thing as the teeth it is dangerous.

The skill required to perform this Alveolar Method and make the structure practical and serviceable calls for dental craftsmanship of the highest order.

We have to sift through a great many so-called dentists who apply to us for positions before finding one with the necessary qualifications and mechanical skill to do our work successfully.

Fancy a dentist claiming he can do this work without knowing anything about how it is done.

The Alveolar Method of supplying missing teeth is essentially a painless operation, and a patient can leave our offices, once the teeth are properly adjusted, and use these new teeth at once with perfect enjoyment.

There is no surgery in the process, and nothing about it that one need dread. So much for that part of the subject.

It will be a good plan for you to come to one of our offices and have a free examination made of your teeth.

We will then tell you exactly what we can do and the total cost of your work, besides submitting proof of our ability to do what we claim.

Now, don't you want to know all about the Alveolar Method?

We have published a booklet entitled "Alveolar Dentistry," which goes into details, and you should read this book, whether you have lost one tooth or nearly all of them.

It is the greatest book on the teeth ever written, profusely illustrated, and tells about the Alveolar Method in simple language, with the technical terms left out.

Send to-day for a copy. It is free for the asking.

CAUTION—Look out for imitators and impostors. We have NO OFFICES outside of those given below.

Mr. Clint G. Ford, who has been identified with the very foremost dramatic attractions, including Gillet's "Secret Service" Co., "David Harum," "The Clansman," etc., has this to say of Newbro's Herpicide:

"For years I was annoyed with dandruff and itching of the scalp, all due to my twenty years of theatrical life with its incumbent "make-up" and wig wearing. At times the itching of the scalp was intense. All remedies failed me until I tried Herpicide, and I soon found that it was giving wonderful results. The itching and also the dandruff, entirely ceased and my hair resumed its natural life and vigor.

There is no question in my mind about the reality of the dandruff germ, and I unhesitatingly recommend Herpicide to my friends in the profession."

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Extravagant claims for toilet remedies do not influence theatrical people, because long experience enables them to discriminate intelligently. They demand merit and will rarely use a preparation that is not actually worth as much or more than it costs in dollars and cents.

Herpicide kills the dandruff germ and by actual test does more good than all other hair remedies combined. This accounts for its popularity in theatrical circles.

"Queen Roselle" writes of Newbro's Herpicide

"I take pleasure in announcing the very satisfactory results I have had from the use of Newbro's Herpicide. My hair was falling out so rapidly that I was afraid I would lose it all. A friend advised Herpicide, and after using it faithfully my hair stopped falling out, the dandruff disappeared and my hair is now very soft and glossy.

I would like to see every lady of the profession try Herpicide, for I am confident that they would be delighted with it."

THE NEW YORK THEATER LETTER

FRANKLYN FYLES CHATS ABOUT PLAYS & THE PEOPLE APPEARING IN THEM

NEW YORK, May 8.—Do you ever at the theater wonder what the actors think of the play? Or, more specifically, and leaving out the bad ones, would the good hero and the heroine, if they had their own way, and under the circumstances created by the author, behave as his writing of the roles compels them to? Presumably, the villains despise the characters they earn wages by assuming. But the admirably sentimental leaders of the company—how about them? Does their conduct on the stage gee with their own doctrines and principles—or, say, their whims and fancies? It is possible in this letter to give accounts of two new plays in which an actor and an actress are en rapport with their roles. The players are Henry E. Dixey, familiar to you, and Beatrice Morgan, who probably is not.

It is a quarter of a century since Dixey, as the statue vivified god of beauty in "Adonis," gave more performances consecutively than anyone before, or since, and made the New York women behave toward him as much like Venuses as they could, or dared to. Yet the actor hated the pretty portions of his role, and loved those in which he was ludicrous as a country store clerk, a rustic old maid and a caricature of Henry Irving. He disliked girls' admiration, and when "Adonis" was over with he sought stage distinction as a player of old men. His first endeavor in that way was with "The Seven Ages," in which he paraphrased Shakespeare's Jacque's speech, passing in the course of the play from young vigor to old decrepitude. The result might have been more remunerative if he had revised the process, by beginning near the grave and working back towards the cradle.

Many actors are coxcombs, or worse; but more of them pity and disdain the sapheads and mush-hearts who adulate them. Here is an illustration. Maurice Barrymore gave to his daughter Ethel the beauty that has famed her; he was an object of acute admiration on the stage; but when off he dressed slouchily on purpose to divert admiring eyes. In the drama of mine he enacted New Orlean's historic pirate, Jean Lafitte, a buccaneer, picturesque as well as romantic, and it was essential that he make himself lovely to look at. He did. Batches of letters came to the theater from girls for him. Some were in jest and others were vicious, but many were written in real infatuation. One afternoon I met Barrymore in Broadway. His garb was worse than usual to him off duty—positively mussy; and he had put off his daily shave until it should be necessary for his stage comeliness in the evening.

"Why Barry," said I, "you look like a tramp."

"I thank God," he retorted, "that I don't have to look like your pretty pirate when off the job."

When Dixey saw the Italian, Novelli, as the father in "Papa Lebonnard" he begged for a chance to play the old man. No matter that the play had been declined by Coquelin, for whom it was written, or that in French and Italian it was a composition in verse not feasible in English; and he urged the small cost of the venture. So a plain prose translation is now on the stage, with a stock scene unchanged for the four acts, in the modern costumes provided by the company under the rule, the eight salaries besides Dixey's moderate, and this cheap ticket in the theatrical lottery wins a prize of middling size. Dixey is as good a Lebonnard as Novelli was, and I don't think Coquelin could have been better. Anyway, here is Dixey, who might with little make-up embody Adonis as of yore, doubling instead of halving his apparent age from choice.

The hen of a wife in "Papa Lebonnard" is a fierce old fowl. She cackles not only, but struts, flaps her wings and crows. The rooster of a husband has been henpecked so long that he doesn't dare say that his comb or his tail are his own, and so droops them meekly. He is a tamed bird who doesn't seem to know that henneries are harems, with one rooster to ever so many hens. That is the way of this play until the end of its third act. Then the spur-clipped, comb-cropped, tail-plucked bird flies suddenly to the top of the dunghill of a family scandal, lifts his head, ruffles his feathers, spreads his wings and crows: "I am the gamecock of this walk—cock-a-doodle-doo."

Papa Lebonnard has made so many clocks that he is rich, and might let folks forget that he ever was a mechanic, but he dotes on his collection of timepieces, while his domineering wife matches an aspiringly aristocratic son with a marquis's daughter, and a democratc daughter wishes to mate with a worthy young physician who has never known a father. The mother and the son drive the badly born lover away as a menace of social disgrace to the family and destruction to its hope of a titled alliance. Dixey makes Lebonnard meekly submissive to his resolute wife, with enough of quiet fun and homely pathos to save him from contempt; but the people at length begin to get restive under the delay of the outbreak which, of course, they know is going to set the wrong things right; and the play is three-fourths over when the son grieves the daughter to a point of heartbreak by twitting her lover with a birth of shame. At that the old man is transformed suddenly into dominance.

"You bastard," he says to the young fellow; and then to his wife, "you adulteress."

That lets out the secret that the mother and the son are absurdly unfit to forbid the daughter's marriage with a good man of bad birth. Dixey rises rousingly to the height of this denunciatory passage. I think that, if during the summer the play is revised with aptly stronger English, if a cast is provided of all suitable experts, if the single scene is displaced by attractive changes, then Papa Lebonnard will begin next season to make a thriving acquaintance of the whole country—a fourth "if" being added, however, for Dixey is erratic and prone to quit his jobs.

We have an example of an actress providing a role for herself in a drama of her own composition, she being Beatrice Morgan, leader of a local stock company, and it being a play left unnamed. Can't you guess what the girl is whom the actress creates for her own depiction. Try. Don't you hit on an actress as a matter of course. No heroine appeals to a player so strongly as a player. Besides, Miss Morgan is a lineal descendant of Mistress Anne Clarke, an English actress historically mentioned as a companion of a Duke of York, and so the play is put forth as biographical. For further practice in guessing try to fix on the character of this actress heroine. Think of the Peg Woffingtons and Nance Oldfields, the Kitty Clydes and Peggy Prides, and answer me that Miss Morgan's heroine is an Irish girl with a piquant brogue, a blarney of honey for her friends and stings of gall for her enemies. And she says "damn" not once only, nor yet twice, but three times. For still another guess, have a go at the nature of Anne Clarke's romance as written and acted by Miss Morgan. Do I have to tell you that Anne is an actress of such wondrous beauty and genius that all London falls grovelling at her feet; that one of the worshippers is the royal Duke of York aforesaid, or that she scorns his adulation of her professionally and spurns his desire to appropriate her personally? One of the conventions of stage fiction with very little foundation in modern real life is that a man of gentlemanly birth and breeding will, even if he has the power, compel an unwilling girl to consort with him.

So it is not strange that Beatrice Morgan makes the Duke of York a ruthless pursuer of Anne Clarke, but she does astonish me by letting the girl sell herself to the libertine. She is a barmaid at her country home and wants to be an actress in London; the duke stops at the inn and offers to put her on the stage; she declares to her apprehensive mother that she can and will take care of herself, and so she could and would, but that the duke conscripts her true lover into the army, condemns him by court-martial on a false charge, and will have him shot unless she buys his life at the price of herself. Beatrice may have private family records about Anne, but even so, it would please the audience if the heroine, being Irish of wit, were to knock the English rascal out with a gold brick, instead of adhering to the bargain honestly. However, Beatrice saw in the sale and delivery a scene of wan, woe-begone agony, such as emotional actresses dote on; and an outburst of wild denunciation when, having bought and paid for her lover's liberation, she learns that the duke means to have him killed after all. And anyway, whatever wrong a stock company favorite does is deemed right by her audience. As to the lover, of course he is shocked when, having broken out of prison, and sought refuge in his sweetheart's house, he finds the duke in possession. He would now rather be shot than not, if first he may kill the duke; but Anne convinces him of her sacrificial love, beats his royal rival in a contest of diplomacy, and clears the way to happy wedlock. And there you have a heroine created by an actress in her own way.

It will be a wonder if, in the summer's dancing at the resorts, couples will waltz without kissing. Four of the plays thriving now in Broadway contain sensuous waltzes as a main theme; five on less pretentious stages circle whirlingly around kisses similarly set to music; no burlesque company comes to town without bringing an osculation dancer and now we have "The Love Waltz" as the first piece in vaudeville ever permitted to break the twenty-minute rule by lasting nearly an hour. Moreover, it is costly beyond vaudeville precedent through employing twenty-one good singers, and dressing eleven women over and over very extravagantly. Six are uncommonly handsome in a tall and queenly way, and utter strangers to the stage. Probably they have been brought from church choirs and concert platforms, as they use cultured voices expertly, but they are utterly unable to act and would look clumsy but for their beauty. In one scene they are on the stage on their way to a queen's court reception, bringing their trains several yards behind them—not dragging them—for each appendage, so long that it could spare fabric to make the sleeves that are lacking and make the corsages cover the shoulders, without knowing the loss, is held up by a page in natty livery. This procession is as rich and ornate as anything to be seen in any of the full-length spectacular plays.

The singularity of "The Love Waltz" lies in utilization of good voices and good looks unaccompanied by the smallest knack at acting. It is suggestive of an affair by amateurs wealthy enough to spend several thousands of dollars on finery for pride's sake. The composition is of a primitive nature, too. The dreamy waltz used is Parisian and has been played by American orchestras a year or more. The plot is familiar, from having been repeated in many comic operas and musical farces, but it is doubled, for two princesses pretend to be their own maids of honor, instead of one, to test the love of two princes who have been mated with them for political purposes. That mixes up four couples, as of course the maids have sweethearts of their own. The usual ugly major-domo and fat duenna reappear in heavyweight amorous encounters. The spectator is ready to say pooh, when the chorus increased the couples to ten in a magnificent court assemblage, and the sight, with the good singing, overbalances the deficiencies. Thereafter we see "love waltzing" done by eight beauties and their partners and no one complains.

CINDERELLA UP TO DATE.

From the London Express.

The rise of the poor but beautiful girl from squalor to wealth has been the favorite theme of story writers from Hans Andersen and the brothers Grimm to the modern novelists. Sometimes it happens in real life, and an instance of this has just been revealed by the Rev. W. Hobbs of West Norwood, a member of the Lambeth board of guardians.

He tells, step by step, of the progress of a pauper girl who was educated by the Lambeth parish, who went out into life when she was 15 years old as a domestic servant, and who, because of her charm and beauty, won through from drudgery and poverty to be a great London hostess.

To-day she is the wife of a wealthy London financier. Society comes to her house in Mayfair, but only a very few know that their witty and gracious hostess was not long ago a child of the workhouse.

For obvious reasons, her name cannot be disclosed, but the story of her career as given to an Express representative last night is a striking romance of real life.

She was born in a by-street in London, and when she was quite a child circumstances brought her to the care of Lambeth parish. The guardians had her educated, and at school her industry and intelligence were noticeable.

She went out "in service," and might have been there to-day, but for the fact that her position in the house was made impossible by local gossip. This came to the notice of the Lambeth guardians, who insisted on the girl leaving.

The workhouse gates opened before her again. But she was determined not to eat the bread of poverty. Her refinement, unusual in the class to which she belonged, and her individual charm impressed Mr. Hobbs, who, as one of the guardians, took her in charge.

Through his aid she got another situation. The turning point in her life, however, was when she went to a nursing home. Hither came a fashionable patient, and she, like every one else who came in contact with the erstwhile pauper girl, was fascinated with her pretty ways. She became a lady's maid in the house of the wealthy lady. And here, just as they do in novels, the son of the house fell in love with her.

Opposition was useless. They were separated for a time as a test, just as Richard Feverel was separated from Lucy. And eventually they were married, and now she is one of society's most charming leaders.

She still remembers her pauper days, and the kind heart of Mr. Hobbs. The other day she sent a large check to the clergyman in memory of what he had done for her. The money, she said, was to go towards furthering the charities with which he is associated.

A few days later a splendid carriage and pair stopped ouutside Mr. Hobbs's house. From it descended the girl, no longer a pauper and a servant, but a lady of fashion, who had come to see her fairy godfather.

SOME PEOPLE of the STAGE

ANYONE who has seen Henri Bernstein's powerful play, "Samson," in Paris, or who has had the opportunity of reading it in published form, must have realized that the task of adapting such a piece into English was one of no easy order. The work has been committed by Mr. Charles Frohman to Mr. William Gillette, who on September 25 will himself appear in New York in the part originally created by M. Guitry. Mr. Gillette has been in Biarritz putting the finishing touches to his piece, but is now in London.

Bernstein's next play, now nearly ready, which is to be Mme. Rejane's first autumn production, has also been acquired by Mr. Frohman for England and America. It is described by him as a compact drama of "The Thief" category; that is to say, it is a remorseless exposition of the foibles and weaknesses of human nature, the culminating point being reached in the penultimate act in a scene of extraordinary force.

Says Margaret Anglin: "I am eager to win recognition as a comedienne. Only once in my footlight career did I ever essay comedy, and that was seasons ago with E. H. Sothern, when Virginia Harned was suddenly taken ill, and in the emergency I acted the role of Lady Ursula in Anthony Hope's dainty comedy of that name. Now that I have been appearing in emotional parts for so long, until I have become virtually identified with such characters as Mrs. Dane, or Zira, or Ruth Jordan in "The Great Divide," I have a keen yearning to try my Thespian fortune at lighter characterization."

Montgomery and Stone, in Charles Dillingham's production, "The Red Mill," which played in Chicago for eleven weeks early this season, closed their tour at the Princess theater, Toronto, Canada, last night. In the season of thirty-eight weeks, the receipts are said to have averaged over $16,000 a week. David Montgomery, his bank account fattened by the earnings of the play, will sail next Wednesday from New York on a trip around the world and expects to be back in this country late in August. Fred Stone, the agile comedian of the firm, goes to Alaska in a week on a bear-hunting expedition. He will be accompanied by Gilbert H. Hoxie of Chicago, with whom he is interested in business, and by his brother-in-law, Rex Beech, author of "The Spoilers" and "The Barrier."

Mr. Eddie Foy, late of "The Orchid" and he who is said to have promised to appear as Hamlet—this self-same actor will be seen in vaudeville in New York this week at the Alhambra. His "act" is described as being "unquestionably one of the most amusing that vaudeville has yet known." This is possible, for Mr. Foy is always amusing, even despite his alleged aspirations to play in "Hamlet."

The play in which James J. Corbett is to assail the first class theaters next season is "Facing the Music," a farce in which Henry E. Dixey appeared with some success several years ago at the Garrick theater.

BATHTUBS ARE SCARCE ABROAD.

You Can Have the Amusing Experience of Having One Brought to Your Room.

From the Delineator for June.

Americans traveling abroad are often puzzled on the subject of baths. We are so used at home to the luxury of a porcelain tub, that we feel as if we had fallen in among the heathen when after a dusty journey we find that there is no bath in the pension. There are always public baths in European cities, frequented by people of refinement. The baths are kept immaculately clean, and the prices charged are not high, say twenty-five cents for everything included—soap, towel and tip. If you like a bran bath, which is most refreshing, you can have a sack of bran to throw into the bath for about ten cents.

There are often swimming pools in connection with these places, and the attendants are usually very good chiropodists and manicurists, as well as hair dressers. You can order a bath brought to you if you like, and it might be amusing to do this once, for a novelty. These come dearer, naturally; but all these things are part of the varied experiences which make up the peculiar charm and novelty of a journey abroad.

THIS WEEK AT The THEATERS.

"GLORIOUS BETSY," a pleasant blend of merriment and sentiment, with a touch of tragedy by suggestion, will return Mary Mannering to Kansas City for three days at the Willis Wood theater, beginning to-morrow night. The drama was written by Rida Johnson Young, author of "Brown of Harvard." It has foundation in the courtship and marriage of Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, and Miss Elizabeth Patterson of Baltimore. From this marriage came the family of American Bonapartes.

Beginning Thursday night, Maude Adams will be at the Willis Wood in "The Jesters," adapted from the French by John Raphael. In this work new to Kansas City Miss Adams is quite happily placed, first as a young and gallant squire, and second as a pseudo jester who enters a contest to win the hand of a maiden fair. Miss Adams will be supported in "The Jesters" by a permanent organization known as the "Maude Adams company." Among its members are Gustav Von Seyffertitz, Frederic Eric, William Lewers, George Henry Trader, Fred Tyler, Edwin Holt, Mathilde Cottrelly and Consuelo Bailey. The production of "The Jesters" will be in all respects the same as in the Empire theater, New York city.

Joseph Hart's pantomime, "Polly Pickles's Pets in Petland," will be the conspicuous feature on the closing bill at the Orpheum, beginning this afternoon. "Polly Pickles's Pets" is a spectacular musical fantasy, with fifteen clever people in the cast. The Pantzer trio will offer a comedy acrobatic sketch entitled "A Gymnast's Parlor Amusement." Charles H. Bradshaw, an actor of sterling ability, will present an entertaining skit, "Fix in a Fix." Eleanor Falke, singing comedienne, formerly of the "Florodora" and "Chinese Honeymoon" companies; Harry Allister, impersonator of famous men; Lillian Apel, an accomplished musician; Davis and Walker, a team of colored singers and dancers, and moving pictures in the kinodrome complete the bill.

The Frank Brothers Yiddish Opera company, which played a very interesting engagement at the Willis Wood theater recently, will present nine dramas or operas in the Grand Opera house this week, beginning to-morrow night. The repertoire is the most ambitious attempted by any organization in this theater in many years. Julian Wilensky is the leading tenor of the company, which has Nettie Hoffman as prima donna. Matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

"Raffles," the Hornung-Presbury play, which Kyrle Bellew presented several seasons the length and breadth of the land, will have performance by the Woodward Stock company at the Auditorium. Jack Chagnon will have the role of the amateur cracksman and Frank Beamish will impersonate Captain Bedford, the detective.

The Barker Stock company will remain at the Shubert theater through the summer, and beginning to-day there will be performances each Sunday afternoon and evening in addition to those other days of the week. "What Happened to Jones," George Broadhurst's farce, will be continued until Wednesday night, when "A Bachelor's Romance" will be revived. Matinees hereafter Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

"On the Bridge at Midnight," melodrama elaborately staged, will be the attraction at the Gilliss theater.

A Cleanser for Black Goods.

From the June Delineator.

Buy five cents' worth of borax and ten cents' worth of camphor gum. Put them into a large bowl, breaking the camphor gum first into small pieces. Pour over this one quart of boiling water, stirring to dissolve the borax. All the camphor will not dissolve. After it is cool put it into a bottle and cork tightly. When wishing to use it, pour a portion into a basin, diluting it with half the quantity of cold water. Wet a black stocking with this and sponge your goods, pressing afterwards. This will remove all spots and grease and restore the black.

MARKETS & MONEY

SPECULATIVE PRICES MADE ADDITIONAL ADVANCES LAST WEEK.

Wide Margin Between American and European Quotations for New Crop Deliveries—Crop Prospects Cut Down—New High Record for Corn.

Wheat prices received another boost last week from the May government crop report, which cut 30 million bushels from the winter wheat crop prospect as indicated by the April report. An additional buying incentive was furnished by numerous reports of damage by Hessian flies and a threatened epidemic of chinch bugs in Kansas. These latter reports received little credence but the probabilities are that they will be more of a factor in this week's market. That they are exaggerated may be assumed as a matter of course, nevertheless there is the basis for a scare if the big speculators desire to make use of it. The average speculator gives more attention to comparatively small areas where crops are unpromising than to the wider area of good prospects, and this is a year in which a menace to the crop is especially important, owing to the small reserves of old wheat that will be carried over. The reserves of old wheat next July will be fully 60 million bushels less than last July, so that the country can produce a crop 60 million bushels more than last year and still have no more available for exportation.

With the prospect of using up nearly all the old wheat before the new crop is available, not only in the United States but also abroad; with a deficient crop in India, an uncertain outlook in Russia, and the American winter wheat prospect cut materially below what had previously been anticipated, there does not appear to be much likelihood of any important setback in wheat prices.

MORE ADVANCE ABROAD THAN HERE.

Foreign markets made greater advances last week than those in this country, and the unusually wide margin between American and European prices for July and September delivery seem to indicate that the foreigners expect to need all the wheat they can get from this country in the first few months of the new crop year. The Liverpool July price was 21c over the Chicago July price yesterday. Export business in new wheat was reported daily last week. The importing countries are getting only meager supplies from the surplus countries and are rapidly eating into their surplus stocks of wheat. That is what surplus stocks of wheat are for, in the closing weeks of the crop year, but it naturally produces a nervous feeling in the markets to see stocks of wheat rapidly decreasing at a time when there is still some uncertainty about the size of the coming harvests.

SMALL INCREASE IN RECEIPTS.

The movement of wheat to primary markets showed a slight increase last week over that of the week before and at winter wheat centers was equal to a year ago. Compared with the same period last year, there was a decided falling off in spring wheat receipts, though both spring and winter wheat receipts were considerably larger than in the corresponding week for several years prior to last year. At the five Western markets last week there were 1,858 cars, against 3,710 cars a year ago, 1,300 cars two years ago, 770 cars three years ago and 935 cars four years ago.

The present primary market movement of wheat, therefore, is not abnormally small. This week should bring a moderate increase in the spring wheat movement, and it may be large enough to affect the market. The winter wheat receipts, on the other hand, are considered as more likely to decrease than to increase. The prospect is for another rather large decrease to-morrow in the visible supply statement, though some of the wheat that dropped out from Canadian ports last week may reappear at Montreal. A year ago there was a decrease of 1,863,000 bushels.

Not much progress is making in moving the big Armour holding of cash wheat in Chicago east. Shipments last week were about 400,000 bushels larger than receipts. There was no evidence of any important demand for the wheat. The May price did not advance as much as the July and September. There appears to be little open interest in the May wheat, but it is assumed that the Armour policy will be to hold it up so as to facilitate the marketing of cash wheat.

FAMINE PRICES FOR CORN.

New high records for the crop were made in the corn market. May corn in Chicago sold up to 75c and closed yesterday 3⅝c higher than a week ago at 72⅝@72¾c. In Kansas City there was a net advance of 3c for May corn, but other futures in both markets were comparatively dull, and closing prices showed only small net changes. Rarely, if ever, has corn sold as high as it is now throughout the years, except in a few years of extraordinary crop failure. The big holders of May corn in Chicago seem to have a firm hold on the market, and are supposed to have supplied considerable corn to distressed shorts during the week. Receipts of corn at primary markets were slightly smaller than in the preceding week and only little more than one-half as large as a year ago. The weather was unfavorable for the movement and much corn sold for delivery ten to twenty days ago in Illinois was said to be still on the farms because of impassable roads. Many parts of the Central states received three to five inches of rain last week. The excessive moisture is delaying corn planting, but there is plenty of time to complete the work. Export business is out of the question, as May corn in Liverpool is only about 5c above the price of cash corn in Chicago. The clearances were only 333,000 bushels, while from Argentina the exports were five times as much, though heavy rains there also were said to have interfered with the movement. The cash corn markets were strong throughout the country.

The range of prices for the active grain futures last week and the close Saturday, with comparisons, are here shown:

Wheat Pests Are Causing Increasing Uneasiness in Parts of Kansas.

Kansas apppears to have more Hessian flies and chinch bugs this year than for several years past, and complaints of damage are growing more numerous daily. The chances are against any serious damage from these pests, judging from past experiences, but they are causing some uneasiness in some important counties, including Sumner, Sedgwick, Harvey, Kingman, Reno and McPherson, and they are present in some other parts of the state.

A considerable area of Western Kansas, embracing a million acres or more, is still without sufficient moisture to give the wheat a start and a deficient yield, if not almost a failure of the crop is threatened in this section. Everywhere else in the winter wheat area there is abundant moisture. General rains fell last week. Nebraska, which has not had sufficient moisture heretofore, was well soaked with one to two inches of rain. Central and Eastern Kansas and Missouri received one to two inches—in some places more. In parts of Eastern Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio three to five inches of rain fell—too much for the healthy growth of the wheat and too much to permit corn planting, which is belated in those sections. In Iowa the precipitation averaged about an inch.

In the spring wheat region no rain fell and temperatures were too low for the growth of the newly planted spring wheat, though there is a fair supply of moisture in the ground and the week ended with warmer and more settled weather.

The entire agricultural area is in need of a period of sunshine and warmth which will put crops ahead rapidly and permit the completion of corn planting.

The May government crop report, issued Friday, showed a somewhat lower condition of winter wheat than expected—89, compared with 91.3 a month ago, 82.9 a year ago and the ten-year May average of 86. The principal declines in condition were 11 points in Kansas, 6 in Nebraska, 7 in Texas and 28 in California. The area remaining for harvest, as reported by the Agricultural department, is 29,751,000 acres, or 1,318,000 acres less than the area sown last fall and 1,619,000 acres more than were harvested in 1907.

The principal loss in area, and also in condition, was in California. In that state the acreage was reduced 530,000 acres, and the condition declined 28 points. On the entire winter wheat area outside of California the May report would be 90 for condition.

On the basis of 17½ bushels per acre as the 100 per cent yield the report indicates a winter wheat crop of 463 million bushels, or 30 million bushels less than the yield indicated a month ago, 60 million bushels more than last year's crop and 30 million bushels less than the biggest winter wheat crop ever raised—that of 1906. As a matter of fact, there is a possibility that the outturn of the crop may still exceed that of 1906.

Extraordinarily favorable conditions of pastures and meadows are reported nearly everywhere. The May government report makes the condition of pastures 93.6, or 14 per cent better than a year ago and 5.2 per cent better than the ten-year average. The condition of meadows is 93.5, or 9.9 per cent better than a year ago and 4 per cent above the ten-year average.

LOCAL SECURITIES.

No Interesting Feature in the Market Developed Last Week.

A fair business in local securities, without any conspicuous feature, was reported by brokers. Increased offerings of National Bank of Commerce stock have come on the market, apparently from men who think the advance has gone far enough for the present. The price fell back about two points. A few sales were made of Railway and Light stocks. In Chicago some small transactions in the preferred at 77 to 78 were made, but a local broker said that he couldn't get over 75 bid for as much as 100 shares. The March statement of the company shows a gain of $10,276 in gross earnings, all but $361 of which was used in increased operating expenses and interest. Some of the Cement stocks met with fair demand and were higher. A sale of 100 shares of Lucky Tiger stock at 30½ was made.

NO SETBACK FOR STOCKS

Cheap Money and Increasing Faith in Future Business Conditions Are the Basis of the Buying—No Improvement in Railroad Earnings.

NEW YORK, May 9.—After a momentary down-turn early in the week, the stock market resumed its upward movement, and the average level of prices to-day was more than 2 points higher than a week ago, and nearly 20 points up from the low level of last year. The persistent buying of stocks has occasioned daily surprise to the many traders who have been selling on the theory that the advance has gone far enough and that a set back is due. The set back doesn't arrive. The buying orders continue to come in sufficient volume to absorb all the offerings. The source of the demand is a mystery, but that is usually the case in rising markets. The men who are back of such movements, do not advertise their operations, and it is not often that confidences are divulged by brokers and commission men who handle the orders. "The public" is not in the market to any important extent. The buying appears to be for large operators who have confidence in the future, and their success is inspiring a widespread optimism among holders of securities, and business men.

STRONG POSITION OF UNION PACIFIC.

The leaders in the market are Reading and Union Pacific. A third and sometimes more of the total daily dealings are in these two stocks, and the volume of speculation in them is almost as great as in the days of the big bull markets of two years ago. Union Pacific has rallied over $40 a share from the low price of last October. The advance has been helped along by reports which seem to have some basis that the company has sold 25 millions in bonds abroad and has bids for 25 millions more, that are better than the price at which the recent Pennsylvania bond issue was sold. With the finances of the road thus fully provided for the expectation is that the 10 per cent dividend will be maintained. Moreover, there is a strong belief that in the segregation of the immensely valuable security holdings of the company the stockholders will profit greatly, and that plans for this important transaction are about ready for public announcement.

In the case of Reading there is a similar probability when the railroad company organizes a new corporation to hold its coal properties. There is a suspicion, however, that it is not so much a matter of intrinsic value as of skillful manipulation by operators with large resources that keeps the price of Reading climbing.

There has been an unusually large demand for Atchison, St. Paul and Southern Pacific, all of which have made substantial advances.

The upward movement reached every class of stocks this week, including the industrials, the low-priced railroad issues and the high-priced investment stocks. The bond business also continues large and comprehensive.

RAILROAD EARNINGS CONTINUE SMALL.

The general facts as to the business situation indicate some improvement, but it is not reflected in railroad earnings. The reports for the last week of April show an average decrease of 23 per cent in the gross earnings of thirty-eight roads—the greatest shrinkage that has been reported this year. But economy of management continues to be effective in keeping down the decreases in net earnings. Reports of eighty-nine roads in March show an average decrease of 12.72 per cent.

HIGH RECORD BANK FIGURES.

The fundamental reason for the firmness in the security markets is faith in the future, together with the abundance and cheapness of money in the banks. To-day's statement shows the largest deposits and the biggest specie reserves ever reported by the New York banks. The gain in cash this week, according to the statement of bank averages, was $4,672,000, a much smaller sum than the week's currency movements indicated. The statement indicates that 2¼ millions of government deposits were paid into the national treasury during the week. The actual amount must have been much larger as the treasury department required the return of 20 millions by all the national banks to-day. Twenty-four millions more are required in the next two weeks. But there is so much money in the banks that the repayments to the treasury can be made without any disturbance to the money market. According to the treasury circulation statement, the amount of money in the country outside of the treasury is 289 millions greater now than one year ago. Of this increase, 260 millions are gold, or gold certicates. Continued ease in the money market seems assured for a prolonged period, not only here, but in Europe.

The bank statement of actual conditions Friday shows an increase for the week of 9¼ millions in cash, or more than double the figures of the average statement, and the actual surplus reserves are over 67 millions, compared with the average surplus of the week of $63,883,000.

"COZIES" TO WARM BOILED EGGS

From the New York Times.

Decidedly original are the new "egg cozies" or caps designed for the purpose of keeping a boiled egg comfortably warm while the finishing touches are being given to the toilet after breakfast has been formally announced.

Lined with soft chamois or flannel, practically no heat can escape from the egg itself, nor can any of the cold temperature of the air penetrate through the hood, which fits down closely over the top of the egg and half covers the egg cup.

Many of these "cozies" are but gay bags or hoods of satin embroidered in effective ribbon work, or when intended for a breakfast tray, for use in the boudoir, are of chintz, the color of the room, always lined, of course, with fleece, flannel, or chamois. The "cozies" which are deserving of special attention, however, are marvelously fashioned yellow chiffon chickens or proud, motherly looking satin and silk hens, which spread their protecting wings over this escaped member of their brood and shelter it comfortably until ruthlessly lifted off and placed at the side of the plate and left to ponder moodily on the cruelty of man. The idea is a clever one and should prove a boon to all who still prefer beyond any other breakfast delicacy a boiled egg, and who are in consequence frequently deprived of a real pleasule through a fixed habit of unpunctuality which prevents them from ever getting this favorite morsel while it is still fresh from the stove and wholly delectable.

A FEAST OF UNCOOKED VIANDS.

From the New York Telegram.

To entertain an ambassador of a foreign power with a dinner of uncooked viands seems a hazardous bit of hospitality, but that, nevertheless, was the courtesy dealt to Wu Ting-fang, Chinese minister to this country, who, in company with W. S. Ho, consul, and L. Wing, vice consul of the imperial Chinese legation, supped with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Christian Monday evening. Present also were numerous other distinguished guests.

Mr. Christian is a food expert, and those of his guests who were not initiated into the fact that there is a chemical laboratory on the ground floor of his home, at 7 East Forty-first street, will refuse to believe the meal they partook of had not been cooked. As a matter of fact the good, old fashioned stove is disregarded in the Christian household, for, by chemical device, "natural nutrition" through uncooked diet becomes bearable and even palatable.

The dinner was further flavored by the presence of Mrs. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Hubbard, Mme. D. Rivera, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Havemeyer, Mrs. Charles Edward Russell and Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman. There were about fifty other guests. Mr. Havemeyer consented to speak on "The Efficacy of Sugar."

There were eight courses at the dinner, and to make matters still more interesting the menu has been kept a deep secret.

When Mr. Christian, who has a large clientage of unasked-for patients, heard that Wu Ting-fang was interested in "fireless food" he took immediate advantage of Chinese "simplicity" by sending him an invitation to his soiree. Mr. Wu Ting-fang accepted and he left Washington at once to destroy a few toothsome dishes in Mr. Christian's spacious dining hall.

Two short months ago, Governor Joseph W. Folk, who, late reports declare, is in good health, dined with Mr. Christian. The scientist is still in hopes that some more Missourians will "have to be shown."

"It's better not to give out the names of the courses, it is apt to cause prejudice," declared Mr. Christian to a reporter. "It sometimes provokes comment," he added with a twinkle in his eye. "You see, 20,000 years ago we didn't use fire."

"Didn't we? I didn't know that," confessed the questioner.

"No," continued the food expert, "and after ages of indigestion we have reached the time of repentance and are not prepared to live the way we were meant to live. I am not trying to win converts, but my inquiry department is very busy, and so many patients are being sent by physicians that I do not find time to carry on my chemical work."

HISTORIC QUILL PEN RELIC.

From the Indianapolis News.

George Edward McLeland, who lives at 2526 North New Jersey street, does not have much use for a pen, inasmuch as he is not yet 5 years old, but he nevertheless has the most interesting pen in Indianapolis. It is the one with which Benjamin Franklin signed the Declaration of Independence. His grandfather, Captain George W. McLeland, who has passed his eighty-sixth birthday, has handed the relic down to the younger George. Captain McLeland received it from his grandfather, Alexander McLeland, who was a page in the Continental Congress.

"Grandfather was a page in that historic Congress," said the youthful George's 86-year-old grandfather to-day, "and he was nicknamed 'Sandy' by its members. He gave me this pen, which is made of a wild turkey feather, when I last saw him at our home down in Jefferson county, in 1831. You see, I was only a shaver, about as big as young George there, when he gave it to me. He told me that all the men who signed the Declaration of Independence did not use the same pen, and that when Franklin signed it he turned to him and said: 'Here, Sandy, you take this and keep it, and now run along and tell the sexton to ring the bell,' and he then, with this pen in his hand, hastened out to the old man at the bell, and the first music of liberty rang out on the air. My grandfather lived to be 85 years old, and now that I have passed that milestone and my days are numbered, I pass the old relic down two generations. I came very near, however, turning it over to the old liberty bell people when the bell was in Indianapolis a few years ago."

George Edward McLeland, the present owner of the pen, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McLeland. The McLelands are one of the best known of the older families of Jefferson county.

"WHY I LONG FOR DEATH."

Paris Letter to the London Mail.

Count Tolstoi, the famous Russian author, replying to a friend who congratulated him recently on the approach of his eightieth birthday and the celebrations planned for it, said: "It is another happiness that I await—Death." To-day the Matin publishes a letter from the veteran writer, in which he amplifies that saying and adds that all earthly life is a dream and death the true awakening.

"All our life, from birth to death," he writes, "is it not, with all its dreams, itself a dream? Does not our belief in its reality spring solely and entirely from our ignorance of any other life more real? Our earthly life is one of the dreams of another and more real life, and that other life is a dream of yet another life, and so on ad infinitum, even to the last life, the life of God.

"Death in youth is as when a man is awakened before he has slept full measure. Death in old age is as when a man wakes of his own accord after good sleep. Suicide is as a nightmare which a man banishes by remembering that he is asleep; he makes an effort, and he wakes.

"Deep sleep, without dreams, is comparable to semi-bestiality. It is the sleeper conscious of what goes on around him, and ready to awake at any moment, who has knowledge, though but vague, of the life whence he came and whither he shall return.

"Even in this present dream-life we feel that which the new life will perhaps make real to us. The earthly form in which the awakening of our knowledge of the true life finds us appears as a limitation to the free development of our spirit. The true life begins when that limitation is removed. This idea embodies all the knowledge of the truth which gives to man the consciousness of eternal life.

"I believe with all my soul in what I say. I feel. I know with certainty, that in dying I shall be happy, that I shall enter a world more real."

From Black and White, London.

The woman gardeners of England are doing a great work in their country in extending the knowledge of scientific methods of cultivating the soil.

For the most part they are young women of good social position, who have taken up with their vocation because it is more attractive to them than other callings that are open to the English woman, and because, also, it is fairly remunerative whether they work for others or operate on their own account.

Many of them are employed on large estates, where they hold the important and responsible posts of head gardeners; others are specialists, having charge of certain branches of the agricultural work which their employers carry on, a great many of the women, however, are in business for themselves, operating on lands which they own or control under lease.

But whether these women gardeners work for others or on their own account they are able to apply to their operations the scientific methods with which they have become acquainted in some one of the schools and colleges of England which undertake to prepare women for the proper discharge of the duties of farmer and gardener. All over England they are showing by their works how to attain the best results from farming and gardening, and how to till land economically and profitably.

A notable instance of their good service to their country is to be found in the operation by a number of young women on a small holding of land near Thatcham, Berkshire. On this piece of land what are known as French methods of cultivation are being used, and they are being used so successfully that from less than two and a half acres a very handsome income is derived.

Briefly, the secret of their success lies in what is known as "close cultivation," by means of innumerable cloches and glass frames. This sounds easy, and even commonplace; but the method demands unwearying patience, tireless industry, and the bestowal of minute care upon the smallest details. It may be that it is for this last reason that girls have succeeded where men have failed. The experiment was initiated by two women. They were not possessed of large capital, but they took five acres of land and engaged the services of a French gardener. Now they have students, and, though they have found their little farm too large for their requirements, on less than half the space they earn enough profit for all.

To an English market gardener this must sound almost bewildering, and perhaps incredible. But it is hardly possible for an Englishman to realize what can be produced from a small patch of land when it is nursed with the loving care that a Frenchman employs.

Hardly a square inch is wasted. Every cloche and frame covers as many plants as will grow under it, and the spaces between the frames are jealously filled. Then, too, they raise three crops a year by means of their careful nurture, and when snow was falling recently, the atmosphere in the frames was up to 80 degrees, thanks to the French mats used to protect them.

Lettuces, carrots, cauliflowers, melons, and various fruits are among the products of the little garden, and many people in the neighborhood of Thatcham are anxious to secure small holdings and follow their example.

Cloth as Ornament.

From Vogue.

Cloth trimming on tussores gives a smart effect if not overdone, and it is heralded now even for linens and marquisettes. Short skirts, which usually look best with the least possible trimming, are now aping tunic lines. They take off from the height of the wearer, however. Coat and skirt costumes are holding first favor, and many of the black and white cloths in checks and stripes are used for short skirts, and colored silks or cloths for the coats, while a coat matching the skirt looks extremely well with some contrasting cloth trimmings put upon the coat, and perhaps long panel lines upon the skirt in front.

CHAPTER XIII—MR. AND MRS. ATKINS AT HOME.

AN urgent case necessitated my leaving Beverley at such an early hour that the city was still half asleep when I reached it. After driving from florist to florist in earch of an early riser amongst them, I t last found one. I selected the choicest f his flowers, and ordered them to be ent to Miss Derwent by special messen-er, hoping they would arrive in time to reet her on her awakening, and cheerully paid the price demanded for them.

On reaching my office I was surprised o find a note from the irrepressible Atins. You may remember that I had romised to dine with him on the previous vening. When I found that it would be mpossible for me to do so, I sent word hat I regretted that I could not keep my ngagement with h m.

I naturally thought that ended the mater. Not at all! Here was an invitation ven more urgent than the last—an iniation for that very day, too. Unless I vished to be positively rude and to hurt he feelings of these good people, I must ccept. There was no way out of it. So scribbled a few lines to that effect.

I confess that when I rang the Atkinses' ell that evening I did so with cons derble trepidation, for I was not at all sure ow the lady would receive me.

The room was almost dark, and, comng from the brilliantly-lighted hall, it was ome seconds before I could distinguish rom its surroundings the small figure of ny hostess, silhouetted against the crimon sky.

Her shimmering black gown and fluffy air caught and reflected her red backround in such a way that for a moment fancied I saw her surrounded and bepattered with blood. The effect was so ncanny that it quite startled me, but as e moved forward the illusion vanished, nd I was soon shaking a soft, warm and, which was quite reassuring.

"I just hope you don't mind the dark," he exclaimed, leading me to a chair and nking into one herself, "but somehow he light has hurt my eyes lately, and so don't turn it on till it is so dark that I umble all over the furniture. Mr. Atkins ays I'm crazy and ought to buy a pair f blue goggles, and so I would, only ey're so unbecoming."

"On the contrary," I assured her, as I t myself cautiously down into one of ose uncomfortable g lt abominations nown to the trade as a Louis XVI armhair, "I think this dim light just the hing for a chat. Luckily, no designing erson has yet found out how weak I am t this hour, or else I should have no serets left."

"Oh, go along," she giggled; "I guess ou're not the kind to say more than you ean to."

"I assure you I am——" but here I was nterrupted by my host, who called out rom the threshold:

"Well, I am glad to see you, doctor," cried, as he wrung my hand vigorously. Dinner's ready, too, and I hope you're ady for it."

The folding doors leading into the next oom slid back and disclosed a prettily ppointed table, profusely decorated with owers and silver. Soon after we had ttled into our chairs, I seized a moment hen I was unobserved to steal a look at rs. Atkins.

She was certainly paler and thinner than hen I had seen her last, but the change stead of detracting from her looks only dded to her charm. Dark violet lines enrcled her blue eyes and lent them a wistl pathetic expression that greatly enanced their beauty.

Otherwise, I thought her less changed an her husband had led me to suspect nd I could detect none of that extreme ervousness of which he had spoken; only hen she turned towards him did her anner appear at all strained, and even is was so slight as to be hardly noticele.

In fact, of the two, it was he who seemed at ease, and I noticed that he kept atching her anxiously. I saw that she as conscious of his constant scrutiny and at at times she became quite restless nder his prolonged gaze; then, tossing r head defiantly, as if determined to cast f the spell of his eyes, she would talk nd laugh with renewed animation.

The dinner was delicious and well rved; my hostess extremely pretty, my ost almost overpoweringly cordial, and e conversation agreeable, if not highly tellectual.

We had reached the fruit stage, and I as leaning contentedly back in my chair, ongratulating myself on my good luck in aving happened on such a pleasant eveng, when Mrs. Atkins exclaimed:

"I say, doctor, you haven't told us a ing about your thrilling adventure. What blessing the madman didn't succeed in lling you. Do tell us all about it."

After her husband's warning me that the are mention of the tragedy excited her I ad naturally taken great pains to avoid l reference to the subject. I was, conquently, a good deal surprised to hear r broach it with such apparent calmness. I glanced inquiringly at Atkins.

"Yes, do," he urged, still looking at his ife.

"I'm afraid there isn't much more to ll," I hesitatingly replied; "I gave the ewspapers a pretty straight account of e whole affair."

"Oh, but you were much too modest," e cried; "a little bird has told us that ou are a great detective, and suspected rgot from the first. Say, how did you anage to hit on him? We want all the etails, you know."

It was her flattery, I am afraid, which osened my tongue and made me forget y former caution.

"Well, it was mostly luck," I assured r, and then proceeded to give a long acunt of the whole affair.

"And now," I said, warming to my pic under their evident interest, "I wonr if either of you, when you read over e description of the murdered man, or hen you saw him, for the matter of that, oticed anything peculiar about him? I onfess that it escaped me and my attenon had to be called to it by Mr. Merritt."

"Something peculiar," she repeated. What kind of a peculiarity do you ean?"

"Well, the lack of an important article apparel," I replied.

"No; I didn't notice anything out of the way," she answered, after considering the question for some minutes.

I turned towards her husband. He was leaning forward, so deeply absorbed in watching his wife as to be entirely unconscious of my presence, and on his ingenious countenance I was shocked to observe suspicion and love struggling for mastery.

Struck by his silence, she, too, looked at him, and as her eyes encountered his I saw a look of fear creep into them, and the faint color fade from her cheeks. When he saw how his behavior had affected her, he tried to pull himself together, and passed his hand swiftly over his face as if anxious to obliterate whatever might be written there.

"Well, what is this missing link?" he asked, with obviously enforced gaiety. He looked squarely at me, and, as he did so, I became convinced that he already knew the answer to that question.

For a moment we stared at each other in silence. Were my looks tell-tale, I wondered, and could he see that I had discovered his secret?

"Say," broke in Mrs. Atkins, "don't go to sleep. What was this missing thing?"

I would have given anything not to have had to answer.

"No hat was found with the body," I said. Atkins, I noticed, was again looking fixedly at his wife, who had grown deathly white, and sat staring at him, as if hypnotized.

Both had, apparently, forgotten me, but yet I felt deeply embarrassed at being present, and dropped my eyes to my plate so as to give them a chance to regain their composure unobserved.

"Has the hat been found?" I heard her inquire, and her high soprano voice had again that peculiar grating quality I had noticed during her interview with the coroner.

"Yes," I answered, "it was found in Argot's possession. He actually wore it, and laid it down under my nose. Insanity can go no further."

"But how did you know it was the missing hat?" demanded Atkins, without taking his eyes off his wife.

What could I answer? I was appalled at the dilemma into which my vanity and stupidity had led me.

"I suspected it was the hat which was wanted," I blundered on, "because Mr. Merritt had told me he was looking for an ordinary white straw containing the name of a Chicago hatter. Argot's hat answered to this description, and, as the Frenchman had never been West, I concluded that he had not got it by fair means."

"So the dead man hailed from Chicago, did he?" inquired Atkins.

"The detective thinks so," I answered.

"Have the police discovered his name yet?"

"I—I am not sure!"

"You are discreet, I see."

"Indeed, no," I assured him. "The last time I saw Mr. Merritt he was still in doubt as to the man's real name."

"He only knew that the initials were A. B.," said Atkins, quickly.

I glanced, rapidly, from the husband to the wife. They sat, facing each other, unflinchingly like two antagonists of mettle, their faces drawn and set. But the strain proved too much for the woman, and in another moment she would have fallen to the floor if I had not managed to catch her.

Instead of assisting me, her husband sat quite still, wiping great beads of perspiration from his forehead.

"Come here," I said, "and help me to carry your wife to the window."

He got up, as if dazed, and came slowly toward me and together we carried her to a lounge in the drawing room.

"Look here, you told me that all mention of the murder made your wife extremely nervous, and yet you distinctly encouraged us to talk about it this evening. Do you think that right?"

He stared at me with unseeing eyes and appeared not to understand what I was saying.

"I had to find out the truth," he muttered.

"Look here, man," I cried, shaking him by the arm, "pull yourself together. Don't let your wife see that expression on your face when she comes to. This is not a simple faint; your wife's heart is affected, and if you excite her still further you may kill her."

That roused him and he now joined to the best of his ability in my endeavors to restore her. She soon opened her eyes, and glanced timidly at her husband. He managed to smile affectionately at her, which seemed to reassure her.

"How stupid of me to faint!" she exclaimed; "but it was so very hot."

"Yes, the heat is dreadful; you really should not overtax yourself during this weather," said her husband, gently, laying his hand on hers. She beamed at him, while a lovely pink overspread her pale face.

"As a doctor, may I urge Mrs. Atkins to go to bed immediately?" I said.

"Oh, no, no," she cried petulantly; "I'm all right." But as she tried to stand up she staggered helplessly.

"I insist on your going to bed, Lulu; I shall carry you upstairs at once." And the big man picked her up without more ado. She smiled at me over his shoulder, dimpling like a pleased child.

"You see, doctor, what a tyrant he is," she cried, waving her small hand as she disappeared.

When Atkins returned I rose to say good night, but he motioned me to return to my seat, and handing me a box of cigars, insisted on my taking one. Then, dragging a chair forward, he sat down facing me.

We puffed away for several minutes in silence. I was sure from his manner that he was trying to get up his courage to tell me something.

"You said just now that Mrs. Atkins had something the matter with her heart?"

"I'm afraid so; but I do not fancy it is anything very serious, and if it is taken in time, and she leads a quiet, happy life, there is no reason that she should not recover completely."

He got up and paced the room.

I watched him with increasing perplexity.

"Well, if that is so, treat her differently. You sit and watch her in a way that is enough to make anyone nervous, let alone a delicate woman. Forgive my speaking so plainly, but I consider it my duty as a physician. I am convinced that the extreme nervousness you spoke of (and which, by the way, I have failed to observe) is not to be attributed to the murder at all, but to your behavior. I don't think you have any idea how strange that is."

"Oh, but my wife has not been nervous since the Frenchman was arrested. We watched him being taken away from your house, and last night she slept quietly for the first time since the tragedy."

He paused and looked at me as if he longed to say more.

"Well, that is quite natural, I think. I can imagine nothing more alarming than to know that you are living under the same roof with an undetected criminal, who might at any time make use of his freedom to commit another murder. Till she knew who was guilty, she must have suspected and feared everybody. Now that she knows the fellow to be under lock and key, she can again sleep in peace."

Atkins sat down.

"Doctor, men of your calling are the same as confessors, are they not?"

"If you mean as regards the sanctity of professional communications, yes."

"Then I should like to confide a few things to you under the seal of that professional secrecy."

"Do you know that my wife is from Chicago?"

"Yes."

"I have never been there myself, and know none of her friends. You may have heard that my father was very much opposed to my marriage. He collected a lot of cock-and-bull stories about my wife which I did not believe. So the wedding took place and until a week ago I can truthfully say that I have been perfectly happy."

"What happened then?"

"I had to go out of town for two days on business, and got back very late on Wednesday night, having been delayed by an accident on the line. I was careful to be very quiet as I let myself in, anxious not to wake up my wife, who, I expected, would be fast asleep at that hour. I was therefore surprised and pleased to find the hall still ablaze with light.

"So, she had sat up for me after all, I thought. Taking off my hat I turned to hang it on the rack when I noticed a strange hat among my own. I took it down and examined it. It contained the name of a Chicago hatter and the initials A. B. were stamped on the inside band.

"At first I was simply puzzled, then it occurred to me that its owner must be still on the premises. That thought roused all my latent jealousy, so, putting the hat quietly back, I stole on tiptoe to the parlor.

"Peeping through the portieres, I saw my wife lying asleep on the sofa. She was quite alone. To whom then did the hat belong? What man had left in such a hurry or agitation as to forget so essential a thing? All the stories my father had told me came back to me with an overwhelming rush.

"Then I blushed at my want of confidence. All I had to do, I assured myself, was to wake up my wife and she would explain everything at once. I should not need to ask a question even; she would of her own accord tell me about her visitor. Full of these hopes I entered the room.

"She opened her eyes almost immediately and greeted me with even greater warmth than usual. I responded as best I could, but my impatience to hear what she had to say was so great as to render me insensible to everything else. I soon led our talk round to what she had been doing during my absence.

"She told me in a general way, but, doctor, she made no mention of a man visitor! I think I was patient. Again and again I gave her the chance to confide in me. At last, I asked her right out if she happened to see any of her Chicago friends. She hesitated a minute, then answered, deliberately, No!

"To doubt was no longer possible. She was concealing something from me; therefore, there was something to conceal. And yet she dared to hang around my neck and nestle close to me. It made me sick to feel the false creature so near. I don't know what came over me. The room swam before my eyes, and starting to my feet I flung her from me.

"She fell in a heap by the window and lay quite still, staring at me with speechless terror. I had had no intention of hurting her and was horrified at my brutality. I went to her and tried to raise her up, but at my approach she shrieked aloud and shrank away from me. I was thoroughly ashamed now and begged her to forgive my behavior. But for some time she only shook her head, till at last, overcome by her emotions, she burst into hysterical sobs.

"This was too much for me. I forgot everything except that I loved her, and, kneeling down, gathered her into my arms. She no longer resisted me, but like a tired child let me do with her what I would. I carried her upstairs and soon had the satisfaction of seeing her fall asleep.

"From that day to this neither of us has ever referred to this occurrence! I didn't, because—well, my motives were very mixed. In the first place, I couldn't apologize for my behavior without telling her the reason first, and that I was unwilling to do unasked. I was ashamed of my suspicions and wanted the explanation to be offered by her and not solicited by me.

"And then, underlying everything, was an unacknowledged dread of what I might discover, and terror that I might again forget myself. But what were her reasons for never asking for the meaning of my conduct?

"Why did she not make me sue on my knees for pardon? She has always made a great fuss whenever I have offended her before; why did she pass over this outrage in silence? Did she fear what questions I might ask? Did she suspect the cause of my anger?

"That night, before going to bed, I took that accursed hat and flung it out of the dining room window. It fell to the court below, and there Argot must have picked it up."

"When did you first become convinced that that hat had belonged to the murdered man?"

"Not for several days. In fact, I have never been perfectly sure till this evening."

"Really?"

"Yes; you see it did not occur to me for some time that there was any connection between my wife's visitor and the—the victim."

Here the poor fellow shudderd.

"Her manner was slightly constrained, and I saw she was depressed, but I thought that a natural result of the coolness that had arisen between us. I soon found out, however, that although our strained relations might weigh on her somewhat, the chief cause of her trouble was the murder.

"She hardly ever spoke of it, but I could see that it was never out of her mind. She used to send out for all the papers and pore over them by the hour, and was so nervous that it was positively painful to be in the room with her. She would start and scream with or without provocation.

"Another peculiarity she developed was an extreme disinclination to leaving the house. She went out on Thursday afternoon, I believe, but from that day to the time of Argot's arrest I don't think she ever left the building unless I insisted upon it.

"And another queer thing she did, was to stand behind the curtains and peer at your house. I would catch her doing this at all hours of the day and night. Then I began to wonder more and more why this murder had such an effect on her. I read and re-read all that was printed about it, and suddenly it came to me that no hat had been found with the body.

"I searched the papers again feverishly. I had not been mistaken. Every article of clothing was carefully enumerated, but no hat was mentioned. It was then I first suspected that the dead man and my wife's visitor were one and the same person. It was an awful moment, doctor."

He paused a while to control his emotions. "After that I kept continually puzzling as to how the fellow could have come by his death. Thank God, I was quite sure my little wife had no hand in that! You say Argot killed him; perhaps he did, though I can't imagine why or how.

"As soon as Mrs. Atkins heard that the Frenchman had been arrested her whole manner changed. Her nervousness disappeared as if by magic, and to-day she resumed her usual mode of life. She has even talked about the murder occasionally. But the barrier between us has not diminished.

"I cannot forget that she concealed that man's visit from me. I have longed, yet dreaded, to have the police to discover his identity, fearing that if they did his connection with my wife would also come out; and yet so anxious am I to know the nature of that connection as to be willing to run almost any risk to discover the truth.

"But things have come to a crisis tonight. We can no longer go on living side by side with this secret between us. She must tell what there was between them And now, when I can bear the suspense no longer, you insist that she must not be excited."

"Get a good doctor," I said at last, "and have Mrs. Atkins's heart examined. Her trouble may not be as serious as I think it is, and in that case there would be no further need of caution."

"Won't you undertake the case?"

"Have you no family physician?"

"Yes; Dr. Hartley."

"He is an excellent man and I think it would be much less agitating to Mrs. Atkins to be treated by her own doctor. You see it is very important that she should be kept quiet. I would like to ask you one thing, however: Don't you think you ought to tell the police that it was you who first found the hat and threw it into the yard?"

"I don't think it the least necessary," he answered, in great alarm; "what harm can this additional suspicion do Argot? There is no doubt that he tried to murder you, and is quite irresponsible. Why, should he not be guilty of the other crime? You suspected him before you knew that the hat was in his possession."

"That is all very true. And the man is hopelessly insane, I hear, and, guilty or not guilty, will probably spend the rest of his life in a lunatic asylum. Well, I must be off. Let me know what Dr. Hartley's verdict is. I am especially anxious that my fears may prove groundless, because I am sure that if you and Mrs. Atkins could have a frank talk everything would soon be satisfactorily explained."

"Do you think so?" he exclaimed eagerly.

TO BE SLENDER IS THE FASHION.

From the June Delineator.

To be a la mode nowadays clothes must fit closely wherever it is possible to take out an inch of unnecessary fullness. The corsage skirt with its high waistline is only another instance of this tendency. Its great popularity is due to its efficiency in producing the slender lines of the present figure silhouette. Waists have bloused very little at the belt line for some time past, but the corsage skirt robs them of even the slight fullness ordinarily allotted them. In its present construction the blouse comes down from the shoulders in flat, clinging lines that follow the figure closely. Just below the bust it meets the corsage skirt, producing the effect of a perfect-fitting costume, graceful in the extreme. It is easy to see how the happiest results may be achieved by the seeker after slenderness through the medium of the corsage skirt.

To say that a skirt has a high waistline describes it only partially. For instance, it may be gored or circular, or gored circular, or again gored plaited. It may be fitted in to the figure or it may hang from its belt in true empire fashion. There are so many versions of it that almost any type of woman can find one that seems to have been designed especially for her.

One of the new corsage skirts that has been especially well received has a seam down the center front and a mere suggestion of the rucked effect across the front at the waistline It is not particularly suitable for wash materials, but in panama, veiling or pongee it is perfectly charming.

Like so many of the latest skirts it has the circular shaping that sits smoothly over the hips and flares about the feet. The skirts with circular side are not only very smart, but they are extremely pretty as well, especially in the new stripes and checks. Wherever it is practical the well-dressed woman will utilize the two and three and four-piece circular skirts in her summer wardrobe.

The clerk has laid his pen aside;
His duties for the day are past,
His talents have been well applied,
The rest he craved is his at last;
He joins the pushing, rushing throng,
And goes to others waiting gladly.
The weary master lingers long,

The clerk is leaving care behind
Out where the town is clean and fair
Two little arms will soon be twined
Around his neck, and someone there
Will stand beside a little gate
And watch their baby run to meet him.
The master will turn homeward late,

The clerk sometimes permits a cloud
To cross his brow—sometimes believes
That he, in truth, should be allowed
More rich rewards than he receives—
But if he only knew or guessed
He might regard with honest pity
One who is very hardly pressed

AN IMITATION TAKES FOR ITS PATTERN THE REAL ARTICLE

There was never an imitation made of an imitation. Imitators always counterfit the genuine article. The genuine is what you ask for, because genuine articles are the advertised ones.

Imitations Are Not Advertised

but depend for their business on the ability of the dealer to sell you something claimed to be "just as good" when you ask for the genuine, because he makes more profit on the imitation. Why accept the imitation when you can get the genuine by insisting?

TO PROBE LONDON UTILITIES

Londoners are beginning to realize at last that the problem of conveying them from their homes in the suburbs to their work every morning and back again at night is becoming increasingly serious and one that must be grappled with and settled at once if disaster, financial and otherwise, is to be avoided. Accordingly, a bill will be introduced at the present session of Parliament for the appointment of a London traffic commission, which shall have autocratic powers over the companies and public authorities concerned in the business of carrying passengers within the London area.

The fact is that London, although the oldest and greatest of cities, and one of the best equipped in many of the conveniences of life, is ages behind the times in the matter of traffic facilities. She began dimly to realize this fact some years ago and then began a feverish race to capture what everyone saw at last was a great source of revenue. Before that she depended on the crawling old horse omnibuses and almost equally slow and much dirtier "underground."

AN AMERICAN STARTED IT.

The awakening was due to the foresight and genius of an American. Charles T. Yerkes saw a gold mine that was not being worked and straightway set about working it. He planned a system of underground railways—"tubes," they are called there—and he built most of them. He died, however, before the system was completed and before his plans were fully worked out, and the Yerkes tubes are now in as bad a muddle as the other London passenger carrying companies.

Yerkes's example caused the directors of the underground to wake up and electrify their line. They electrified the line but they have not been able to make it pay, and their last condition is worse than their first. When the awakening came the omnibus companies were practically in control of the field. Their old 'buses lumbered along comfortably with the drivers half asleep on the box, and the conductors only sufficiently awake to collect the fares. They paid a comfortable dividend to the stockholders and a fair wage to their employees. When the awakening came, however, the omnibus companies joined the rush for modern facilities. They went in for motor omnibuses—great, noisy, evil smelling vehicles, that rush about the streets carrying havoc to cabs and other traffic, and in wet weather when the streets are greasy are uncontrollable. The public took to them at first because of their supposed speed, but it soon deserted them again on account of the vibration, the evil smell and the liability to break down. And then it was found that the motor 'buses did not pay in any case. The engineers had given them a working life of ten years. They were out in two or three years and the repairs ate up their earnings during their short life.

RAISED THE FARES THEN.

Instead of adopting the policy preached by Mr. Yerkes, of giving the public better service at a lower cost, and thus inducing larger numbers to use the new facilities provided, the British managers of all the lines adopted the policy of reducing the service and charging more for it.

Before the advance in fares London was one of the most expensive cities in the world to get about in. Now it is beyond doubt the most expensive. In New York or Chicago a passenger may ride twenty miles for five cents, and if he rides only a block or two the charge is the same. The companies make money by this system. In London the theory is that one must pay for exactly what he gets. The local traveler in London may have a 1-cent ride which will take him about half a mile, but if he wants to get across London—about the same distance as from the Battery to the extreme northern limits of New York—it will cost him anywhere from twenty-five to thirty-six cents, according to the route and it will take him about two hours. In addition to that he will have to change vehicles at least four times. When the companies realized a few months ago that they were making no money they decided that the only remedy lay in raising the fares, which they did by reducing the distance that one might ride for two cents, without saying anything about it to the public. The public naturally resented this policy and retaliated by walking wherever possible.

AND STOCKS ARE TUMBLING.

An idea of the condition of the various London passenger carrying companies may be obtained from the following table showing the decline in the stock values of some of the companies since 1905:

Metropolitan	100	33
Metropolitan District	41¼	10½
Central London	94½	57
London General Omnibus	129	36
London Road Car	6¾	2⅛

The capital invested in underground railways in London is about 300 million dollars and practically none of the lines is paying dividends. The Central London which crosses London from east to west is the most prosperous, but its earnings have also been declining. There is about 16 million dollars invested in motor omnibus companies and with the exception of one small company it is all unproductive. One company paid 10 per cent on the year ended June 30, 1906, and not a penny since then. There are about a thousand motor omnibuses on the streets and the repair bill alone in connection with them is estimated at $50,000 a year. The District railway, which is the original "underground," has paid a dividend only one year of its existence, although it has carried more people than the total population of the world.

A few weeks ago the two great omnibus companies tried to solve the problem by reducing the wages of their drivers and conductors. The men struck and the companies lost in a few days a great deal more than they would have saved in a year or two by the reduction of wages.

TOO MANY ELEMENTS THERE.

The trouble in London seems to be lack of co-ordination. It is only fair to say that the problem of local traffic is a more troublesome one in London than in the great cities of America, which have been built according to some settled plan and where the traffic follows certain well defined routes. London is not one city, but an inchoate mass of cities and boroughs and villages which have grown together until they form a vast area covered with buildings, but with no orderly system of streets or means of communication. In many parts of the area the streets are too narrow and winding for street railways and in the city of London, the corporation, with fine old world conservatism, refuses to allow the street railways to enter at all. The result is that while the London county council has a fine tramway system all around the city every line must stop short at its boundary, and in the center of the system there is a gap covered by the square mile called the city. A passenger who wants to ride from east to west or from north to south on the county council's street cars must get off when he reaches the city and walk about a mile across it to continue his journey.

This is one of the things which it is hoped the traffic board, which it is proposed to appoint, will remedy. It will probably be given power to plan for the linking up of all the at present unrelated systems, and to overide such old world prejudices as those of the city corporation. It will also have power to regulate fares and to prevent the undue competition on several routes which renders it impossible for any of the competing companies to earn a dividend.

MOTOR CAR IN AFRICAN JUNGLES

From the Chicago Inter Ocean.

LONDON—While the competitors in the New York to Paris automobile contest have had their troubles with snow and blizzards in the United States, Lieutenant Paul Graetz has met with greater difficulties in pushing his way through the heart of Africa. The intricacies of a tropical jungle he has met and surmounted thus far.

He started from Dar-es-Salaam, German East Africa, on August 10, was delayed six weeks at Kilossa by a broken cylinder, which had to be replaced from Berlin, and then continued his attempt to reach Swakopmund, on the opposite coast of the continent. He has now penetrated, in the face of extraordinary difficulties, to Abercorn, in Rhodesia, having covered a distance approaching 1,000 miles.

In the telegram below he gives a vivid account of the disaster to his car on December 18, and his subsequent difficulties. In previous messages he related how he blew up hillsides with dynamite and bridged ravines to allow his car to pass.

"ABERCORN (RHODESIA), March 13.—We came terribly to grief on December 18 between Tabora and Tanganyika.

"The car was slowly working its way, on soil saturated by rain, through the dense bush, grass several feet in height, over deep holes and amid lurking dangers. We came across gigantic boulders and numberless tree trunks. The sun was already low on the horizon.

"The automobile reaches the foot of a steep decline when suddenly there is a tremendous shock. We are violently thrown forward; our boy, in front, is precipitated head first onto the bonnet.

"The motor stops. What has happened? We have run into a large stump of a tree concealed beneath the waving grass. As a result, the hood of the machine lies battered on the ground, the crank shaft is badly twisted, and other essential parts of the motor are shockingly damaged.

"We are in a desperate predicament. We are in a wild region, and now, to add to the discomforts and horrors of our position, as the night falls a storm brusts upon us in fury and a deluge of water nearly drowns us. The only shelter that can be found is beneath the car.

"There is no glimmer of hope of repairing the automobile. One hundred and twenty-five miles separate us still from Tanganyika. Half way lies Saline-Gottorp, which possesses an engineering workshop.

"Fortunately Luengsule, chief of the Uvinsa district (on the east coast of the mighty Tanganyika), places 100 natives at our disposal and they dragged the car at a funeral pace to the shores of the great river Malagarazi.

"The motor is placed on board a fishing boat, and crocodiles immediately swarm around us. At last we reach Salime-Gottorp. The men there say that even three weeks would not be sufficient to repair the unfortunate car, so we go on to Ujiji, no the lake, to the north, where Herr Rohleder, a steamship engineer, repairs it in two days.

'We then proceed to Kitua (in Rhodesia, on Lake Tanganyika), and land there. But the chauffeur, Rabelen, cannot get the motor to work, whereupon Kuehne, a settler from Bismarckburg, a former engineer in the German navy, who has resided in this region over twelve years, corrects the fault in one hour, much to the amazement of my chauffeur.

"Kuehne drives with us to Abercorn, where we are met and heartily received by the English official resident and his wife."

From the Boston Transcript.

Within a few weeks the rush to England by Episcopal clergy and leading laymen will be at its height. Bishops of most dioceses in this country have named delegates, and a good many people are going from the larger dioceses who have not been thus named. The rush is occasioned by the Pen-Anglican congress, which is to sit in London during most of June. It is the first meeting of the kind ever held, and there will be in attendance at it men and women from every country of the globe. It perhaps will not be so large a gathering as have been some others, but it will be as widely representative as any ever held in the world's metropolis.

During July the Lambeth conference meets in London, and not a few bishops go for both it and the congress. This conference is not new, and neither is its representative, save only of the bishops. Nobody but a bishop, not even his chaplain, is allowed to sit with the conference. The doorkeeper is himself a bishop. More bishops, it is said, will be gathered in London this year than were ever before in one city at one time. Discussion will be had of matters affecting chiefly Episcopal administration at home and abroad.

The congress, on the other hand, will be an open affair. It will discuss a wide range of topics, but the place of the laymen will be given prominence. This topic, religious leaders agree, is uppermost everywhere and in all religious bodies, for laymen are doing things and they insist on being heard. Following a new plan, the congress is issuing the addresses in advance. Many are already in this country in print. The idea is that appointed speakers will have read all of the papers of the congress, and the idea is that the things said during the conference will tend to pick theories to pieces, and especially to bring out additional ideas through discussion.

Considerable talk has been indulged in concerning a great offering that is to be made during the congress. As far as leaders on this side of the Atlantic have been able to learn, the offering, if made, will largely be made by British subjects. Americans say they have no idea of carrying money to England and giving it to somebody—it is not quite clear who, and for something it is not clear what, in any considerable amount. Therefore, so far as can be learned, America's contribution will be a small one. The growth of Anglican missions, representatives of which will form a considerable part of the congress, has been enormous. A century and a half ago missionary offerings amounted to only a few thousand dollars, and it required political influence, or at least political backing to bring into existence the first church missionary organization. To-day the Church of England and the churches in union with it in America, Canada, Australia, India and throughout the world give 30 million dollars to missionary causes annually.

Midsummer Millinery Opening

The Exhibit of Midsummer Millinery

Monday and Tuesday, May 11 and 12. Paris has Contributed Largely to this Exhibit of Charming Hats

The New Creations are Marvels of Perfected Millinery Art

Many exquisite Parisian creations were sent us direct through our Paris, France, office, 3 Cite Trevise. The remainder of these beautiful hats represent the pick of New York Importers' stocks. Our millinery buyer made a special trip to New York to secure them.

Come here to-morrow to see this effective display, gorgeous as a flower garden with its great mass of vivid colors, color effects that are simply entrancing. Come and see the new airy, lacy creations for summer, the exquisite leghorns pressed into fascinating shapes, the summer hats of almost unheard of proportions but so skilfully designed as to give no impression of over-largeness or weight; the flower laden hats adorned with beautiful flowers in every conceivable manner, many in very showy, startling effects, the dashing black hats conspicuously trimmed with fancy feathers, ostrich plumes, enormous pompons and full aigrettes.

There is practically no limit to the number of handsome styles that are included in this showing. We cannot commence to describe all of them. You must see the complete exhibit. You are cordially invited to be here Monday and Tuesday.

A Linen Sheet to Make Your Summer Dress, Size 76x96 Inches, at $1.89, About One-half Price

The manufacturer made a mistake in hemstitching these sheets. He cut off the hemstitching and then we bought the sheets at about half their real value.

We bought these sheets because we thought that they would make splendid white linen dresses, and now that we have them here our expectations are more than fullfilled, as we find that they are most satisfactory for this purpose. They are made of a beautiful Dresden linen, warranted all pure flax, size 76x96 inches. The quantity is limited, so we advise an early call, as we offer them to-morrow, while they last, at just about one-half of what they are really worth, each........................ $1.89

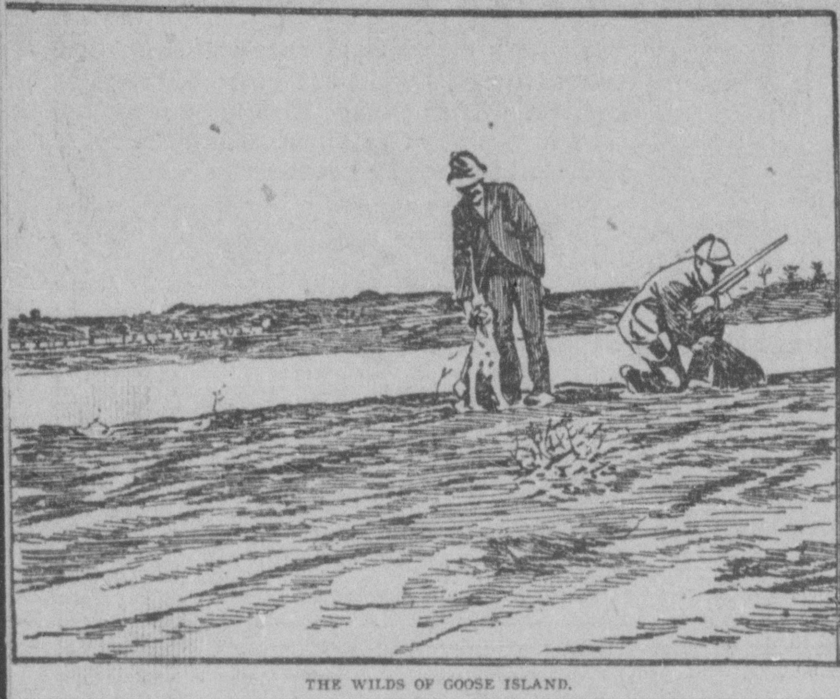
A VISIT TO GOOSE ISLAND.

HOW TWO VENTURESOME EXPLORERS BRAVED THE WILDS OF A MISSOURI RIVER SANDBAR

THIS is the story of a trip of exploration to Goose island. Much has been printed from time to time concerning this mysterious place, its notoriety principally growing out of protracted litigation over its ownership in the courts. But while its name has become familiar, few seemed to have more than a vague idea of its location. Hence the exploring expedition.

From far across the water came the chugging of a motor boat. The ragged, one-armed man who makes his home upon Goose island turned suddenly toward the sound. Then he ran to the water's brink and laughed joyously. Yes, the boat was headed in his direction—the men in it intended to land at the island, and Jim Hosey, recluse, was to have visitors.

"Hi!" Hosey yelled excitedly. "Hi, look out there, shallow water; steer that there craft down stream a bit an' throw out a line; I'll pull yer in. Lordy, ain't had anybody come to see me for a month of Sunday's." And he paced to and fro on the high sandy bank, waiting for the two men, dressed in hunting clothes, to make a landing with their boat. A line was thrown out, made fast and the visitors climbed up the high bank to be met by Hosey, whose face beamed a welcome.



THE WILDS OF GOOSE ISLAND.

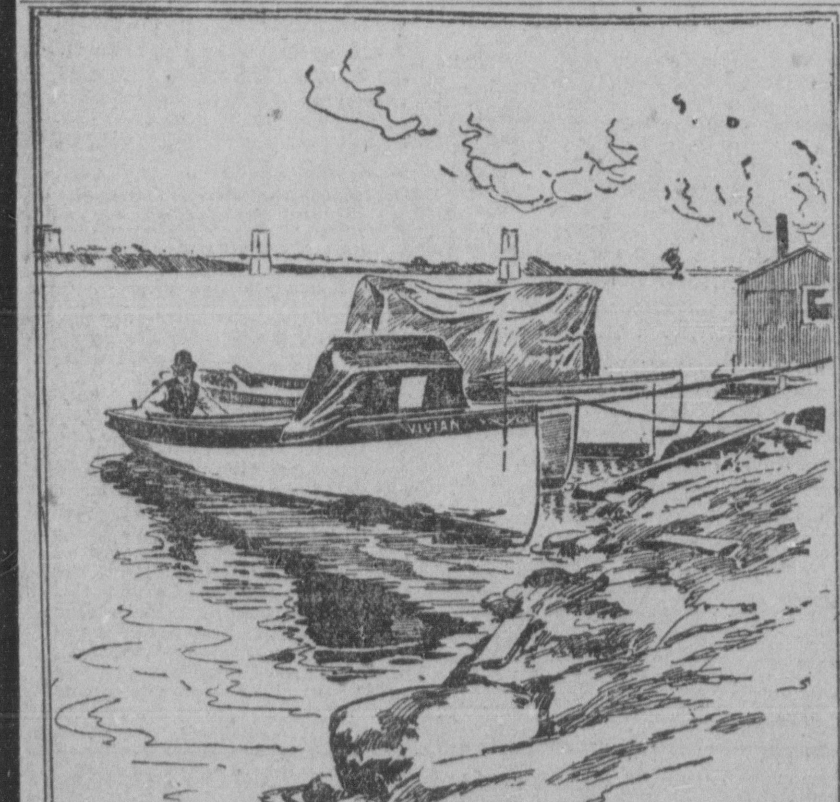
"Gosh, I'm glad ter see you!" he said. "You see, I'm kinda lonesome up here with nothin' but th' dogs an' th' wolf an' th' blackbirds. Glad you've come. Get outen th' way, there, Dumpy—huh, you're worse'n that there wolf father o' yourn. You see," he explained, when th' island used to be a park, they had a wolf in a cage here. Then th' park busted up an' a whole lot o' fellers got into lawsuits about th' thing, th' wolf got outen th' cage. An' since then, he's sure been tarnation bad. Et up all my chickens an' everything loose. Worst wolf I ever seen. These here dogs are his kids. He stays in th' woods hisself an' he won't come out, ceptin' at night, but th' dogs stay around me—guess that's cause they know I'll feed 'em. Say, bein's it ain't nothin' personal, could I ask what you all's doin' up here?" And Hosey waved a sleeveless arm to scare away the dogs that had become very much interested in the visitors.

One of the men told the keeper of the island that they had come on an exploring tour. They had heard much about the island in a vague way, but not until they had set out in a motor boat and gradually searched the river had they found it.

"Plumb glad you did, too," Hosey answered. "Wish more people'd do that. Then it wouldn't be so dinged lonesome."

Hosey led the way to the little hut in which he lives. Inside everything was in miniature. The stove was of a small size, the bed was smaller than beds ought to be, and even the coal oil lamp was not of regulation dimensions.

"Just make yourself to home," he said cheerfully as he opened the stove door and threw a handful of "nigger heads," or carbonized wood found on sand bars in the river.



THE STANCH CRAFT IN WHICH TWO INTREPID EXPLORERS BRAVED THE DANGERS OF THE MISSOURI IN THEIR TRIP TO GOOSE ISLAND.

A SCENE OF PAST REVELS.

The scene around the little shack was one of ruin and neglect. For to the right the remains of an old stockade was tottering, slowly sinking to the ground. Here and there an old lawn swing stood, slowly rotting away, while the dilapidated condition of a decrepit dancing pavilion rivaled the infirmites of refreshment stands that once had been crowded with thirsty persons. Near one of the old stands stood a roulette table, in the last stages of decay. Torn and yellow now was the once green felt cloth that covered the table, the wood was discolored and the joints falling to pieces. It was a reminder of the days when excursion boats made daily trips between Kansas City and the island, when prize fights were frequent there and when the Goose island of to-day was known as Island park. But that was in the days of long ago, when the laws were freer than they now are. Those were the days when the excursion boats left the foot of Main street every night loaded with passengers eager to drink and gamble; and to return a few hours later with those same passengers who were just a bit sadder from drinking and gambling not wisely, but too well.

Goose island was once a part of Kansas, it is said, but owing to the inconsistency of the current of the Missouri river it gradually has been cut away from the mainland and now is a full-fledged island. It is situated in a bend of the Missouri river, about a mile above the mouth of the Kaw river, just where the Missouri bends toward a course eastward. The island is about a mile and a half long and about a half mile wide, and it is a wilderness. Reeds grow in profusion, matting themselves together on the ground until it is impossible to walk. Here and there are clumps of small willow trees, through which passage is almost impossible except for the bane of Jim Hosey's existence—the wolf, and its offspring.

Jim Hosey, an old fisherman, was sent to watch the island by the Edgewater Land company, which had come into possession of the property. And since then the wolf has been able to live very well by stealing anything eatable that Hosey leaves loose, including his chickens.

"Don't know whether youall's goin' to enjoy this here bed to-night," he said rather reluctantly. "Course, I kin get along on th' floor all right, but I guess youall used to better beds than this. Now if that blamed wolf hadn't——"

"We'll get along all right," was the answer of the visitors. Then he became reminiscent.

HOSEY'S CHIEF INTEREST—THE WOLF.

"Ding that wolf anyhow," he said suddenly; "don't know what I'd do ef it wasn't for him. Keeps me so mad all th' time I almost forget to be lonesome, sometimes. You see, I been up here two or three years now an' th' only time I get to see anybody's when Bill an' th' boys bring me up my grub about every three months. Like slapjacks? Reason I ast was that's th' only thing I know how to cook, ceptin' duck an' blackbirds."

Hosey opened the cabin door. "Listen," he said. From outside came the chattering of thousands of birds. Silhouetted against the sky, now ruddy from the rays of the setting sun, a row of cottonwood trees, every branch, every twig, literally filled with blackbirds. Large flocks of the birds were flying from tree to tree.

"Get th' shotgun," Hosey ordered.

Four or five shots were fired and fully fifty blackbirds lay on the ground. Under the direction of Hosey they were skinned and cleaned and then put into a large pot on the small stove.

"While them things is stewin' I'll just do a little work on my boat, while th' light's still here," Hosey said as he picked up a hammer and walked to a large boat that rested on standards near the little shack in which he lived. The boat was equipped with only one oarlock and there was a peculiar contrivance in it by which the rudder might be worked with the foot.

"You see," he explained, "I only got one arm an' so I got to fix things so's I kin steer with my foot."

"'Fraid? Lord, no! Huh, I ain't skeered o' any water that ever was made. I been in th' river business ever since before Beaver Al saw water an' that's goin' some, I guess. I swum this here river once, with my one arm. I'd be out on th' water all th' time, but I gotta watch that dinged wolf. Swipe everything I got ef I didn't."

By the time darkness had settled upon the river there came from the interior of the hut the scent of stewed blackbirds, which, by the way, make a very savory dish when they are cooked properly. The surviving birds had ceased their chattering and the dogs had crawled into the shack where they could be near the little stove, for nights on Goose island are rather chilly. Hosey opened the door of a small cupboard on the wall and brought forth tin cups, spoons and plates. Then he made coffee in a battered old pot. The meal was eaten, accompanied with Hosey's remarks concerning the lawless behavior of that wolf. The wolf seemed to be the one great thought in Hosey's mind. It was the only thing on the island worth thinking about.

"Gosh, I wish you fellers could stay here to-morrow an' kill that dinged varmint!" he exclaimed suddenly. "No, I don't, either," he added a moment later. "He's a heap o' company sometimes, when he's swiped a duck or suthin' an' makes me mad. Lordy, I get lonesome here! All I gotta do is sit here all day an' watch th' water or th' engines over there on th' Missouri side. But I guess that dern wolf don't intrust youall much as it does me. Sorta one o' th' family with me."

The next morning, after a fruitless duck hunt, the visitors departed. Hosey stood on the island shore and waved a farewell with his empty sleeve.

"I hate t' see you go," he yelled as the motor boat slipped down the stream. "Goose island's a powerful lonesome place with no company but blackbirds and that dinged wolf!"

TO SHELVE GLADSTONE'S SON.

Herbert, England's Home Secretary, Has Failed as a Politician.

It is said in well informed circles of London that the only reason the Right Hon. Herbert Gladstone, M. P., son of the "Grand Old Man" of English politics, was retained in the cabinet after the shuffle which took place when Mr. Asquith succeeded the late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman is that the new prime minister is troubled with a soft heart. The report still survives, however, that when things have settled down and it will not attract so much attention the home secretary will be made a peer—Lord Hawarden—and thus shunted into the House of Lords, where, whether a man amounts to much or little doesn't matter. That is the politest method known to the English body politic of "shelving" a man. Handicapped by the possession of a great name, overshadowed and dwarfed by the superlative genius of his father and foredamned by the inevitable comparison, Herbert Gladstone has made a failure as a cabinet minister.

There be some who claim to believe that had Herbert Gladstone been the son of an ordinary man he woulgd have made a big success as a politician. The more general opinion, however, is that he has always been too fond of golf and music and too chary of hard work to ever have made a success in the political arena. "Our Herbert," as he is known to his Liberal associates in the present government, met the Waterloo of his career when he tackled that eminently difficult and thankless billet, the home secretaryship, which he now holds. He has made such a failure of his job that the political physicians who have been called in on his case have no reasons for doubting that something drastic will have to be done.

If opportunities and advantages could have made a statesman out of Gladstone's son, Herbert would have been the light of his age. He was born in Downing street when his father was a political power in the country and he was weaned on politics. At school his eminent father was accustomed to bombard him with weekly letters chock-a-block with political wisdom. At the age of 26 he entered Parliament and immediately became private secretary to his father. In those days he was known as "Tuppence" Gladstone, and also as "The Youthful Hercules." He was of small build, but had all the manly strength and vigor of his great pater. In the days of his father he seldom spoke, leaving that end of the business to the head of the family, but he had excellent training as an administrator. At various times he served as financial secretary to the war office, chief Liberal whip, junior lord of the treasury, first commissioner of works and under secretary to the home office. Such a course of sprouts was bound to make a man or mar him, and it appears to have worked the latter change in this soft pine chip off an old oak block.

Herbert Gladstone's failure as a statesman is said to be due largely to his love for music, which amounts almost to a passion. He is a delightful pianist and 'cellist, and has a charming tenor voice. So strong is his love for music that it ultimately led him to the hymeneal altar. Through dozens of London seasons he withstood the wiles of matchmaking mothers and heart-touched debutantes until he arrived at the age of 47. Just when everybody thought Cupid had called the chase off, Herbert Gladstone wedded one of the most charming girls in London. And Cupid accomplished this seeming miracle through the politician's love of music. It seems that at a certain house he was asked to sing a duet with the daughter of Sir Richard Paget, and with each succeeding note of the duet the resolutions of years and the dreams of single blessedness came tumbling down on the head of the stony-hearted bachelor of 47.

Well, that was seven years ago and Herbert's devotion to music, and incidentally golf, has grown more marked as the intervening years rolled by. And his interest in and devotion to his public work decreased in the same proportion. It was reaerved until the present session of Parliament to put an extinguisher on him, however. As home secretary it should have been his task to introduce the licensing bill into the House of Commons and carry it through. That, really would have been the first big thing the son of the "Great Commoner" had done since he assumed office. But Mr. Asquith, who was then chancelor of the exchequer, stepped in and took it out of his hands, thereby declaring to the whole country Gladstone's unfitness for the job.

It is said that Herbert would much prefer the upper house. The lethargic atmosphere of the House of Lords would be more to the liking of this quiet, unassuming, bashful man than the rough and tumble arena of the House of Commons.

The LEAP YEAR PRIVILEGE.

THE gallant and delicate privilege which is extended on leap year to the fairer half of creation passes in this country as a mere jest. Yet the time was when the custom was recognized by statute in Scotland and France and by the lex non scripta, or common law of England. And in Ireland it had the sanction of a tradition which connected its institution with Saint Patrick. The story, according to Walsh's Curiosities of Popular Customs, runs thus:

Once upon a time as the good Saint Patrick was walking on the shores of Lough Meagh, after he had riven the frogs out of the bogs and the snakes out of the grass, he was accosted by St. Bridget, who with many tears and lamentations, informed him that there was an insurrection in her nunnery over the fact that the women were debarred from the privilege of "popping the question." In Bridget's day celibacy, although approved by the church as the proper life of a religieuse, and consequently made binding upon the individual by a private vow, was not enforced as a general and absolute rule even for the clergy. Saint Patrick, a sternly single man himself—was yet so far moved that he offered to concede to the ladies the privilege of proposing one year in seven. To this St. Bridget demurred, and throwing her arms around St. Patrick exclaimed, "Arrah, Pathrick, jewel, I daurn't go back to the gurls wid such a proposal. Mek it wan year in four."

The saint's reply was said to have been, "Biddy, acushla, squeeze me that way again and I'll give you leap year, the longest one of the lot."

St. Bridget, thus encouraged, bethought herself of her own husbandless condition and accordingly popped the question to St. Patrick. The good saint had, however, taken the vow of celibacy and had to patch up the difficulty as best he could with a kiss and a new silk gown, "and ever since then," concludes the legend, which it is needless to say is not found in Butler's "Lives of Saints" or in any other work of Hagiological authority, "if a man refuse a leap year proposal he must pay the penalty of a kiss and a silk gown."

In 1288 the following statute was passed in Scotland:

> It is statut and ordaint that during the rein of hir maist blessit megeste, for ilk yeare knowne as lepe yeare, ilk mayden ladye of bothe highe and lowe estait shall hae liberte to bespeke ye man she likes, albeit he refuses to taik hir to be his lawful wyfe, he shall be mulcted in ye sum of one poundis or less, as his estait may be; except and awis gif he can make it appeare that he is bethrothet ane ither woman, he then shall be free.

A few years later a similar statute was passed in France and received the approval of the king, and before Columbus sailed to discover the New World, it is said that similar laws were passed in Genoa and Florence. However, no record of fines imposed in Scotland remains and no statistics are preserved as to the number of spinsters who took advantage of these statutory privileges in either Scotland, France or Italy.

According to a curious old book entitled "Love, Courtship and Matrimony," published in London in 1606, the English did not need to have the leap-year privilege forced upon them by statute, but allowed it to become part of the lex non scripta.

> Albeit it nowe become a part of the common lawe in regard to social relations of life, that as often as every leap yeare doth return the ladyes have the sole privilege during the time it continueth of making love, either by words or lookes, as to them it seemeth proper; and moreover no man will be entitled to benefit of clergy who doth in anywise treat her proposal with slight or contumely.

Up to within a century ago it was an unwritten law of leap year that if a man should decline a proposal he should soften the disappointment which his answer would bring about by the present of a silk dress to the unsuccessful suitor for his hand.

A curious leap year superstition is to be met in some parts of New England where it is said that in leap year "beans grow on the wrong side of the pod."

If, however, the custom has degenerated into a mere jest among us, when in leap year, the same as in other years, our maids know how to feign "coy looks and cold disdain," and as Benedick says of Beatrice, "she will die rather than give any sign of affection," there are still places where women woo and "pop the question."

In an action for damages for breach of promise recently tried in the district court of Johnson county, Kansas, in which both plaintiff and defendant were Croatians, the evidence disclosed the fact that the proposal of marriage was made by the woman, and that the custom of that nationality sanctioned such procedure. The jury gave the woman $500 damages.

Many other instances are cited in "Primitive Love and Love Stories." The author contends that coyness is not an innate or universal trait of femininity and does not characterize primitive women, but is the result of education and culture and offers evidence in support of his thesis:

"The Maoris had a 'wooing house' in which the New Zealand girls used to stand up in the dark and say: 'I love and-so; I want him for my husband.' Whereupon the chosen lover, if willing, would say yes, or cough to signify his assent."

"In all Polynesia it was a common occurrence that the women wooed the men," says one writer, and in "Savage Life in Polynesia" it is asserted that "a proposal of marriage may emanate with propriety from a woman of rank to an equal or inferior."

In Dutch Borneo there is a special kind of "marriage by stratagem." If a girl desires a particular man he is inveigled into her house, the door is shut, the walls are hung with cloth of different colors and other ornaments, dinner is served up and he is informed of the girl's wish to marry him. If he declines he is obliged to pay the value of the hangings and ornaments.

The customs of the natives of the islands of the Torres strait, north of Australia, make it not only permissible but obligatory on the women to propose to the men. On the island of Tud when boys undergo the ordeal of initiation into manhood, one of the lessons taught them is, "You no like girl first; if you do, girl laugh and call you woman." When a girl likes a man she tells his sister, and gives her a ring of string. On the first suitable opportunity the sister says to her brother, "I have some good news for you. A woman loves you." He asks who it is, and if "Barkis is willin'" he tells his sister to make a date for him with the lady. The following is given as the actual form used:

Opening the conversation the man says: "You like me proper?"

"Yes," she replies, "I like you proper with my heart inside. Eye along my heart see you—you my man."

Unwilling to rashly give himself away the man asks, "How you like me?"

"I like—I like you altogether," is the girl's reply.

Finally to clench the matter the girl asks when they are to be married, and the man says "To-morrow, if you like."

Then they go home and inform their relatives. There is a mock fight and everything is settled.

On the island of Mabuiag, after a girl has sent an intermediary to bring a string to the man she covets, she follows this up by sending him food again and again. But he lies low for a month or two before he ventures to eat any of this food. Finally he concludes that she means business, so he consults the big men of the tribe and marries her.

> The boys and girls freely mingle together in the labors of the field and other pursuits and the smitten young lady has ample opportunity of declaring her partiality, and it is her privileged duty to speak first. * * * Any infringement of the rule which declares that the initiative shall in such cases rest with the girl is summarily and severely punished.
>
> The marriage ceremony consists chiefly of dancing, singing and feasting. The bride is taken down to the nearest stream and bathed, and the party next proceeds to the house of the bridegroom, who pretends to be unwilling and runs away, but is caught and subjected to a similar ablution, and then taken, in spite of the resistance and counterfeited grief and lamentation of his parents, to the bride's house.

According to Bancroft, the usual order is reversed also among the Pueblo Indians. When the girl is disposed to marry she does not wait for the young man to propose, but selects the one she wants and consults her father, who visits the young man's parents and arranges the match. According to Schoolcraft the same custom prevails among the Moquis. Indian girls of the Hudson river region "were not debarred signifying their desire to enter matrimonial life," according to Ruttenber. When one of them wished to be married she covered her face with a veil and sat covered as an indication of her desire.

Turn to Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" and note how business-like the fair Juliet is. She bids farewell to mere form or punctilio and says:

> O, gentle Romeo,
> If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully;
> Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won
> I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay,
> So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.
> In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
> And therefore thou mayst think my 'havior light:
> But trust me, gentlemen, I'll prove more true
> Than those that have more cunning to be strange.

Later Juliet actually proposes to Romeo:

> Three words, dear Romeo, and good-night indeed.
> If that thy bent of love be honorable,
> Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,
> By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
>

John Fiske in his "Old Virginia" tells how Parson Camm was wooed. A young friend of his who had been courting Miss Betsy Hansford of his parish asked the parson to intercede with the lady on his behalf. The parson called upon the lady and endeavored to help his young friend out by quoting to her all the texts he could find in the Bible enjoining marriage as a duty. Now, Betsy was something of a Biblical student herself and so she told the parson to take his Bible when he got home and look at II Samuel, xii, 7, which would explain her obduracy. He did so, and found this: "And Nathan said to David, thou art the man.' The parson accepted to proposal.

MOTHERS CAN'T RESIST IT.

With a pony as a "property," enterprising photographers have been reaping a harvest for several weeks from South side mothers. The pony is of the Shetland variety and "calico" in pattern.

"The fond mother who can withstand the temptation of having darling baby photographed, astride of the pony, has not yet been found," one of the photographers explained. "We get from four to ten orders in each block in well populated neighborhoods. All sorts of subterfuges are used by the women. One of them forced us to 'rehearse' baby on the pony for a half-hour before the picture was taken. She wanted some of the pictures on postcards, she said, so she could send copies to friends back East. She wished baby to look natural on the animal so that the Eastern friends would think the family out here had 'struck it rich' anad were maintaining a stable of saddlers.

"Another woman who was not satisfied to allow the picture taken with her modest home in the background, asked us to take the picture over in the next block, where there was an unoccupied house of rather pretentious exterior. We did it and the woman ordered two dozen copies. Babies look so 'cute' on the pony, the women say. Next year we are going to introduce a big, kind-faced Newfoundland dog as a property. Don't be surprised if you receive a picture of somebody's darlingest darling with its chubby hands lost in the wavy hair on the dog's neck. We've got Chauncey Olcott beaten to a whisper in rigging up 'cut' scenes."

BABY ON PONY BACK—A COMBINATION THAT HAS PROVED A MONEY MAKER FOR ENTERPRISING PHOTOGRAPHERS.

From Harper's Bazar.

I am a primary teacher, and find that many otherwise bright children are slow in numbers. I have obtained good results in many cases by recommending number games at home, making at the same time a strong stand against home tasks.

A box of "pasteboard money" is very good for playing store. The little storekeeper will enjoy making change immensely, and will take pains that he neither cheats nor is cheated. Bean bag games, where a score is kept by each child, are also useful. The old fashioned way of playing dominoes, counting by the multiples of five, is very fascinating to the average child, who at the same time unconsciously acquires a good foundation for formal number lessons in school.

ENGLAND'S NEW PRIME MINISTER WON HIS WIFE ON THE STRENGHT OF A PREDICTION BY GLADSTONE

ONE of the strangest circumstances in connection with the rise of H. H. Asquith to the exalted post of prime minister of Great Britain is the fact that such an even not only was foretold by a great statesman many years ago, but that his present wife married him through faith in that prophecy.

It was Mr. Gladstone who predicted, a good many years ago, that Mr. Asquith, then a member of his cabinet as home secretary, would some day occupy the highest office in the land if he lived long enough. Miss Margot Tennant, one of the most gifted and popular young ladies in society, was at that time a sort of protegee of the Great Commoner and kept up a constant correspondence with him.

MRS. ASQUITH, WIFE OF ENGLAND'S NEW PRIME MINISTER, AND ONE OF HER CHILDREN.

To her he confided the opinion he had formed that Asquith was the coming man. And it was that, more than anything else, says her friends, that led Margot Tennant, who, like most brilliant young women, was ambitious, to "throw herself away," according to the society view, on the gray-haired lawyer, who was then a widower. That was in 1894. The verification of the prediction has been a long time coming, but the events of the last few days have vindicated both Gladstone's political acumen and Margot Tennant's faith in it.

It is hard to say whose has been the greater triumph, that of Mrs. Asquith or that of the prime minister. The latter has succeeded to the greatest political post in the country, but there is considerable doubt as to his ultimate success. The former has succeedd to the position of leading hostess of the English political world and there is no doubt in anybody's mind but that she will be the most brilliant success of the decade. As a matter of fact, London is looking forward with a whole hearted joy to the day when Mrs. Asquith assumes her position of political queen of England.

Not since the days of the premiership of Lord Salisbury, more than ten years ago, has a lady presided over 10 Downing street, the official residence of the prime minister, as the wife of the first statesman of Great Britain. Lady Campbell-Bannerman was in too poor health to assume the burden and died last year, Lord Rosebery was a widower, and Mr. Balfour a bachelor. Even Lady Salisbury was not very fond of the social duties imposed upon her by her husband's position, nor was Mrs. Gladstone, in her old age. The critics agree with striking unanimity that no better woman than Mrs. Asquith could possibly be found to revive the glories of the great position to which she has succeeded and to unite politics and society as they are traditionally supposed to be united in England.

LED THE COTERIE OF "SOULS."

As Margot Tennant, Mrs. Asquith scored one of the most conspicuous social successes of her time. She was the leader of a coterie of "intellectuals" who called themselves the "Souls," and who included within their ranks nearly "everybody" who amounted to anything in the literary, political and art world of the time. Although since her marriage she has toned down somewhat, in deference to the opinions of her staid and dignified husband, it is predicted that at 10 Downing street she will found some sort of a modern equivalent of those brilliant French salons that people are never tired of regretting.

Mrs. Asquith's personality seems to have inspired the writers of fiction more than any other woman of her time. It is generally known that she is the original around which was written "Dodo," that brilliant novel of society which came from the pen of E. F. Benson, son of the late archbishop of Canterbury, and which took all England by storm when it made its appearance some years ago. It is perhaps not so generally known, but nevertheless just as true, that she furnished Mrs. Humphry Ward with many suggestions for the character of Lady Kitty Ashe in "The Marriage of William Ashe," the novel which has just been dramatized by an American woman, Margaret Mayo.

Some of the friends of Mrs. Asquith's earlier years say that since she ceased to be Margot Tennant she has lost all her originality, daring and sarcasm. As Miss Tennant she was regarded as the most original woman in London, as well as the most amusing, though society was half in terror of her biting judgments of men and things.

At a house party the king, as Prince of Wales, once said to her, "Miss Tennant, I hope you will let me down easy."

In those days she was asked everywhere, but if the spirit moved her she thought nothing of disappointing even royalties by refusing to put in an appearance.

She was the first woman to surprise the smart crowd on the golf links at North Berwick by playing hatless, a habit which she still pursues. She has beautiful hair and is a believer in the open-air treatment for keeping it in condition.

She and the prime minister have a consuming love of beautiful old furniture and bric-a-brac. When they want a special treat they wander about arm-in-arm in outlandish parts of London inspecting old curiosities in repositories presided over usually by shrewd Israelites. Many of the quaintest things which adorn their wonderful old Georgian house at 20 Cavendish square, have been acquired in this way.

Although an extremely wealthy woman in her own right she has no admiration for gorgeous modern jewels and never wears them. Her most valued possessions in ornaments are quaint things in exquisite settings, many in silver, which she has discovered both on the continent and in London in the most unpromising quarters.

RODE ON A MERRY-GO-'ROUND.

At one time she had a great penchant for red and wore it constantly. Her last escapade, a few months after her marriage to Mr. Asquith took place at a country house which they were visiting. Arrayed in a gorgeous creation of red satin she and Muriel Wilson made their way to a merry-go-'round in the village and mounting two horses rode with the villagers to the infinite amusement of all and sundry. After this Mr. Asquith put his foot down and his wife has never since "distinguished" herself in public.

The present Mrs. Asquith is the prime minister's second wife. Of their union there has been three children, a daughter and two sons, one of the latter dying soon after birth. By his first wife Mr. Asquith had five children. Raymond, who last summer married Miss Katherine Horner, a descendant of the "Little Jack Horner" of nursery rhyme fame, has proved himself a real chip of the old block. There has been something singularly remarkable in the way he has followed in his distinguished father's footsteps at college, winning the same prizes and holding the same office. He is now a practicing lawyer, having been called to the bar in 1904.

Perch Fishing.

From the Contributor's Club, May Atlantic.

And the other fishing days when you got up before dawn and stole downstairs to the dim kitchen. A drink of milk, a doughnut and a triangle of pie, then you stole out quietly to the barn and got the spading fork. Then the search, armed with fork and tomato can, under the broad leaves of the rhubarb bed, back of the henhouse and down by the cow barn, until you had enough worms for the day's sport. Then, of course, you left the fork sticking in the ground—you never would learn to put things away—and started off. Through the garden and orchard, stopping long enough for a handful of currants and a pocketful of sopsyvines—over the pasture bars, eating a handful of huckleberries or lowbush blackberries here and there. Into the wood road—very dark and still in the dawn—where you stepped along very quietly so as not to disturb the bears. You knew perfectly well there were no bears, but you rather enjoyed the creepy sensation. Then out through the deep wet meadow grass to the river, where the sun was now beginning to burn away the wisps of mist and the red-winged blackbirds were making a tremendous fuss over their housekeeping. You reached the river-bank at the pout hole, or the big rock, or the old willow (of course, you know the exact place), and then you started fishing.

TAFT NEEDS ONLY 56 MORE

THE FIRST BALLOT WILL GIVE THE SECRETARY 600 VOTES.

It Is Privately Admitted by the "Allies" That the Contest for the Republican Nomination for President Is Ended.

Instructed for Taft, no contests	387
Preference resolutions for Taft	16
Personally committed to Taft	32
Total committed to Taft	435
Instructed for Fairbanks	32
Instructed for Cannon	46
Instructed for LaFollette	25
Instructed for Hughes	54
Instructed for Knox	68
Not committed	114
Contested	80
Total elected	854
Total in convention	980
Necessary to choice	491

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Secretary Taft lacks only fifty-six delegates to-night of the 491 necessary to nominate him on first ballot at the Chicago convention. The 435 delegates given to Taft are irrevocably committed to him. By May 16 all delegates to the national convention must be chosen. Ten states and one territory have not elected their delegates. Of the 126 delegates which will be chosen by Louisiana, California, Oregon, Georgia, Montana, Washington, Michigan, Idaho, Texas and Alaska the coming week, Secretary Taft will receive all.

There will be contests in Louisiana, Georgia and Texas. Only the Georgia contest will be serious. But eliminating all the contests, Secretary Taft will have at the close of the week more positively committed delegates by twenty-five than are necessary to nominate him for President. Frank A. Hitchcock, campaign manager for Taft, after canvassing the returns received to-day, said to the correspondent of The Star:

A CLEAR MAJORITY THIS WEEK.

"The close of next week will give Secretary Taft a clear majority of delegates who either have been instructed for him or are pledged to him by resolutions of the conventions which elected them or are committed by their written declarations. Secretary Taft will have not less than fifty votes to spare, without touching any of the delegates not committed to him.

It is altogether probable that a majority of the eighty delegates now being contested who are given seats in the convention will be for Secretary Taft. Of the 114 uninstructed delegates, a small per cent unquestionably will support Taft. The estimates of Mr. Hitchcock, whose conservatism is most pronounced, does not take into account any of the uninstructed delegates who have not committed themselves by letter and none of the contested delegations, except such as have Taft delegates on either side.

ON THE FIRST BALLOT, 600.

It is conservative, therefore, to estimate Secretary Taft's first ballot vote at approximately 600. It is not probable that a serious effort will be made to defeat Taft after the delegates have been elected. In their personal conversations many of the supporters of the "allies" admit the presidential contest is ended. Pressure is being brought to bear in the interest of party harmony to close up the lines and get the party in shape for the November election.

The surprising result in Kentucky showed the utter futility of further efforts to defeat Taft's nomination. Kentucky had been counted upon with confidence by the "allies," but when the supporters of the Secretary of War defeated Senator-elect Bradley as a delegate even those among the "allies" who had been hopeful up to this week recognized that further efforts in the remaining states were useless.

Of the 124 delegates elected this week, seventy-two were instructed for Taft and two for Foraker, the others being uninstructed. Among the uninstructed are delegates from two New York districts, as well as the New Jersey and Utah delegations, the latter adopting preference resolutions for Roosevelt and Taft. Kentucky spoke decisively in Secretary Taft's favor, twenty-four of the state's twenty-six delegates being instructed for him.

CONNECTICUT AND WYOMING IN LINE.

Connecticut and Wyoming also fell in line for Secretary Taft, as well as scattering districts in North Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Michigan, Tennessee, Louisiana, South Carolina, Missouri and Arkansas.

A DESERTION FROM KNOX RANKS.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Senator Knox will not receive the solid vote of Pennsylvania for the presidential nomination. Louis Emery, jr., has written a letter declaring his intention to vote for Secretary Taft at Chicago and the Knox lieutenants, in consequence, are white with rage.

A statement was issued to-night by Congressman Burke denouncing Emery as a Democrat and denying his right to sit in the convention as a delegate. Emery was nominated by the anti-machine, Lincoln Republicans for governor and was indorsed by the Democrats. He has always professed to be a Republican.

The defection in Pennsylvania makes it certain that Secretary Taft will receive votes in every delegation from a favorite son state with the possible exception of Indiana. In that state several delegates have hesitated to say that Taft was their first choice.

FOUR FOR TAFT IN LOUISIANA.

Two Districts Instruct or Express Preference for the Secretary.

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.—At the convention of the First district Republicans of Louisiana to-day W. J. Brophy, white, and Felix Berbel, negro, were elected delegates to Chicago and instructed for Taft.

MORGAN CITY, LA., May 9.—The Third district Republican convention elected delegates for the Chicago convention today. They are Jules Codchaux and A. M. Dupont.

Although the delegates were not instructed, resolutions were adopted favoring the candidacy of Secretary Taft.

Two in Georgia Favor Taft.

CARTERSVILLE, GA., May 9.—The Republicans of the Seventh congressional district elected delegates to-day to the national convention. The delegates were not instructed, but are favorable to Secretary Taft for President. Resolutions indorsing the administration of President Roosevelt were adopted.

DR. WEEKS TO ILLINOIS.

The Romance Language Professor Will Leave the University of Missouri.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 9.—Dr. Raymond Weeks, who has been head of the department of the romance languages in the University of Missouri since 1895, has accepted a call to the University of Illinois at a salary of $3,500 a year. He will become head of the department of romance and Germanic languages. Dr. Weeks was graduated from Harvard in 1890, and, seven years later, received his doctor's degree from the same institution. He is an authority on philology.

AN OVERFLOW FOLK CROWD

Montgomery's Courthouse Would Not Hold the Audience.

MONTGOMERY, Mo., May 9.—The courtroom of the Montgomery county courthouse was inadequate to accommodate the crowd that gathered to hear Governor Folk, who for two hours this afternoon reviewed his record in Jefferson City and spoke in suport of his candidacy for Senator Stone's seat in the United States Senate.

When the governor arrived at the courthouse square here every seat in the courtroom was occupied, many persons were gathered on the lawn in front of the building and others followed in the executive's wake. Urged by the local reception committee, Mr. Folk acceeded to the request to speak in the open, and the throng quickly assembled on the lawn.

Folk was met at the depot by a band and a crowd. Among those who greeted him was Don M. Byron, 80 years old, a resident of Montgomery City for fifty-six years and a Democrat since the war.

Prosecuting Attorney Rosenberger, who, it is said, will be Democratic nominee in Montgomery county for state representative, presided at the meeting on the courthouse lawn. Folk and Rosenberger were the only two Democrats who carried this county four years ago. Governor Folk said in part:

"Is it better for an official to serve the lawless elements than to serve the people? I do not believe so. The lawless saloon keepers of the cities are fighting, not for existence, but for the privilege of lawlessness. I say frankly that I prefer to be defeated by their opposition than to be elected with their support."

The governor indorsed the Montgomery county tariff platform, adopted by the convention last Monday, and in the course of his speech attacked international marriages between rich American girls and titled foreigners.

ART INSTITUTE'S OFFICERS.

The Fine Arts institute enters its second year of existence with several new officers and trustees. The annual election resulted as follows: J. C. Ford, president; George B. Penny, secretary; John F. Downing, treasurer; trustees, H. C. Flower, C. T. McCoun, C. C. Ripley, W. M. Reid, L. B. Tiffany, Thomas Wight, Robert M. Snyder, jr., Howard E. Huselton and W. R. Clark. The trustees, at a special meeting, named the following to be members of an executive committee: Thomas Wight, Howard E. Huselton, W. R. Clark, R. M. Snyder, jr., and C. C. Ripley. The executive committee was instructed to formulate at once an aggressive policy for the upbuilding of the institute. The urgent needs now are more members and a home for the institute, the latter sufficiently large to accommodate a museum of art and the institute schools, which have had more than 150 pupils in the season just ending.

A PLEA FOR A PLAYGROUND.

The Tenement Board Urges the Mayor and Council to Act.

A special plea for a North end playground is to be made to the mayor and council by the tenement commission. It is in the form of a memorial adopted at the meeting of the commission yesterday afternoon.

"The matter has not heretofore been formally brought before the new council," J. V. C. Karnes said. "We hope now that an agreement can be reached between the council and the park board on a site."

By the terms of the ordinance under which we hold office it is provided that from time to time we should make to the mayor and common council such recommendations affecting the tenement conditions of the city as we might deem wise. Acting on this, we have been laboring for more than a year past to have some breathing place provided in the North end of the city for the benefit of that congested district, but so far nothing substantial has been accomplished.

We have hoped that with a new administration the friction heretofore existing between the park board and the council might be removed. There is such an urgent need for early action that we would beg to call your special attention to this mater. While large expenditures have been made, and are now being made, for these more favored districts, there are 20,000 people west of Lydia avenue and north of Seventh street that have been greatly neglected. Most of these people are poor, but that is the sum of their offending. They constitute a part of the electorate of the city, and every humane citizen should be interested in their comfort and welfare.

If suitable ground could be secured money lies waiting to equip it. In our endeavors to bring to these tenement homes some measure of better living we have been brought face to face with the importance of providing baths and playgrounds, and we would most earnestly ask that another summer be not allowed to pass in unseemly wrangling and contention. We make no suggestions as to a location, but only ask that a long step forward be taken.

WAS A GOOD BRYAN WEEK

THERE ARE NOW 295 DELEGATES COMMITTED TO THE NEBRASKAN.

Johnson Won in Minnesota, but This Was More Than Counterbalanced by Results in South Carolina and Other States.

Instructed for Bryan	288
Preference expressed for Bryan	7
Total committed to Bryan	295
Instructed for Johnson	22
Instructed for Gray	6
Not committed by conventions	164
Total delegates elected	487
Total delegates in convention	1,006
Necessary to choice (two-thirds)	672

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Approximately one-half the delegates to the Democratic national convention now have been chosen. It was Bryan's week. Ohio's forty-six delegates were instructed for him, and so were the delegates-at-large in Massachusetts. He swept the Texas and South Carolina primaries, making it certain that both states will instruct for him at their approaching conventions.

Of delegates actually chosen Bryan still lacks a two-thirds majority. If Texas and South Carolina are committed he will still lack a few votes of two-thirds the total number of delegates elected.

The names of all the candidates for the Demovratic nomination who have been seriously considered now appear in the table with instructed delegates. The effort of Bryan and his friends to defeat Johnson in Minnesota was a miserable fiasco.

Bryan's supporters here had been led to believe that there was more than an equal chance to eliminate Johnson by carrying Minnesota. The victory for Bryan in South Carolina, however, more than counterbalances the victory for Johnson in Minnesota. The South Carolina state committee had refused to indorse Bryan's candidacy, and a determined effort was made to prevent instructions for him.

A similar condition prevails in North Carolina, where the state committee has declared for an uninstructed delegation. Bryan's friends will endeavor to carry that state also. If they do the backbone of the opposition to Bryan will have been broken.

IT WAS EASY FOR JOHNSON.

The Governor Won in Nearly Every Minnesota County.

ST. PAUL, May 9.—With the exception of Cottonwood county, which held its convention some days ago and indorsed Bryan, every county in this state held Democratic conventions to-day to select delegates to the state convention. In the majority the delegates were instructed for Governor Johnson.

In Minneapolis county the Bryan men bolted the Johnson convention and held a meeting of their own. In the Minneapolis convention there were about two Johnson men to one Bryan man and seeing themselves outnumbered on a resolution to indorse Bryan as Minnesota's choice, the Bryan men bolted.

In Polk county the Bryan men made a hard fight for their man but were outnumbered by the Johnson forces, who named the delegates. Reports from nearly all counties of the state show that the Johnson men have won a complete victory under the regular call and will send twenty-two delegates to the Denver convention.

WHERE DINING COMES HIGH.

A New York Club Has Quarters Twenty-Five Floors Up.

NEW YORK, May 9.—With a membership of 500, the City Lunch club, on the twenty-fifth floor of the City Investing building, Broadway and Cortlandt street, was opened this week. Connected with the club are some of the most widely known men of New York, and more than 250 of them, many accompanied by women, participated in the club's first lunch.

Besides a spacious dining room, a lounging room, a women's dining room and five private dining rooms on the twenty-fifth floor, the club uses a part of the twenty-sixth floor for kitchen and storerooms.

From the windows of north side rooms the East and Hudson rivers can be seen. From the east windows there is a splendid view of Long island and the sea, and from the rooms on the south side it is possible to see Sandy Hook on a clear day.

Everything in the club is simply arranged. There are no elaborate decorations anywhere. Instead there are comfortable leather covered chairs, high walls, splendidly ventilated rooms and windows arranged so that the club will be the coolest place in New York in the hot season. Charles Huerstel is manager.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 9.—Justice Morschauser refused to-day to sign an order directing Dr. Amos T. Baker, acting superintendent of the Matteawan asylum, to turn over to A. Russell Peabody, as next friend and personal attorney of Harry K. Thaw, all the personal property taken from Thaw when he was received at Matteawan February 1 and since then in the possession of Mr. Baker.

THE BEDROOM OCCUPIED BY HARRY THAW IN THE DUCHESS COUNTY JAIL. THERE ARE TWO OTHER ROOMS, A PARLOR AND A BATH. HE IS NOT SUBJECTED TO THE RESTRICTIONS PUT ON HIM IN MATTEAWAN AND HAS ALL THE LUXURIES WEALTH CAN BUY.

The judge amended the order as submitted by Mr. Peabody to apply only to Thaw's wearing apparel. Before doing so, the judge sent for District Attorney Mack and informed him in open court of Mr. Peabody's request, which was accompanied by an affidavit that $734.82 in money, one gold watch, chain, seal and one pair of scissors and wearing apparel are in the custody of Dr. Baker.

The district attorney was opposed to Thaw having anything except his wearing aparel. He contended that he is still nominally an inmate of the Matteawan institution, although brought here in the custody of the court while the habeas corpus proceedings are pending.

Twenty-five men, representing business and the professions, ministers and laboring men, all of whom understand the workings of the new plan, will speak at these meetings. The places of meeting have been so planned that every man and woman voter in the city may, with little trouble, attend one of the meetings and become acquainted with the plan of government for which they are asked to vote at the special election June 2. Many of the meeting places are to be in churches. The pastors of these churches have expressed themselves as favoring the new plan and have voluntarily offered the use of the buildings in the campaign.

Many ministers will speak in the campaign in favor of the adoption of the new plan. The Rev. S. W. Nay of the Central Christian church will speak at some of the noonday meetings. Some of them will refer to the commission plan in a favorable way in their sermons to-day. The Rev. J. A. Seibert of the First Congregational church said he would speak at length in favor of the new plan at both the morning and the night services.

The Funeral of G. W. Anthony.

The funeral of George W. Anthony, 79 years old, who died Friday night, will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the home of the family, 717 Bennington avenue. His wife and six children survive. Burial will be in Mount Washington cemetery.

Morphine Sleep
CURED OF THE DRUG HABIT AT HOME.
Six months ago I was taking 25 grs. of morphine per day. I was despondent and out of heart. I could see nothing ahead of me. I had a poor appetite and my sleep was continually disturbed by frightful dreams. After beginning your treatment I did not lose any more sleep and enjoyed a splendid appetite. I finished taking the treatment about the middle of December, 1907, and have improved in health ever since. I only regret that I did not know of your treatment many years ago, for life is worth living now. Each day of natural existence is worth more to me now than ten years of the kind of life I was living when I was using the drug. Anyone who is using drugs of any kind and will make up their mind they want to quit, will find it an easy thing to do without pain or inconvenience with a course of the James Home Remedies. I do all my own housework, washing and ironing, and cook for a family of four, and did this while I was taking the treatment. Thanking you for your courteous letters all through my treatment, I remain, yours very truly,

CONTINUOUS Advertising is what makes your name familiar and identifies it with your business. Continuous—never turning your back to give the other fellow a chance when you're not looking. Take an advertisement like this:
BURKE'S BEDSPRINGS
Like Truth Will Rise Again.
Buoyant, Durable, Inexpensive.
Inserted in The Star, every morning, every evening and every Sunday for one year, that announcement would appear more than Ninety Million Times
Your monthly bill would be $47.05 and everybody in town would think of "Burke's" every time they thought of bedsprings. But if you advertise only occasionally, or only evenings, or mornings or Sundays, somebody else may share in the benefit of your expenditure by chancing to be in when you are out. The householder whom you have been exhorting, once a day or once a week for months, and who at last needs bedsprings, may find instead of your announcement, one like this:
MURPHY'S MATTRESSES
Easy as a Clear Conscience.
Elastic, Indestructible, Cheap.
And Murphy might reap where Burke had sown. The thing is, to keep your lamp trimmed and burning. Every morning, every evening, every Sunday.
To extend the publicity field to cover the whole of Kansas City's commercial territory it is necessary only to add The Weekly Star. Morning, Evening, Sunday and Weekly, the little advertisement in one year would in all, be published
One Hundred and Ten Million Times

Miss May McDonald is planning a year of study abroad, and in aid of her ambition friends will give her a benefit concert in the Casino the evening of Thursday, June 4. Among the assisting musicians will be Miss Rhetia Hesselberg, violinist, a pupil of the late Joseph Joachim and recently soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. The testimonial for Miss McDonald will be under the direction of Carl Busch.

Francois Boucher will celebrate the fortieth year of his career as a violinist by a recital next Thursday evening in the auditorium of the Conservatory of Music, corner of Eleventh and Oak streets. Miss Cecile Boucher, soprano, will be the assisting soloist and Mrs. Boucher and Mrs. Jennie Schultz the accompanists. Mr. Boucher will open his programme with a rare old work, Chabran's sonata No. 5, written in 1742. This will be followed by Paganini's concerto in D, with the Berserkirsky cadenza. A group of lesser numbers by Hubay, Wilhelmji and Saint-Saens will precede Ernst's celebrated "Othello" fantasie.

The opera "The Mandarin"—Chinese in setting and name, if not in music—will be sung by talented amateurs early in June, under the direction of Gwilym Thomas of the Central High school. Mr. Thomas has presented this opera with success in several cities. Rehearsals will begin to-morrow night in the guildroom of Grace Episcopal church, Thirteenth street, between Broadway and Washington. Good singers eager for a little experience in opera are invited to assist in the production of "The Mandarin."

The Chaminade quartet, composed of Miss Dorothy Lyle, Miss Edna Forsythe, Miss Mattie Lou Catron and Miss Jessie Palmer, and a chorus of twenty-one young women, under the direction of Glenn Woods, will lend an unusual element of variety to the recital to be given by Miss Sarah Ellen Barnes in the Academy of Music the evening of May 19. Patronesses for the concert will be Mrs. W. T. Johnson, Mrs. Carl Busch, Mrs. W. B. Nickels, Mrs. H. C. Flower, Mrs. W. F. Patton, Mrs. L. C. Firey and Mrs. W. L. Bell. The recital will be Miss Barnes's first public appearance as a solo pianist.

Miss Pearl Collins will leave to-morrow for Hutchinson, Kas., where she will sing as soprano soloist in Hutchinson's music festival.

After six years of study in her school, Miss Standeford will present Miss Pluma Mapes in a piano recital for graduation in Unity hall, 913 Tracy avenue, next Friday evening. Miss Irene Page, soprano, and Miss Maurine Dyer, contralto, pupils of Mr. W. G. Hawes, will assist. Miss Mapes will play Beethoven's sonata pathetique, opus 13, two numbers by Bach, Schutt's "A la Bein Aimee," Godard's "En Courant," the Schubert-Liszt "Soiree de Vienne," nd the Weber concerto in C major, a worthy programme. In September Miss Mapes will go to Boston for study in the New England Conservatory of Music.

Piano pupils of Mrs. Hans Busch, assisted by Miss Florence Pague, soprano; Miss Marjory Spencer, violinist, and Miss Ernestine Bainbridge, reader, will give a concert at the Casino next Saturday afternoon. The following pupils will participate: Miss Bainbridge, Miss Helen Clark, Miss Margaret Dugan, Miss Helen Ferguson, Miss Louise Henley, Miss Margaret Ingraham, Miss Amy Le Gras, Miss Glenne McCullough, Miss Gail McCullough, Miss Florence Medes, Miss Melba Medes, Miss Florence Mitchell, Miss Mabel Moore, Miss Annie Knorpp, Miss Helen Parker, Miss Ellen Rule, Miss Margaret Somerville, Miss Mildred Spencer, Miss Lillian Wherrett and Miss Ethel Wilson.

Among those who will take part in the recital to be given in the Conservatory auditorium next Friday evening are Miss Pearl McDougall, Miss Elva Fuller, Mrs. McHarry and Miss E. Geneve Lichtenwalter, pianist. Miss Anna McOwen and two of Mrs. Jennie Schultz's pupils will furnish the vocal numbers and Miss Leota McFarlin will recite. Tickets for this recital may be had at the office of the conservatory, free of charge.

Negotiations are under way toward bringing to Kansas City, May 27, David Bispham, the eminent baritone. Mr. Bispham is one of the first of living singers of ballads and the classics, as well as of great baritone roles in grand opera. His fame is of two hemispheres. Lawrence, Kas., heard him in recital last Friday. Mr. Bispham never has sung in Kansas City.

Mrs. Leslie E. Baird, contralto, and Joseph H. Farrell, baritone, both of this city, will sing for a music festival to be opened Tuesday in Atchison, Kas.

Pupils of Mrs. Zuleme Childs Byrd, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Edwards and Miss Myrtle Smith, sopranos, will give a musicale Saturday afternoon in the home of Miss Grace Kelly, 514 Prospect avenue.

Earle A. Browne announces a recital for Friday evening in the Benton Boulevard Baptist church, corner of Twenty-fifth street and Benton boulevard. Miss Anna Brennan, Mrs. Louis Grantz, Miss Alta Farrell, Miss Vera Mayes, Miss Etta Clark and H. M. Jacobs will contribute toward the programme.

The Busch Pianists' club will give a studio musicale next Saturday.

The Kansas City Conservatory of Music and Art announces a recital by Theodore A. Nettleton, elocutionist, Thursday evening, May 21, in the Conservatory auditorium, corner of Eleventh and Oak streets. Miss Nettleton will have the assistance of Miss Allee Barbee, soprano; Miss E. Genevieve Lichtenwalter, pianist; Fred B. Rose, tenor and Dale Hartmann, violinist.

An event of importance in Mound City, Kas., last week was a recital by Miss Emma Williams of the Busch Pianists' club of this city. Among other compositions, Miss Williams played Mozart's fantasie in C minor, Chopin's nocturnes in C minor and G major, an impromptu by the same composer and these works by MacDowell—"To a Water Lily," "To a Wild Rose" and a concert etude.

Miss Minnie Merine's organ recital in the new Grace Presbyterian church was well attended. Encore followed encore; in fact this modest player has seldom been so generously favored by an audience. Mrs. George P. Snyder, soprano, and Miss Ella Chase Perry, reader, also shared in the applause and encores.

Insomnia and Nervousness

IT COSTS YOU NOTHING

Chas. B. James, the eminent scientist, whose reputation is international, has made a wonderful discovery. Words cannot describe the happiness it will bring to those unfortunates who, during the night, toss, twist and turn in their beds, and have restless, sleepless nights, for insomnia is sapping them of their vitality and wrecking their nervous system, for even if they doze off, it is only for a short period of restless sleep, and then they arise in the morning more worn than when they retired, until at last the bed seems to them a hideous place of torture.

This scientific discovery costs you nothing, and it changes restless nights into restful, health-giving slumber. Through scientific researches James has perfected a harmless compound of celery, hops and lettuce which brings about the desired results, for they are scientifically blended —no narcotics—therefore create no habit, and are absolutely harmless. The after effects, instead of being harmful, are beneficial to the entire system; for it produces energy, vigor and force. While it calms, it also tones the nervous system, and it is surprising how quickly it produces restful, soothing, refreshing slumber.

James, in his generosity and wish to place this wonderful compound of his in the hands of all suffering from insomnia and nervousness, will immediately, upon your request, send you, postpaid, a supply absolutely free. James stands at the head of the James Sanatorium, the greatest Sanatorium of its kind in the world, and his reputation for the curing of the Drug and Drink habit is second to none. He thinks so highly of this particular discovery of his that he has given it his own name, calling it "JAMES MIXTURE FOR NERVOUSNESS AND INSOMNIA," and those who know the high standing of Chas. B. James, and the pride he takes in his scientific discoveries, know that any remedy that he stands sponsor for and permits to bear his name must be all it claims.

In his Sanatorium, James discovered that thousands of cases of drunkenness and the drug habit owed their origin to insomnia, and also confirmed the well known theory that nervousness causes sleeplesseness, indigestion, constipation, headaches, stomach troubles, and loss of appetite. He hopes, through this compound, to keep thousands from the drug and drink habit who otherwise would become addicts, besides effectively dispelling nervousness and insomnia, for many who otherwise would not only have a wrecked constitution, but a shattered mind as well.

You need not suffer another day—no further need to be nervous, and no cause to have nights of terrible torture and days of nervousness, and what is termed as the "blues." For relief is in sight. All that is necessary is to send your name and address in confidence to Chas. B. James Sanatorium, 236 Missouri Trust building, St. Louis, Mo., and you will receive, without cost or delay, this wonderful compound.

N. B.—If you are addicted to the excessive use of whisky, morphine, tobacco, cigarettes or other nerve-destroying addictions, say so in your letter in order that he may be thoroughly posted as to the requirements of your case.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. P. M. Derry, chief Victory Court No. 74, Tribe of Ben Hur, Kansas City, Mo.: Sir and Friend—It gives me great pleasure to take this method of expressing my profound gratitude and appreciation for your very prompt and exceedingly kind manner in disposing of my claim against the Tribe of Ben Hur. My husband, the late Dr. J. C. Ball, died on February 28 and I received a draft for the full amount of his policy on March 10, just eleven days after his death. This was the only insurance that Dr. Ball carried and the policy had only been issued to him about a month. He came to his death suddenly, the result of a careless motorman and a street car accident, and it is impossible for me to tell you what extent your assistance has softened and ameliorated the cruel asperities of the situation. Yours deeply grateful, Mrs. Nannie E. Ball, 5622 Scarritt ave.

We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to our kind friends and neighbors for their sympathy and kindness in our sad bereavement in the loss of our beloved mother; also to Acme Court of Honor, Golden Rod grove, Woodmen circle and other kind friends for the beautiful flowers. —Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Beebe and family, F. G. Robinson and family.

Mrs. C. J. McGrew and children desire to extend their heartfelt thanks to the kind friends in their sad bereavement, in the death of their dear husband and father, J. L. McGrew, and for their floral offerings; also to express thanks to Rev. Dr. Little for his kind words and for the singers at the services.

Mrs. Dora Jeardoe and relatives extend grateful thanks to the many friends who so kindly demonstrated their sympathies during the illness and death of her son, Harry L. Jeardoe. They feel especially thankful to Rev. Dr. Neel for his kind words of encouragement.

We most sincerely thank our friends and neighbors for their aid and sympathy since the death of our daughter.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sherman Jones.

CLAIRVOYANTS.

Advertisements under this heading, morning and evening, 6c a word; Sunday, 4c a word. All advertisements payable in advance and none accepted for less than 80c for the daily or 50c for the Sunday.

PROF. BURNETT,
He is different from all others; one word with him will convince you immediately that he is the leader of his profession. There is no heart so sad or home so dreary that he cannot bring happiness and sunshine into them. Every profession in the world has impostors and black sheep, and our profession is no exception. If you have already thrown away your money by consulting others, then consult this great English clairvoyant, Prof. Burnett. He will tell your name, age and occupation; if your wife, husband or sweetheart is true or false. His powers are so great that he can bring together the sweethearts, husbands or wives who have been estranged by slandering enemies. He removes all evil influences. He takes no fee in advance. Causes a speedy and happy marriage with the one of your choice. If you are in trouble from any cause his help is priceless. He stands alone in his magnificent power of reading the future of human kind. Thousands visited this man of strange powers, thousands were benefited by his infallible aid and advice. Prof. Burnett is identified in all large cities in the new world as well as the old. He does not wish to be placed on the plane with the common fortune teller. He comes of a race of people who have been psychics and astrologists for hundreds of years. At the moment he meets you he is in psychological touch with you and your life to him is like an open book. Before you utter a single word he tells you your name and all concerning your life from the cradle to the grave, and points out clearly the many obstacles that may be in the way of your future success and happiness. Readings low fee. Can be seen at his home, 1003 East 14th st. Take Troost car.

Estranged lovers reunited, even though they be at the farthest ends of the earth from each other. Many husbands and wives who had been separated have been brought together by Madam Geyser, and are now living in happiness and prosperity to call down blessings upon her head.

Wise men and women seek her counsel in all matters of business, speculation, law suits and love affairs. Her knowledge is unerring; her advice in the matter of investments is golden, and many wealthy men and women owe their success to her.

Stevens-Duryea
Used Cars

A SECOND HAND 4-CYLINDER STEVENS-Duryea, thoroughly overhauled in our shop, is a much better purchase than any new car selling under $2,000. It is high grade, hence will outwear cheap cars two to one; it is light weight, insures low tire expense and mechanical repairs; it is patented unit construction and 3-point support, makes a car capable of negotiating the roughest roads and yet retaining a perfect alignment of bearings.

Every purchaser of a used Stevens-Duryea last year is more than satisfied. Ask for names.

We have these cars, turned in by customers who have bought larger cars from us, from $1,350 to $1,800, usually equipped with top and five lamps. Write or call.

You don't believe this. It is certain truth. You can get $35,000 for $20,000 if you will buy the handsome residence to which I ask attention. Lots 100x200 Feet

Graded Streets, City Water, Oiled Macadam Pavement, Granitoid Walks, Electric Light, Fine, Level, Sightly Lots for $10.00 Per Foot

HALF AN ACRE FOR LESS THAN THE PRICE OF AN ORDINARY CITY LOT

We are now improving the property by grading the streets, putting in city water and putting down a heavy macadam pavement treated with crude oil in the same manner as the Boulevards are finished, with granitoid walks. The addition will also be provided with electric light service.

This property is high and sightly, commanding a fine view of the city to the north and Independence to the northeast.

The neighborhood is extremely desirable and a building restriction of $2,500 per house will be imposed to maintain an attractive neighborhood.

It is within four blocks of the Drakemore school which grades its pupils into the city high schools; it is only four blocks from postoffice and good stores.

We have been in the land platting business in this city for over 20 years, and have in that time platted into home sites approximately 2,000 acres. We have never yet put on a subdivision that has not proved a money maker for our clients.

We believe in doing business on a close margin and a quick return—and that is our policy in this instance.

We Will Start these Lots To-Day at

$10.00 to $15.00 Per Foot

with GRADING, PAVING, SIDEWALKS, CITY WATER and ELECTRIC LIGHT paid for

Take the Marlborough car, get off at 65th street station or drive out Troost avenue. Our agents will be on the ground. Come prepared to make your selection.

TO VISIT "CITY PASTURES"

This Famous Texas Ranger, a Terror to "Bad Men," Ready for a Tour That Will Include a Call on President Roosevelt.

Captain "Bill" McDonald, who for more than thirty years hunted criminals and fought "bad men" in Texas and other parts of the Southwest while a leader of the Texas rangers, is soon to carry out his long cherished plan of visiting Northern and Eastern cities. He will start within a few days and will be gone several weeks. One particular object of his trip is to pay his personal respects to President Roosevelt. He has been invited to be the President's guest at the White house.

President Roosevelt first met Captain McDonald when he went to Texas a few years ago to attend the Rough Riders' reunion, which was held at San Antonio. He expressed a desire to make the acquaintance of the captain, and the introduction was performed by Governor Lanham. The President took to the captain at once and when he was getting ready to go on his wolf hunting expedition to Oklahoma he made the request of Governor Lanham that Captain McDonald be detailed to accompany him on that trip. This was done and the captain joined the President when he arrived at Fort Worth.

CAPTAIN "BILL" M'DONALD, A FAMOUS LEADER OF TEXAS RANGERS AND A TAMER OF "BAD MEN."

Captain McDonald remained with the President all through the Oklahoma hunt. The secret service men were left behind, and if any protection was needed while in camp and riding over the range, the captain was there to give it. He had trailed cattle thieves and other outlaws all over the wild region where the hunt took place and knew just where and how to find the wolves which the President was seeking.

"I calculate I'll have a right sprightly time on my trip," the captain said. "I've been rangin' in Texas so long I don't know how it will seem to try them big city pastures. I've been told that some of them New York buildings are so high you've got to look twice before you can see the top of 'em. Say, wouldn't a feller be in a bad fix if a man in the top story of one of them high buildings was to take a crack at you with a 'forty-five' while you was a-walkin' along the street? From what I've been told it would be difficult to make a bullet carry to the mark that high up in the air, but it would be all right for the feller that was shootin' down at you."

Captain McDonald will not take his pistols with him on his trip. If he does they will not be concealed about his person. He had to shed his weapons when he was appointed state revenue agent a little more than a year ago. When the governor told him he could no longer wear arms Captain McDonald came near giving up his commission as state revenue agent. He offered a vigorous objection.

"UNDRESSED" WITHOUT HIS PISTOLS.

"I've carried guns for thirty years," he told the governor, "and I would feel undressed without them."

"It cannot be helped," the governor replied, "you are no longer a peace officer, and it would be a violation of the law for you to go armed."

"But governor," pleaded Captain McDonald, "if I was to take off these guns some little feller would come along and throw me down and take my tobacco away from me."

That was Captain McDonald's way of expressing how powerless he would be without his pistols. He removed the two pistols which he had worn for years, but for several months he wore the leather belt around his waist, to which was attached the empty holsters where his two trusty weapons had so long reposed.

Captain McDonald says that his gunfighting days are over. He never belonged to the class of fighters who killed men without cause or provocation. While he has many notches on his gun they were all placed there in the discharge of his duties as a ranger. He never invited trouble and the men whom he killed were all outlaws and desperadoes. His last fight took place two years ago. Judge Stanley Welch, a prominent jurist of Southwest Texas, was assassinated one night at Rio Grande City, a little town on the lower Mexican border. Captain McDonald was ordered to proceed to the scene of the crime and find the murderers if possible.

An overland trip of twenty-three miles had to be made in order to reach the town. The road ran through a mesquite covered valley. It was past midnight when the start was made on this trip over the lonesome river road. The captain had reached a point about four miles from Rio Grande City when he was fired upon by persons in ambush in the brush on one side of the road. The report of this volley of shots had hardly been heard when the captain was pouring a deadly stream of lead into the spot where he had seen the flashes of the guns. With a pistol in each hand he made straight for the place of ambush, after he had riddled the spot with bullets from his weapons. He found that he had killed four Mexicans and wounded another. Leaving the bodies where they had fallen, Captain McDonald rode into Rio Grande City and notified the local officers. The dead and wounded Mexicans were identified as notorious border outlaws. It is supposed that they had learned of Captain McDonald's coming and fearing that they might be hunted down by him for their misdeeds, had decided to kill him from ambush. All of their shots went wild.

At the time of the prize fight between Fitzsimmons and Maher it was planned to have the battle on the Texas side of the river near El Paso, but the governor would not allow that to be done. In order to see that the law was not violated Captain McDonald was sent to El Paso under orders not to permit the event to take place in Texas.

"I'll put every one of you in jail," the captain told the managers of Fitzsimmons and Maher, when they asked him what he would do if they pulled off the fight on this side of the border.

It was finally decided that it would not do to attempt to carry out the original plans for giving the fight in Texas and that it would be pulled off at a remote point in Mexico, just across the Rio Grande from the station of Langtry, Tex., 400 miles east of El Paso. When Langtry was reached, the crowd crossed over into Mexico and the memorable fight took place. Returning to the American side, several hours had to be spent in waiting for the arrival of the train. The saloon of Justice of the Peace Roy Bean, who styled himself "The Law West of the Pecos," was filled by a rough crowd. A number of gambling games started up and there was a lively time. Captain McDonald was sitting at one of the tables watching a game that was in progress among several men of the West who had wide reputations as "killers." One of the players, however, was a mere youth who had come all the way from New York and was having his first experience in Western ways. One of the bad men became angered at some play the young man had made and began to abuse him. Captain McDonald took his arms off of the table and, looking the "bad man squarely in the eye, said:

A Useful Thing for the Baby.

A box for the baby to play in is easily constructed. It should be eighteen inches deep, just wide enough to go through an open door and a little longer than it is wide. Strong blocks under the corners should hold the casters. Cotton batting should be used to pad the inside all over, and this padding extend all over the edge. This padding must be covered with linen or denim of a color to match which will not soil or stain baby's clothes. Such a box is a great comfort for a 6-months-old baby.

TRIUMPHED OVER BAD LUCK.

From a small structure of a half dozen rooms, a faculty of four instructors, and student body of fifty, to an institution boasting of three large buildings, a faculty of forty-four, and an enrollment of nearly 800, is the achievement of a few years of the youngest state university in the United States, the University of Oklahoma. Preparations are now being made for the tenth annual graduating exercises, and on the morning of June 11 forty-five young men and women, the largest graduating class in the history of the school, will receive their diplomas.

DAVID ROSS BOYD, PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA.

It was in the spring of 1893 that work was begun upon the first building, and the following September the doors were opened to the lanky youths who dropped their plows on the rolling prairies, and the farmer girls who had come with their parents to build a new home in the great Southwest. In 1898 the first graduating class, consisting of two members, received their diplomas. The graduates were Carlton R. Hume, now an attorney of Anadarko, and Roy P. Stoops, later of Chicago university, and now head of the school of medicine at his alma mater. The next June saw a class of three go out into the world with their speakerships.

The success of this young institution of learning is principally due to the never ceasing efforts of David Ross Boyd, the first and only head of the school. When Dr. Boyd dropped from the end of a Santa Fe train in the summer of 1893 he saw a brick building in course of erection on the prairie south of Norman, and not a house in sight for at least a mile in any direction. His work began immediately and the first thing he accomplished was to have the entire campus planted with trees. His efforts were so generously rewarded that now the first thing asked by a sightseer when he visits Norman is about the wonderful grove in the midst of which looms the university buildings.

On the night of January 6, 1903, the students and citizens of Norman were awakened by the cry of fire. The main building was ablaze and in spite of the efforts to extinguish the flames, the structure was entirely destroyed. School was held in down town buildings until new buildings, for which the territorial legislature had appropriated $60,000, were completed. The insurance from the old building was applied on the furnishing of the new and toward replacing the library, which had been completely destroyed with all records of the school. A short time afterwards Andrew Carnegie gave the money for a library and work on it was begun that year.

Again last November misfortune came. Careless workmen ignited the dome of the main hall by upsetting a bucket of boiling lead, and almost before they could reach the outside the entire structure was in flames. At nightfall Administration hall, the pride of all Oklahoma, was a mass of blackened ruins.

The present Oklahoma legislature is considering the establishment of a law school and an appropriation for a building which will cost $250,000 and equal or surpass any college structure in the Southwest.

Dr. Guy P. Benton, president of the Miami university, Ohio, will preach the baccalaureate sermon on June 7, and Judge Charles B. Stewart, an attorney of Muskogee, will deliver the commencement address. The exercises will begin on Saturday, June 6, with a joint meeting of the literary societies. On Sunday morning the baccalaureate sermon will be preached. On Monday will be the senior recital of the school of music, on Tuesday the senior class play, and on Wednesday the annual commencement concert of the school of music. The commencement exercises of Thursday morning will be held in a large tent on the campus. The programme will be closed with a meeting and banquet of the Alumni society.

Walking Hat of Pink Tagal Straw.
